THE RED AND BLUE
(By William J. Goeckel, '96 and Harry E. Westervelt, '98)
Come all ye loyal classmen now, in hall and campus through,
Lift up your hearts and voices for the royal Red and Blue.
Fair Harvard has her crimson, old Yale
her colors too,
But for dear Pennsylvania we wear
the Red and Blue.
Hurrah! Hurrah! Pennsylvania! Hurrah for the Red and the Blue;
Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah!
Hurrah for the Red and the Blue.

RECESSIONAL

Commencement Notes

The commencement ceremony of 1784, of which the exercises today mark the bicentennial, was held by the University of Pennsylvania in the ebullient atmosphere of peace enjoyed by an awakening nation. The Treaty of Paris, secured eight months earlier, had officially ended the long and divisive War of the Revolution.

The exercises of two centuries ago took place in the then steeple-topped College building, walled in a confined courtyard on Fourth Street. The participants marched from the first floor "apparatus chamber" to the great hall on the upper floor in an academic procession which the University has revived in 1984 in, however, the al fresco beauty of a large, open, tree-shaded campus west of the Schuylkill River.

The earlier rite treated commencement guests to a series of student orations which reflected the aspirations but relative insecurity of a fledgling republic. "May we not see," one baccalaureate candidate asked, "our rivers as superior to the babbling brooks of the old continent . . . when neither the Roman Tiber, nor the British Thames, shall surpass the gentle Schuylkill or the majestic Delaware?" General Washington, himself a recent honorary alumnus of the University, was compared to the Roman Cincinnatus by another senior, who naturally concluded that "our citizen's character is, unquestionably, the greatest."

The student degree recipients—eight Bachelors of Arts, three Masters of Arts, eight Bachelors of Medicine—were all men, but, perhaps as a foreshadowing of the struggle for coeducation in the following century, one of the senior orations was "directed against the talent and right of women to take any share in civil government," while another provided a refutation "in favor of the abilities and right of the fair sex to govern."

The highlight of the 1784 commencement was the conferral of an honorary Doctor of Laws degree upon Charles Thomson, former faculty member, Secretary to the Continental Congress (the office he held during the entire existence of that governing body of the young nation) and the man who, as designer of the Great Seal of the United States, made the American eagle the national symbol. Perhaps Thomson, in accepting his honors, compared the soaring bird to the aspirations of the country and to those of a proud and rising university.

Fifty years later the University of Pennsylvania occupied distinguished twin buildings in Ninth Street, one the home of the Department of Arts, the other of the Department of Medicine. The growth of the institution had made it necessary to move public ceremonies to a more commodious venue so the two commencements of 1834 took place in the Musical Fund Hall on Locust Street. The College, then slumbering through a low period in its development, presented at its exercises in July but fourteen Bachelors of Arts (and those all Philadelphians except for one New Yorker) in addition to twenty A.M. and two honorary A.M. candidates. The more vigorous Medical division graduated at its separate ceremony in March a total of 145 seniors, drawn from nearly every state in the union; an additional nine joined the collegiate program in July.

By 1884, Pennsylvania, under the leadership of the dynamic provost, Dr. William Pepper, was an internationally recognized university. Students from Australia, Brazil, Canada, Chile, Cuba, Mexico, and Wales were among the 101 medical graduates, with Brazil, Chile and Nicaragua providing aspiring dentists, at the May commencement held at the Academy of Music.

At a second ceremony held a month later, also at the Academy, students graduated from the College and Law School, from the incipient Wharton and Towne Schools and from the ranks of the Auxiliary Faculty of Medicine. Four women were in that academic procession, all recipients of College certificates in music. The candidates for Bachelor of Finance included Edward Potts Cheyney, future historian of the institution, and Shiro Shiba, who became, with the publication of his major work, Strange Encounters with Elegant Females, a distinguished literary figure in his native Japan. Three professional men received the LL.D. degree, and the program featured the presentation of two faculty portraits.

Yet another half century of progress saw, in 1934, a much wider distribution of honors. The then-customary mid-year convocation, held in Irvine Auditorium, involved 350 candidates for degrees, while 1600 men and women graduated at the principal commencement, in June, in Convention Hall. Now represented were not only the College, the Wharton, Towne, Law, Medical and Dental Schools, but the Schools of Architecture and Education and the Graduate School of Medicine.

Certificates were awarded by the Evening School of Accounts and Finance to graduates who had studied on the main campus and at the Extension Schools in Harrisburg, Reading, Wilkes-Barre and Scranton. Senior women, enrolled in either the College for Women or in the School of Education, now formed a prominent commencement contingent, and noticeable among the Master of Arts candidates were ten habit-clad women religious while another took a Ph.D. degree. Public attention, at that event of fifty years ago, centered on Associate Justice of the Supreme Court Harlan Fiske Stone, one of nine honorary degree recipients.

Academic dress stems from the clerical robes of the Middle Ages, when the hood was worn raised for protection in drafty halls. The American code of academic dress was developed in 1895 by an intercollegiate commission and has been modified over the years, most recently in 1960.

The bachelor's gown is relatively simple and has long sleeves. Master's gowns were formerly distinguished by long, dangling sleeves with a slit at the elbow through which the arm emerged; an opening may now be made at the wrist, and both versions are in general use. The doctoral gown is a more elaborate costume marked by velvet panels down the front and around the neck as well as by three velvet bars on the bell-shaped sleeves. The mortarboard cap has been standard in the United States though soft caps are coming into use; doctors may wear a gold tassel, but all others wear black. Some institutions have in recent years authorized doctors' gowns in colors other than the customary black; holders of the Pennsylvania Ph.D. degree may now wear red and blue gowns.

The hood is lined with silk in the colors of the institution which granted the highest degree held by the wearer, and the color of the bordering velvet indicates the field of study to which the degree pertains. Pennsylvania graduates wear a hood lined in red with a blue chevron. Degrees will be conferred today in: Arts, white; Science, golden yellow; Business Administration, mustard; Education, light blue; Fine Arts, brown; Philosophy, dark blue; Medicine, green; Law, purple; Dental Medicine, lilac; Veterinary Medicine, gray; Social Work, citron.
