

Cold Stone assault suspect arrested

CITY OF GROSSE POINTE — Just shy of two weeks after officers began searching for the identity of a suspect wanted for questioning in an assault, Michigan State Police facial recognition software got a hit on Veda Miller.

The 44-year-old Detroit woman was captured on surveillance video April 27, throwing a 20-pound food scale at a 17-year-old Cold Stone Creamery employee over claims her ice cream hadn't been filled high enough.

Following the facial recognition lead, City of Grosse Pointe detectives conducted a follow-up investigation to confirm the woman's identity before securing a search warrant and effecting an arrest last Tuesday.

"She was cooperative with everything and remorseful," they said.

Miller, a licensed nurse, was arraigned before City of Grosse Pointe Judge Russell Ethridge Wednesday, May 11.

She is charged with allegedly committing an assault with a dangerous weapon. The felony could carry a sentence of up to four years in prison or a $200,000 fine.

She also was charged with malicious destruction of property between $200 and $1,000, which is a misdemeanor punishable by up to one year incarcerated or a $200,000 fine.

Miller's next court date is a probable cause conference before Ethridge at 9:30 a.m. Thursday, May 19. From there, a preliminary examination will be held at 9:30 a.m. Thursday, June 9.

Because she has no criminal history, a strong family presence and is not considered a flight risk by detectives, Miller was released on a $10,000 personal bond.

HONORED:

The designation is meant to honor the service and sacrifice of national law enforcement.

"Whereas, it is important that all citizens know and understand the problems, duties and responsibilities of their Public Safety Department," the Woods proclamation, read May 2 by Mayor Art Bryant, said, "and that members of our Public Safety Department recognize their duty to serve the people by safeguarding life and property, by protecting them against violence and disorder and by protecting the innocent against deception and the weak against oppression and intimidation."

Peace Officers Memorial Day, at the beginning of the week, brings observance to peace officers who have lost their lives or become disabled in duty, "through their courageous deeds," reads the proclamation.

Recognized at the same time, Emergency Medical Services week, established in 1974 by President Gerald Ford, celebrates EMS practitioners and recognizes the crucial role they play in communities' well-being.

Along with EMS and public safety, the Woods designated an additional proclamation to bring attention to its department of public services team, as this week also celebrates National Public Works week. Per the proclamation, the week is to recognize the vital importance of public works employees in creating a "sustainable and resilient community....

"These infrastructure, facilities and services could not be provided without the dedicated efforts of public works professionals," the proclamation, again read by Bryant, said, "who are engineers, managers and employees at all levels of government and the private sector, who are responsible for rebuilding, improving and protecting our nation's transportation, water supply, water treatment and solid waste systems, public buildings and other structures and facilities essential for our citizens.

"... I urge all citizens to join with representatives of the American Public Works Association and government agencies in activities, events and ceremonies designed to pay tribute to our public works professionals, engineers, managers and employees and to recognize the substantial contributions they make to protecting our national health, safety and quality of life," the proclamation concluded.

National Police Week, Emergency Medical Services Week and Public Works Week conclude Saturday, May 21.

experiences."

Sweeney's art comes from a place of introspection, she said.

"No matter how much I try to distance myself from my personal struggles with anxiety and depression, those experiences manifest in my artwork. No matter my inspiration source, those memories constrict and abstract an idea until it becomes a gnarled reflection of myself. It's a reflection I don't always have the strength to recognize."

Sweeney, whose mentor is Macomb Community College instructor Todd Mitchell, said she hadn't planned to enter the "Finer Pointes" contest, but was convinced to submit the piece by a friend.

"Over the years, the support of my friends and mentors have provided me with the courage to dream of a brighter future," she said. "Their influence has allowed me to find slivers of hope amongst the chaos of doubt. I daydreamed about winning but never thought it was something that would come to fruition. ... It was surreal and I'm still in a state of shock."

"If anything, the experience has been reaffirming," she added. "I never thought my work would resonate with anyone outside my inner circle. ... Moreover, I'm proud to have been able to take part in a show featuring so many kind, talented and supportive people."

Wilson awarded second place to Grosse Pointer Callie Lewicki for her oil painting, "Wednesday Night." Lewicki will receive $1,000 for her second-place finish.

"I'm a huge fan of large figurative work that captures a moment," Wilson explained of his selection,

"and this ticked all the boxes and was executed exquisitely. I really felt like I was in the tennis club and was able to imagine what conversations may have been taking place, as well as the feeling the painting captured. It was also technically brilliant."

"I thought about the 'Made in Michigan' theme and immediately knew I had to finish this large-scale work I had started last November," Lewicki said. "The very best part about Michigan is summertime. My husband and I turn down travel plans in the summer, because it is too good here to miss. The reference picture I used for this painting was taken by my husband, Ryan Lewicki, and is an authentic slice of a Michigan summer night playing tennis with friends. I heightened the lighting to emphasize the cool evening shade and that golden peachy evening sun kissing all of the edges."

Officer, nurses revive heart attack victim

By Laurel Kraus
Staff Writer

CITY OF GROSSE POINTE — An officer, two nurses who were in the right place at the right time and a quick-thinking customer came together over the weekend to save the life of a Grosse Pointer who suffered a massive heart attack.

The 75-year-old man was having a meal at Panera Bread on Kercheval at 11:40 a.m. Saturday, May 14, when the heart attack left him without a pulse or breathing.

As 911 was dialed, another patron ran next door to the CVS Minute Clinic, asking if anyone knew CPR and enabling two nurses — Jacqueline Chait and Dominique Delcourt — to rush over and begin resuscitation efforts even before first responders arrived.

"It was divine intervention for sure," Delcourt said. "... I find it amazing that the customer knew to even come over there. I've never heard of it happening before, so it's really great that there's a community resource out there that you wouldn't even think of."

As the first officer on scene, Andrew Prueter assisted with an AED shock and multiple rounds of CPR until the man regained a pulse and MedStar paramedics arrived to transport him to an area hospital.

"One of those nurses spent time on a cardiac floor and when I spoke to her, she said that our officer was working on this guy like he does it every day," Director of Public Safety John Alcorn said.

The man is not yet out of the woods, but is receiving the appropriate care thanks to the life-saving efforts of all involved.

"He's at the hospital now," Alcorn said Monday night, "but two days later he's still OK."

Prueter has been nominated for a department award, while Chait and Delcourt will be considered for civilian awards.

"The other two nurses that were involved, they 100 percent deserve just as much, if not more credit than me," Prueter said. "... Thank God that they were working that day and they were quick to action and showed up and did an awesome job."

Sign of the season

The season's first lemonade stand has officially popped up. Tommy Fannon set up a table for his summer business Saturday, May 14. He planned to save most of his earnings, with the exception of using some of it to buy candy. He found a customer in Alex Shaheen, who stopped to purchase a cup of lemonade during a bike ride. Fannon's father, Dan Fannon, held Shaheen's bike while the transaction was made.

I heightened the lighting to emphasize the cool evening shade and that golden peachy evening sun kissing all of the edges."

Lewicki decided to enter her painting after enjoying being a part of last year's inaugural

"Finer Pointes" contest, in which she was a finalist.

"It is exciting to see how much talent is in our community and get to meet and connect with all of the amazing creatives," she said. "Catherine Sweeney, who won first for her steel sculpture, is teaching me how to make casting molds. As an adult, to find people who are lit by your same fire is so wonderful. I also love having a reason to really hustle and produce quality work with a deadline. It's a thrill."

Lewicki said she also is thrilled about earning a nod from Wilson.

"To get a chance to be recognized and seen for something that I put my whole self into is beyond cool," she said.

In addition to Wilson's selections, Grosse Pointe News readers were asked to vote for their favorite among the 34 finalists' entries. Coming out on top of the Readers' Choice vote is former Grosse Pointer Barbara Greenwood, whose "Houses Within a Grove of Trees" mixed media piece stole the show.

As the Readers' Choice winner, Greenwood will receive $1,000.

"I have taken to using many different types of paper, fabric and objects and sewing them together," Greenwood said of her entry. "Paper allows me to rip, cut and place the various textures and colors side by side. The shapes and textures tell me what to do next. Always wishing to be a quilter and finding fabric difficult to work with, paper gives me a great deal of freedom. As I sew the pieces together I find I am sewing all the pieces of my life together as it becomes one image and for this moment a reflection of my life."

The Traverse City resident grew up in Grosse Pointe and learned a love of art from teachers at Kerby Elementary School and University Liggett School. She went on to teach art in public and private schools for 10 years, before starting a 30-year career as a board-certified art therapist.

"When I saw the amazing art chosen for the Grosse Pointe News show, I knew I was accepted into a very challenging show and had stiff competition," Greenwood said. "It was wonderful to be part of something so competitive again. Having no expectation of winning, I was thrilled to connect with GP after many years of being away as well coming back to GP as an 'artist.'

"It was amazing to have had so many votes from readers who liked my piece," she added. "Though I did not earn first and second prize from the juror, I felt as if I have the 'big winner.'"

The Grosse Pointe News also awarded honorable mention to a handful of artists for their work.

◆ "Shoulder to Shoulder," oil on canvas, by Ian Matchett of Detroit.

◆ "Winged," textile, by Jeanne Bieri of Grosse Pointe.

◆ "Sable Falls Wonder in the U.P.," oil painting, by Forrest Miller of Grand Rapids.

◆ "Rusty Train Afternoon," watercolor painting, by Kevin Clifford of Clarkston.

Overall, Wilson said he was blown away by the quality and variety of all entrants.

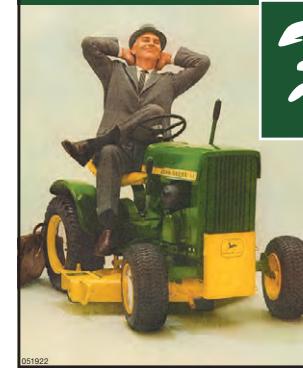

"I really wasn't expecting such a high level of artistry across so many different and some quite unique mediums."

Firefighters get unique training

By Ted O'Neil
Staff Writer

GROSSE POINTE SHORES — As the saying goes, practice makes perfect.

The Grosse Pointe Shores Public Safety Department got a chance to do just that recently, holding training sessions in a vacant house.

"We were able to put in some really valuable time," Lt. Ron Coste, who also serves as deputy fire chief, said. "It's been years since we had that opportunity."

Two sessions were held, May 3 and May 10, at 840 Lakeshore. The new owner of the property plans to tear down the vacant structure and build a house closer to Lake St. Clair.

"This was a prime opportunity to set up some different scenarios and get some good experience," Coste said. "We simulated search and rescue for a victim and a downed firefighter and were able to work on our

The hole in the floor was to simulate ventilating the heated gases, smoke and extreme temperature of a basement fire. The release of those elements allows temperatures to drop and permits entry by suppression crews to put out a fire.

hose and water placement."

Coste noted that Macomb and Oakland community colleges have fire and police training facilities, but having this opportunity so close to home was better.

"With those places, you have to look at the scheduling and the logistics, so it's not very cost effective," he said.

Firefighters used a large smoke machine to simulate an active fire as members of the department practiced navigating the different levels of the house both with and without a thermal imaging camera. They also were able to practice escaping from a room, which entails breaking through a wall and squeezing between two studs while slipping their air tank harness off one shoulder.

"This place was built in 1900, so a fire would travel right up the walls uninhibited because there aren't any fire stops built in like with newer construction," Coste said.

Firefighters also cut a

2-by-3-foot hole in the floor to practice dealing with a basement fire.

"In cases where you can't get down the stairs, you have to open up the floor to release the gasses and heat," Coste explained. "Then you open up a window and put in a fan blade to act like an exhaust."

A tool called a cellar nozzle then is attached to the end of a hose and inserted in the hole.

"It has a 90-degree bend and basically spins like a shower head to distribute the water," he added.

Coste said he hopes the department has more opportunities like this in the future.

"We learned a lot and are better off for it," he said. "Virtual training just isn't the same."

The last evolution of the day was to train members on the use of the fire truck pump that provides water to hoses or appliances. It also trained members on setting the proper water pressures.

TROLLEY:

filled the gaps. Everyone should be happy.

"I love watching it go up and down. I love seeing it full."

"When we can bring joy to the faces of our residents while also transporting them to our businesses to enable them to thrive, we've got a winner," Park Mayor Michele Hodges said.

"It's a testimony to the beauty of public-private partnerships. When we work in partnership with each other, we get results."

Ridership averages more than 15,000 per season, according to organizers.

"On a typical Friday night, there are 300 to 400 passengers," said Dale Krajniak, retired Park city manager. "On Saturdays during summer, it goes to 500 to 600."

"Everybody likes the trolley," Crane said.

The trolley is owned privately but leased and operated by the Grosse Pointe Park Business Association.

"It helps residents see what we have to offer," said Joe Hebeka, association president. "It makes things a lot more accessible."

"It began because of a parking shortage in the Park," Krajniak said. "Then it was a matter of bringing the three business districts together."

It requires only a little imagination to compare the trolley's design to the single-ended cable cars of San Francisco. Arched windows, clerestory roof, mahogany interior, bench seats and brass handrails evoke the nostalgia of earlier times.

Farms Manager Shane Reeside and his wife are riders.

"We've taken the trolley to dinner," he said. "We're happy to see it come back into service. It benefits all of the Pointes and our residents. And it's a lot of fun. It helps encourage people to dine and shop locally, which is important, particularly after these businesses were hard hit during the pandemic."

City of Grosse Pointe officials said they are eager to see the trolley return for the benefit of all residents. Working with the City of Grosse Pointe Foundation, they found a solution.

Claire, he negotiated the sale and development of a $100 million automotive supply factory and a $3 million performing arts theater. He also obtained over $2 million in grants for various projects, including a mile-long bike path."

"One of the things that attracted me to the assistant manager position was the ability to serve as TIFA director and the impact it can have, not just for our business community but for the residential community as well," Rothe said. "I'm excited to deploy our resources and devote a lot of my time and attention to,

not just think of one year, but think multiple years down the road and shepherd our resources well."

In Lakeview, Rothe directed the Downtown Development Authority.

"(He) administered a business improvement program and oversaw strategic planning issues," Sizeland said. "In St. Clair, responsibilities included oversight of a water filtration and wastewater treatment plant, a municipal harbor and a golf course."

The authority was established in 1986. Its district is bordered by Mack Avenue, Wayburn, almost to East Jefferson and to the alley at Nottingham.

out how we can work smarter not harder to accomplish all the things we need to."

Under her leadership, the Farms continued its long-standing tradition of receiving annual awards from the Government Finance Officers Association. For 28 consecutive years, the city has earned the certificate of achievement for excellence in financial reporting and for 10 consecutive years, it's received the award for outstanding achievement in popular annual financial reporting.

In 2019, Peck Lichtenberg was selected to participate in the Michigan Municipal League's Women in Municipal Leadership Program, which focuses on the underrepresentation of women in the higher levels of municipal leadership and provides specialized training to help women advance in the field.

"She's really advanced the city in so many areas, particularly in the area of technology and creating a virtual city hall through the pandemic, and she's really been an inspiration in a lot of ways, I think, to all of us," City Manager Shane Reeside said during a city council discussion. "... I just want to publicly thank you, Debbie, for your service to the city. It is greatly appreciated. The city will miss you. I will miss you, but we sincerely wish you all the best in your future endeavors."

Citing a quality of life factor in decreasing the commute from her family home by 24 miles and an interest in new, creative opportunities in strategic planning and forecasting in a community where there is significantly more growth and development, the finance director said she's not viewing the switch as leaving the Farms, but rather going to Royal Oak.

"I'm very grateful for the time that I've had at the Farms," Peck Lichtenberg said, "and I just think that it is a wonderful community and I feel very blessed to have been able to spend this part of my career there."

Noting the importance of not leaving the position vacant long, city council authorized Reeside to proceed with an appointment of the next finance director subject to approval of the personnel committee during the council meeting Monday, May 9.

4th generation diplomat continues family legacy

By Laurel Kraus
Staff Writer

Allegra Baistrocchi was so interested in the prospect of living in Grosse Pointe that she reached out to the owners of 95 homes for sale last year, hoping one of them would be willing to rent to her, as her job legally does not allow her to purchase a home.

The Grosse Pointe Farms resident — who achieved all her Grosse Pointe dreams aside from the white picket fence — is a fourth-generation diplomat and the Italian consul covering Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee.

While embassies are placed in capital cities, consulates are placed for political, economic or cultural reasons or in areas of heavy immigration, as is the case locally.

In the greater Detroit area, there are 500,000 Americans of Italian descent.

There has been a consulate antenna in Detroit since 1899, and a full consulate since 1946, following World War II.

"It was my first choice," Baistrocchi said of her posting. "I chose Detroit. I could have gone anywhere in the world. ... She's a sleeping beauty, because she was the pinnacle of the world for industrialization with the auto industry, etc., and then she had this decline, so it's like she's fallen asleep. But if you walk around, it's a beautiful place and it has so much potential. And that's what I saw."

Currently half a year into her four-year U.S. post, Baistrocchi's responsibilities are largely split between providing services on behalf of the Italian government and the promotion of her home country's culture in the states.

For Italian citizens living in the U.S., the consulate renews passports and driver's licenses, legalizes documents such as diplomas and provides aid in medical or legal situations such as a citizen being arrested. For non-Italians it provides VISAs — only necessary for trips longer than 90 days — and citizenships for those of Italian descent.

"If it's a citizenship through marriage, so you have no Italian lineage, but your husband does and is an Italian citizen, I actually am the only one that can legally pronounce you an Italian citizen," Baistrocchi said. "So I go with my little green, red and white sash and we have a little ceremony and whatnot. I do about two or three of those a week, because we have such a big Italian population here."

Baistrocchi's family has served in diplomacy for literally a century, she noted, beginning with her great-grandfather in the late 1920s. His chosen career was as an admiral in the Navy, but he was thrust into diplomacy after a falling out with Mussolini.

"Mussolini decided to spite him and do the worst thing that he could in his mind, which was (to) send him as far as possible from Rome," Baistrocchi said. "For Mussolini, Rome was the center of the universe, so he sent him as consul general in Hong Kong."

Her grandfather followed in those footsteps, finding himself posted as a consul in Japan during World War II. When Italy switched sides to join the allied forces and the Japanese asked him whether he represented the new Italy or the fascist government that had been under Mussolini, her grandfather asserted that there was only one Italy. For his patriotism, he was placed in a concentration camp for three years, along with Baistrocchi's grandmother, aunt, uncle and father, the latter of whom was only 9 months old at the time.

"Then he also became a diplomat," she said. "He was posted to Hong Kong about 60 years after his grandfather had (been), which is very cool."

Careful to continue the family legacy for the right reasons, Baistrocchi first dabbled in other areas, including working for the private sector in London and opening a home for street kids in Thailand, before realizing she could have a larger impact through consulate work.

start off in Japanese."

She grew up to meet her husband through the career, as well. Fabio Scicchitano is a military officer who was in charge of the deployment of the Italian military to all its embassies and consulates around the world at the time of their meeting. When he was unable to fill a three-month posting, he decided to go himself and the rest is history.

The two share a 5-year-old and a 10-month-old.

"As far as families and family values, I feel like we're very similar," Baistrocchi said of Grosse Pointe and Italy. "Here everybody's so friendly, family, invite you in, share a meal. This is all very Italian."

Aside from the last two who resided in Royal Oak and Birmingham, the Grosse Pointes have been the preferred living location for all past Italian consuls.

The first Italian couple Baistrocchi married during her tenure in Detroit.

Belaying maintenance to save for new marina

By Brad Lindberg
Staff Writer

GROSSE POINTE PARK

— Most one-day boat outings begin and end in the same place and, for up to 270 skippers in Grosse Pointe Park, that somewhere is the marina at Windmill Pointe Park.

As the boating season begins, a five-year outline of the marina's future already is charted.

The outlook concludes in five years with the opening of a new marina.

"It would have floating docks, power pedestals on every pier, water lines, LED lighting and brand-new entrance seawalls," said Chris Delmege, marina supervisor. "The goal would be to start (construction) later (in the season) and end sooner so there is less disruption for boaters."

"Maybe cut the marina off by a month or two and open it a month later," said Chad Craig, supervisor of parks and recreation.

A lot of things go into building a new marina, including raising boat well rental fees to pay for it.

"There would be new pricing," Delmege said. "I think if you have a marina that is state of the art and has everything everyone wishes it could have, we can easily justify prices for it."

Rates have gone up 5 percent in recent years.

"We're taking feedback from the marina subcommittee," Delmege said. "We'll probably put out a survey (for) a priority of what residents or marina people would like."

"More than likely, we'll have professional companies tell us what's our best plan for the space we have," Craig said.

The marina operates from an enterprise fund. Revenues and expenditures are separate from the city's general fund, which is supported by property taxes. The marina therefore must pay for itself.

Park officials are putting aside as much revenue as possible to pay for new construction.

"The last couple of years, we've been cutting back on spending in the marina, trying to build reserves," Delmege said. "We don't want to do huge improvements because we don't want to sink a lot of money into something we're going to have to redo."

Current savings are about $214,000.

"We want to help build the reserve of the marina, which is to, hopefully, in five years bring a new marina to the city," Delmege said.

A May 2021 evaluation by consulting engineers Hubbell, Roth and Clark found the 270-slip marina deficient.

The overall marina facility is in fair to poor condition and functionally obsolete for the current needs of today's boaters," according to the report.

lence, but after being released from the station, she allegedly told a friend she planned to return to the man's job site and shoot him.

Officers located the woman as she was getting her vehicle out of impound and was again advised to have no contact with the man.

iPad fraud

An unknown suspect used a 59-year-old Farms woman's debit card information, address and email to purchase an iPad 11 Pro from Best Buy Thursday, May 5.

Bombarding hackers

When a 76-year-old Farms woman's Google account was hacked, the suspects gained access to her online banking and shopping passcodes. Three separate transfers totaling $7,500 were attempted from her bank account, along with 10 unauthorized orders from Amazon and 50 phone calls from an individual claiming to be with Amazon after she canceled the orders.

Hiding in plain sight

Officers picked up a 39-year-old Farms man for violating a conditional bond at 8:29 a.m. Saturday, May 14, after he was spotted dribbling a soccer ball on the lawn of an area school.

Cutting corners

At 8:48 a.m. Sunday,

May 15, an officer observed a vehicle exit a parking lot into the east-bound lanes of Mack, traveling westbound, before quickly turning onto southbound Moross.

After he was pulled over, the 24-year-old Macomb driver was found to have a revoked license, for which he was cited.

Drunken driving

◆ The first of four arrests for drunken driving in the city last week occurred at 1 a.m. Tuesday, May 10.

An officer pulled over a 45-year-old Detroit man on Mack at Whittier for speeding.

◆ A female motorist, 23, of Grosse Pointe Woods, made a mess of it early Saturday, May 14.

At 3:24 a.m., a patrolman witnessed her swerving her car on Charlevoix near Harvard, entering oncoming traffic and nearly hitting other vehicles.

"Investigation revealed (she) was intoxicated," according to police.

◆ At 12:30 a.m. Sunday, May 15, the roadside investigation of a Detroit man, 31, for speeding on Mack at Lakepointe led to a stay in the holding tank.

◆ Later that evening, a 37-year-old Detroit woman received minor injuries in a single-car crash into a light pole and tree near the intersection of Wayburn and Kercheval.

Police logged the incident at 7:55 p.m.

"Follow-up investigation revealed the vehicle traveled at a high rate of speed (and) lost control," according to police.

Coins missing

Sometime between the beginning of the year and Tuesday, May 10, a collection of collectible coins was believed taken from a house in the 1000 block of Whittier.

"(They were) discovered missing from the resident's attic after several contractors have been inside the home," according to police.

Blown away

A landscaper's tools of the trade were stolen at 5 p.m. Wednesday, May 11, from a trailer parked in the 800 block of Pemberton while a ground crew plied their tasks.

Police said the suspected thief is a heavyset black man driving a gray, older model Ford minivan.

He reportedly got away with two RedMax leaf blowers.

School layoffs, cuts should start with administrators

Discussion at the Grosse Pointe Public School System's most recent board meeting indicated as many as 22 professional staff positions may have to be eliminated for the 2022-23 school year. Although the district is slated to receive between $2.8 million and $3.7 million in additional state funding next year, depending on which version of Gov. Gretchen Whitmer's budget is passed, that money is essentially spoken for due to increases in wages and health insurance.

Deputy Superintendent of Businesses Services Amanda Matheson said most of those 22 positions would be covered by attrition, but at least five positions will face actual layoffs.

We suggest the district start with administrators before delving into the teacher ranks.

GPPSS considers four other school systems — Bloomfield Hills, Northville, Novi and Troy — to be its "peer" districts when looking at performance, enrollment and salaries. A look at their numbers provides justification for our reasoning.

Grosse Pointe South and North high schools both have one principal and three assistant principals. The high schools in those other districts have at least the same, but have more students compared to South (1,373) and North (1,171).

Northville High School, for example, has a principal and four assistants, but it has 2,500 students. Novi High School, with a principal and three assistants, has just over 2,000 students, as does Troy High School. Troy Athens High School, at 1,529 students, and Bloomfield Hills High School, with 1,700 students, also have one principal and three assistants. While Northville, Novi and Bloomfield Hills only have one high school, that does not change the fact they all have more students than our high schools.

We believe our high schools could make do with a principal and two assistants.

At the middle school level, Parcells has a principal and two assistants, while Brownell and Pierce each have one assistant. Middle schools in those peer districts have one principal and one assistant principal, including Novi Middle School and Northville's Hillside Middle School, both of which have more than 1,000 students compared to fewer than 800 at Parcells.

Eliminating one assistant principal at each high school and Parcells gets the district more than halfway to its five pink slips.

Confounding, just last week, despite recent talk of laying off teachers, the GPPSS website listed a newly created position titled Dean of Student Culture and Community at Grosse Pointe North. The job posting indicates the salary is based on the Grosse Pointe Education Association contract, but the duties and responsibilities sound like an administrative role and do not mention any teaching duties. The position was posted May 13, with applications accepted through May 27,

A big thank you to our PSOs

Sunday marked the start of National Police Week, which runs through Saturday.

According to policeweek.org, the time is meant to offer "honor, remembrance and peer support, while allowing law enforcement, survivors and citizens to gather and pay homage to those who gave their lives in the line of duty."

The occasion dates back to 1962, when President John F. Kennedy signed a proclamation declaring May 15 as Peace Officers Memorial Day and the week within which that date falls as Police Week.

We in the Pointes recognize the hard work and dedication all of our public safety officers bring to every shift and even while off duty. We are doubly grateful and blessed because those same PSOs also serve as firefighters. (See related story, page 1A).

Recent weeks have seen officers recognized for their actions in 2021 in all five of our communities.

In case you missed any of those stories, here is a recap of the citations, commendations and officer of the year recipients:

Grosse Pointe Shores — PSO Jeffrey Roybal.

Grosse Pointe Farms — PSOs Derek Lazarski, Tim Harris and Richard Rosati; Civilian Inmate Dispatcher Sue Stephens and Animal Control Officer Mark Jacob.

City of Grosse Pointe — Sgts. Christopher Saunders, Justin Strohmeyer, Chris Cotzias, Michael Hergott and Joseph Srebernak; PSOs Lucas Rucinski, Joshua Ina, Austin Giarmo, Jacob Gentle, Muhieddine Turk, Mark Yannis and Andrew Pruetter; Lts. Aland Gwyn and Thomas Martindale; Detective Mike Narduzzi and Detective Sgt. Joe Adams.

Grosse Pointe Park — Sgts. Michael Miller and Daniel Kolar; PSOs Paul Pionk, Jason Lockwood, Jesse Lafriniere, Christopher Muklewiecz, Thomas Taylor, Brady Baetens and Randall Olsen; Dispatchers Jill Mazzara and Dawn Kelly; and Lt. Anthony Blain.

Grosse Pointe Woods — Sgts. Brian Urban and Joseph Provost; PSOs David Empson, Matthew Muzia and Jarod Smith; Lt. Brian Conigliaro; and Crossing Guard Maureen Carter.

In addition, the Lakeshore Optimist Club gave citations to the following at its recent Respect for Law breakfast:

Grosse Pointe Woods — PSOs David Empson and Jarod Smith and Sgt. Brian Urban.

Grosse Pointe Park — PSO Michael O'Brien and Detective Ryan Willmer.

City of Grosse Pointe — Sgt. Christopher Saunders.

Thank you to them and all of their colleagues who risk their lives to protect ours. A big thank you to all our public safety officers.

and an August start date.

We question the timing and need for this position, given that teachers are facing layoffs.

There also are other costs associated with school administrators the Board of Education should consider to avoid laying off teachers. These steps may require a letter of understanding to be added to the current agreement between the board and the Grosse Pointe Administrators Association, but we are confident those administrators would be open to such a discussion given enrollment losses and a depleted fund balance.

Our suggestions include freezing a scheduled 2 percent pay and step increase for the 2022-23 school year, as well as eliminating longevity and merit pay. There also is a provision in the agreement that gives administrators an "off-schedule bonus" if the district's fund balance gets above 15 percent. While that probably will not happen any time soon, that language should be struck from future agreements.

The school board also should eliminate giving the superintendent, regardless of who it is, a $10,000 bonus for receiving a highly effective rating. As Trustee Ahmed Ismail noted at the time of Superintendent Jon Dean's evaluation, the document the Michigan Association of School Boards uses for superintendent evaluations makes it very hard for a superintendent not to receive the highest rating.

The board and administrators have many tough decisions to make, but in a district that is losing students — including a projected loss of 500 more by 2026 — laying off teachers and possibly having to pare back offerings is not the way to fix the problem.

First, you gotta have art

“You've gotta have arrrrrrr ... all you really need is art.

When those little things in life make you frown, come on down and get a start."

Many of us will remember that catchy TV commercial from back in the '70s and '80s for the Detroit Institute of Arts. Such a happy song to entice everyone to get to the DIA and experience its amazing collections both old and new.

Why is it that art brings so much joy? Even though it may come from a dark place or a bad mood or a sad life, art makes us feel. And it is, to us, the ultimate unifier of humans. What other subject is so universally appreciated and enjoyed?

We have art on our hearts these days, of course, because our second annual Grosse Pointe News "Finer Pointes" art contest just wrapped up last weekend. We had the distinct pleasure of meeting the brilliant artists, hearing their stories and connecting with people we otherwise may never have met. To see people from all walks of life, all ages and with such amazingly different life experiences come together because of art is truly moving.

Art possesses a respectful, special brand of magic to express diverse points of view, moments in time and individual passion. Art allows humans to experience these points of view alongside the artist. You may not always agree or love the pieces, but art makes you think — without being divisive.

The mutual respect and support artists have for one another is inspiring and warms our hearts. We could not be more proud of the quality of work we received. It truly shows the depth and breadth of talent in our great state. Even locally, Grosse Pointers flexed their artistic muscle, as several Pointers made the short list of finalists.

Though we could only choose a few artists for top honors, this is one scenario where, thanks to the gift of art, everyone truly is a winner.

The Dix Avenue drawbridge over River Rouge is a picnic ground for freighter watchers.

Boats delivering raw materials to Ford Motor Company's Rouge complex creep under the open bridge at less than 2 knots. Crew members walking along both sides of the main deck are heard talking into handheld radios to officers in the wheelhouse advising if the vessel has clearance.

The most recent visitor of which I am aware was the 806-foot freighter Honorable James L. Oberstar the morning of Friday, May 13.

Within a day it unloaded and headed to the city of her construction in 1959, Toledo, where a couple of generations ago Chesapeake & Ohio steam locomotives, such as the big Allegheny 2-6-6-6 displayed at The Henry Ford Museum, delivered mile-long coal trains from West Virginia.

That must have been a sight.

The Oberstar contributed in the last year to U.S.-flagged vessels on the Great Lakes carrying 51.6 million tons of iron ore, according to the Lake Carriers Association.

Or shipments through April this year totaled 5.5 million tons, an impressive amount until put in context with a nearly 38 percent greater total at this time last season.

As freighter-watchers get word of a boat approaching Rouge, usually by monitoring boater.com or vesselfinder.com, they start showing up at the Dix bridge.

The north side of the bridge is in Dearborn. The south side is in Detroit.

The south side is the most popular vantage point for taking photographs, because the sun swings to the south early in the day.

Plus, there's a parking area nearby.

GUEST VIEW By Lisa Mazur Armentrout

Honor those who served, remember those who perished

For most, Memorial Day weekend is an opportunity to kick off the summer, open up the pools and spend a long weekend with family and friends. But for many veterans and families of veterans, it is a time of reflection and sorrow. For those of us who have served, it can be a painful reminder of the sacrifices our brothers and sisters who once stood beside us have made. Many lost their lives in combat, but so many more lost their lives at home. Pieces of themselves were left behind, whether body or mind; the pain is very real.

It was my distinct honor to serve as a Navy corpsman until retirement. I am a veteran of the Cold War, Operations Desert Shield and Storm, and Operation Iraqi Freedom. In times of war, I was on a team who cleared sailors and Marines to leave for combat and then joined them myself. I'm not going to lie, it can take a toll. Sometimes the preparations for combat can be just as traumatic as the event itself.

In 2004, I was a new mom and it was my turn to serve. Perhaps the most poignant task I had before departing was making sure my 1-year-old son had funeral clothes in case of my demise. I was serving on the nuclear aircraft carrier USS George Washington in the Persian Gulf during a tumultuous time in the war. I may be the only mom in Grosse Pointe who has landed on and taken off an aircraft carrier in combat. If not, we need to meet.

Shortly after I retired, our community lost a true hero, Lt. Col. Trane McLeod, U.S. Marines. He was a classmate of mine at Grosse Pointe South in the 1980s. I did not know him personally, but he was a legend. A tough-as-nails athlete, who after college enlisted in the Marines and then later became an officer. His wife and children were in Hawaii where they were stationed, getting ready to celebrate Trane's 40th birthday without him. However, just days before the big day, he perished in a helicopter crash.

When word reached home, I was devastated. Survival guilt sets in and unimaginable grief is felt still to this day, 16 years later. The colonel was laid to rest at Arlington National Cemetery with highest honors, a horse-drawn caisson delivering him to his final resting spot. The Washington Post covered his story and published photos of his absolutely devastated wife and three children. In their funeral clothes.

The human spirit never ceases to amaze me, especially in times of war. Everyday citizens stepping forward to serve under unfathomable conditions. People who you would never think of have volunteered and taken an oath to defend in whatever capacity the military asks. Sometimes it's a difficult ask.

The father of a close friend of mine agreed to take his brother's tour in Vietnam after returning himself. Thankfully, he returned safely from both tours. It is selfless acts like his that make our country great.

We owe a huge debt of gratitude to the men and women in uniform, along with their families and friends who support them. I have served, my father served, his father served and several of my uncles have all served in time of war. I know I am a better citizen as a result.

Although Memorial Day seems like a time for joyful celebrations and gatherings, please step back and take a moment to remember those who made our way of life possible. And please respect the somber nature of this holiday.

Independent authors shine through Kids Book Magazine

By Kate Vanderstelt
Staff Writer

As an independently published author, Grosse Pointe Park resident Nicole Fillippone is immersed in the struggles indie artists face when getting their work recognized. Along with her business partner, Tina Marie Young, also facing similar problems, they created Kids Book Magazine, or KBM, a publication with a mission to spread awareness of independently published works that deserve attention.

Independent publishing is relatively easily accessible, said Fillippone, making it a widespread activity. Authors can publish independently via various avenues, including Amazon's print-on-demand and self-printing books to sell through Amazon or independently. Fillippone, a member of a 30,000- to 40,000-member Facebook group for independently published authors, saw the need for credible, quality indie artists to get their work out there.

"With independent books," she said, "you don't have the resources that a traditional published author has, which is their publishing house and the publishing house's connections to Barnes & Noble and all the brick-and-mortar places that you'd want your book to go. It's extremely difficult as an independent author to get your books into traditional spaces."

Especially without money for high-end marketing tools, she added, indie authors easily max out the potential for promoting their books.

The flood of independently published books also creates a difficulty for well-written indie books to get the recognition they deserve, she said, as "it makes the indie space feel like less than to our potential buyers."

KBM began when Fillippone and Young teamed up to give independent authors a way to share their works.

Fillippone said, "We wanted to give credibility to indie published authors — the ones that have books that deserve to be recognized for the quality that they are, how well-written they are, how beautiful the cover is (and) illustrations are. And so that was the idea, to create a platform where we can highlight these books."

KBM debuted its first online magazine publication in February 2022, featuring author interviews, illustrator interviews and book reviews, among other things.

"The idea (of KBM) is to just give color to the books and the indie world," Fillippone said, adding the work is not simply a book catalog, but an immersive experience into the world of independently published children's works.

While the publication itself does not catalog independent works, the website, kidsbookmagazine.com, will feature indie books vetted through a review process. Books may be submitted through the site for review and, based on a rating given by cover, content and illustration reviewers, will be featured via KBM in various ways. The three reviewers will be deemed experts in their specific fields, with credentials to back them up.

As another facet of KBM, the duo formed KaBaM, a kids' addition to the magazine, made by kids, for kids.

"We feel that we can bring the love of books and the love of writing and creating books to children, too," Fillippone said. "... It's more about getting them engaged in the process behind the scenes of creating books to get them to just get excited about it."

KaBaM became a supplement to KBM, filling the second half of the magazine with children artists and writing features, including child-written articles, short stories, book reviews and more.

"It's just (about) getting kids involved in it early on to drive the passion, help it grow, foster it," Fillippone said. "That was really fun and I feel, out of everything, that part is probably at the heart of what we're doing."

The duo plans to publish KBM three times per year, though the website will constantly be updated. Next, they plan to release a back-to-school issue in August. While the February edition was released online, they are working to get a printed copy available, as well.

To make the magazine shine, the KBM team is in constant pursuit of content. Adults and children interested in contributing content to the project should visit kidsbookmagazine.com.

To stay up-to-date on all the magazine is doing, like it on Facebook at Kids Book Magazine, follow KBM on Instagram @kidsbookmagazine or KaBaM @kabammagazine. Authors also may join the Kids Book Magazine private Facebook page, Kids Book Magazine Author Group.

IRIS blooms

By Kate Vanderstelt
Staff Writer

Just in time for the late spring and early summer colorful season, IRIS, a women's clothing boutique, has bloomed on Mack Avenue in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Owner Jenny Buda, a lifelong Grosse Pointer, said she hopes the store provides a comfortable shopping experience for anyone stopping through.

"This is a comfortable, comfortably priced, fun, vibey shopping experience," Buda said.

The store's debut comes for Buda after a stint with Grosse Pointe's Capricious, where she was a buyer and general manager, gaining expertise in how to dress women. Her vision for the store is using this background to its full potential, "where you could come in, have a seat if you want, try on clothes, ask me questions, call ahead and (have me pull things)," Buda said.

"That is what my expertise has been in the past," she added, "is just pulling things for people and getting them to try on things that they might not think will be good. ... I pretty much know what looks good on who and why."

Prior to her time with Capricious, Buda worked for Worth New York, a fashion house. She attributes her knowledge in clothing fabrics and sizing women to her time spent with Worth New York.

Named after fashion icon Iris Apfel, Buda hopes the store embodies everything she believes of fashion.

"I've always had a thing for Iris Apfel just as a fashion icon and also an inclusive, older person," Buda said. "You don't have to take on fashion; fashion should take on you. And that's what I love about her. She'll try anything. She wears gobs of jewelry and she's 100 years old. ..."

"I always just loved her and got a big kick out of her," she added. "She's just a great lady. ... I love her whole vibe."

Buda said it's fitting her opening inventory feels very Apfel-esque, with plenty pops of color and prints accompanying classic black and white pieces.

Along with clothing, IRIS will stock jewelry, accessories and home merchandise. Brands featured in Buda's store include Trina Turk, Cleobella, Nation, DL 1961 denim, Jen7, Insight, Clare V., Culti home fragrance and Rigaud candles. She also will have four shoe styles in-store for the spring/summer season.

As the business grows, Buda hopes to eventually introduce her own line of cashmere, a love she picked up when getting lost in fabric markets in China.

Though IRIS likely will target women in the 40-plus age range, Buda assured, "I think there is something for everyone here."

The business opened its doors at 19794 Mack Friday, May 6. For now, operating hours will be 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, closed Sunday and Monday.

To stay up to date on everything IRIS, follow the business on Instagram @iris_grosse pointe, or sign up for the email list by visiting irisgrossepoinete.com.

SCS, Nautical Mile preparing for summer

The St. Clair Shores Farmers Market returns for another year of family fun and entertainment.

The market will be open the fourth Sunday and second Thursday of each month, starting Sunday, May 22, and finishing Thursday, Oct. 13, at Blossom Heath Park, 24800 Jefferson, south of 10 Mile Road.

The market will be open 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. May 22, July 24 and Oct. 2 — all Sundays — and will include food trucks and a beer area. June 26, Aug. 28 and Sept. 25, also Sundays, will feature just the market from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Thursday dates, which include a beer area but no food trucks, will be open 5 to 9 p.m. June 9, July 14, Aug. 11, Sept. 8 and Oct. 13.

Admission is free and parking is $1.

"We try to include activities for the whole family, especially the Sundays that we're open most of the day," said

Donna Hill, events coordinator for the city's Parks and Recreation Department.

"We'll have yoga, a petting zoo, cooking demonstrations and kids entertainment.

Families like to come and just spend the whole day milling around."

Food offerings include locally produced honey, fruits and vegetables, fudge and doughnuts, while craft vendors will be selling handmade items such as jewelry, wreaths and purses.

"We're open rain or shine," Hill said. "We only had to cancel once because the forecast was calling for really bad weather. If it rains, people usually duck under a tent until it passes."

Sunday, May 22, concludes the annual Nautical Mile Restaurant Week.

Participating restaurants offering various deals include Mike's on the Water, Fishbone's, Detroit's Finest, Jefferson Yacht Club, Leo's Coney Island, Pat O'Brien's, Watermark Bar and Grille and Pegasus Taverna.

Also back this year is the Downtown Social District, which runs along Greater Mack Avenue between Nine Mile Road and Nine Mack Drive. The outdoor event is open 5 p.m. to midnight the second and fourth Saturday of each month from May through October.

That stretch of Greater Mack is closed to traffic and filled with picnic tables, food trucks and yard games, along with live music.

For readers who don't mind traveling a bit farther north, St. Clair Shores also offers its Music on the Lake concert series, held 7 to 8:30 p.m. each Wednesday from June 8 to Aug. 17, at Veterans Memorial Park on Jefferson at Masonic.

The free event includes food trucks and drink vendors and also can be enjoyed by boaters on Lake St. Clair. Musical acts range from country to classic rock to cover bands of Journey, Jimmy Buffett and Elton John.

Women's rights rally held at Grosse Pointe South

By Michael Hartt
Schools Reporter

Two Grosse Pointe South High School seniors, Alexandra Lefief and Isabella Stoller, organized a women's rights rally outside of the school Thursday, May 12, to raise awareness of women's rights issues following the leak of a Supreme Court memo indicating a possible reversal of the landmark Roe v. Wade case.

Both said their primary motivation to organize a rally was to inform students about women's rights issues, with the hope it will spur wider community engagement with the topic.

"I think the original incentive was to just raise awareness about the issue," Stoller said. "While I know one protest isn't gonna change the law, (because of the rally), people are thinking about it more and there has been increased awareness of it. The idea that we're still fighting for (women's rights) this many years later is absolutely insane to me and I couldn't just sit and do nothing about it."

To further raise awareness of the topic and bolster attendance at the Thursday rally, Lefief and Stoller spent the week leading up to it encouraging students to wear green clothes — symbolizing their support of the abortion rights movement — and spreading facts about the movement across social media platforms.

Many of the students who attended the rally gathered on the corner of Fisher and Grosse Pointe Boulevard holding signs.

While the rally at 7:30 a.m. May 12 originally was organized as a walkout scheduled for 10 a.m., Lefief and Stoller said they reconsidered the timing and format of the event after discussions with South administration members, including Principal Moussa Hamka.

"The main point for (the administration) was (they didn't) want us to do it during school because of AP testing," Stoller said. "They didn't want their scores to get canceled and for (anything) to inhibit the learning process. So we decided it would be best to do it in the morning instead of after school to get more awareness. There are people dropping their kids off, so I think we reached a much broader audience."

Hamka did not respond to a request for an interview, but said via email that the protest was not affiliated with Grosse Pointe South and was held on public property outside of school hours.

Lefief and Stoller said although they knew advocating for abortion rights might incite some pushback, due to the topic's politically controversial nature, they had almost no negative experiences throughout the week. Only a few parents, while dropping off their children the morning of the rally, expressed their disapproval of the students' support of abortion rights. Teachers and students who chose not to don green or discuss the issues at hand continued to be friendly and open to discourse regarding the matter.

Overall, they said sharing the dialogue of their advocacy work and seeing the unity of the student body in response to discourse about the topic were the things they found most impactful.

"What's interesting is (although) the main focal point of today was the rally outside of the school, what we thought was most impactful was the unity that was fostered in the greater community," Lefief said. "I saw people from different friend groups that would have never talked to each other otherwise complimenting each other's stickers, body paints and outfits. Not only did we come together early before school and broadcast our message to the greater public, but we also, as a community inside the school, supported each other."

Alexandra Lefief led the crowd in chants to keep the excitement going.

Richard hosts 'Sail into Spring' fundraiser

The Richard Elementary School PTO is saying farewell to winter's chill and welcoming supporters to its "Sail into Spring" fundraiser, which takes place 7 to 11 p.m. Friday, May 20, at Bayview Yacht Club, 100 Clairpointe, Detroit. The invitation is open to all.

"This is for Richard as a school, but anyone outside of the school is welcome if they want to support the kids," said Jody Gotfredson, one of the event organizers. "All of the money raised will go back to the Richard PTO to benefit kids in the community."

The event includes a strolling dinner, cocktails, live music by the Jacob Schwandt Jazz Trio and a silent auction.

"It's overwhelming how great the community has been with donating auction items," Gotfredson said.

Attendees will have the chance to bid on a variety of items donated by DYNO Detroit, Posterity Gallery & Framing, Ridgecrest Outfitters, Closet Connection and a host of others.

An additional perk for those who attend is free shuttle service between Richard and Bayview.

"Cathy Harber, a real estate agent, donated two buses to pick people up at Richard and drive them to Bayview and back, so no one has to have to worry about driving," Gotfredson said.

Tickets for the fundraiser are $75 per person. Richard Raccoon Family Packs, which cost $250, include two tickets and a $100 donation to the school.

Tickets may be purchased via Venmo at pere-gabrielrichardpto@gmail.com or by cash or check, payable to Pere Gabriel Richard PTO and sent to the school, 176 McKinley, Grosse Pointe Farms.

Richard supporters who are unable to attend are welcome to donate via Venmo or by check.

Proceeds from "Sailing into Spring" benefit the Richard PTO, which helps fund school assemblies, building enhancements, teacher resources, family events and student enrichment programs.

"Among other things, we plan to redo the teachers' lounge," Gotfredson said. "We want to make sure we're supporting our teachers. We want them to know how much they're appreciated."

Richard teachers were extended tickets to the event, she noted.

Gotfredson said the event is about community and showing support not just for local children, but for the district as a whole.

"My husband and I are from Grosse Pointe," she said. "We moved away, but we moved back for these public schools. We are so lucky. I would support any school in this district. We need to come together as Grosse Pointe in total to support these schools, so we can keep the tradition going of having these amazing schools."

"Sailing into Spring" promises to be as much fun for attendees as the organizers had planning it.

"We've worked so hard," Gotfredson said. "We really want it to be successful, for the teachers and the children it will benefit in the end."

Liggett hosts Black Bottom historical exhibit

By Michael Hartt
Schools Reporter

From May 13 to June 3, University Liggett School is hosting a historical exhibit centered around Detroit's Black Bottom neighborhood, a predominantly black neighborhood on Detroit's east side that was demolished because of racially motivated urban renewal efforts. The exhibit offers a reconstructed street-by-street view of the Black Bottom neighborhood from photographs of the area prior to its demolition.

Adam Hellebuyck,

Liggett's dean of curriculum and assessment, said Liggett was compelled to invite Black Bottom Archives to showcase the exhibit because of how closely it aligns with its place-based learning philosophy.

"One of the main reasons we brought the Black Bottom Street View exhibit is because we do so much work in our U.S. history class on Detroit history. We teach the national themes of U.S. history all through local examples," Hellebuyck said. "And one of those examples, especially about postwar urban renewal efforts, is looking at Black Bottom (because it sheds light on) governmental policies that caused the destruction of vibrant communities. (Doing this) really helps us meet our objectives of having our students see local history as representative of broad trends, while becoming active historians."

While the exhibit most closely connects to topics covered in Liggett's U.S. history classes, it also will be toured by students taking classes in other related Upper School subjects. Middle and lower school students will connect with the exhibit too, but in a manner that aligns with the more elementary nature of their curriculum.

Emily Kutil, creator of the Black Bottom Street View exhibit and an advisory board member for Black Bottom Archives, said she is excited about this history disseminating through the Liggett community. Spreading the previously ignored narrative of development in Black Bottom is the organization's foremost goal, she added.

"The idea of the project in general is to build public understanding about this moment in history, which, when we started working on this, there was absolutely no acknowledgement of," Kutil said. "So the goal is really to help people connect with the history and also help families who have family history in Black Bottom to connect with their family history and to share their own stories."

She said she is glad Liggett is committed to not only sharing the exhibition with students, but also with community members.

Because of its strategic placement in Liggett's Boll Center, which often is used for schoolwide affairs, such as sports awards ceremonies and alumni events, a broad group of people has been exposed to this historical narrative, according to Hellebuyck.

Any group that would like to view the exhibition now through June 3, may do so by contacting Liggett's Center for Innovative Teaching and Learning at citl@uls.net.

Kutil also encouraged those not familiar with Black Bottom Archives to connect with the organization at blackbottomarchives.com.

Analysis: What is Everyday Math?

By Michael Hartt
Schools Reporter

Schools Reporter
Michael Hartt is supplementing his regular coverage of Grosse Pointe's private and public schools with analysis of commonly asked questions regarding schools in the community. Email him at mhartt@grossepoincenews.org with questions that you would like covered.

In an email sent to fellow Grosse Pointe Public School System Board of Education members March 21, Secretary Lisa Papas expressed opposition to the district's use of Everyday Math and said she thought it may be contributing to a curriculum that promotes disparities in learning between students.

Shortly before Papas shared her thoughts regarding the matter, the district's spring newsletter touted use of the program, which is implemented in elementary classrooms through curriculum and textbooks.

To understand concerns regarding the program, Director of Pre-K and Elementary Instruction Keith Howell said it is important to understand how its implementation has affected district math instruction.

He said there are several aspects of the program that differentiate it from more traditional ways math was taught when he and many parents were in elementary school. Instead of teaching students to learn how to solve computation problems in a specific way, they are exposed to several methods that can all be used to get the same answer, which Howell said results in more students succeeding.

In response to some of the concerns regarding the experimental methods to solve math problems, Howell said the most recent Everyday Math system the district officially adopted in 2019, Everyday Math 4, focuses more on the traditional methods than its predecessor, Everyday Math 3, which was adopted about 15 years ago.

"Everyday Math 3 focused mostly on the newer concepts or ways to get to a final answer, where the Everyday Math 4 program provides the traditional method as well as all the different ways to come up with the specific response," Howell said.

Another big change seen with the adoption of Everyday Math was the ability of teachers to more accurately track how well students grasp concepts over time. Because the program focuses on building skills in students over longer periods of time than a more incremental and traditional math instruction method, teachers can better intervene to help students before they move onto a new concept.

"As the program goes forward, if a student is still struggling with the skill and they're on the 70th time that they've seen that skill out of 86 times, that is (going to) trigger a teacher's understanding of needing to put some level of intervention in place for the students," Howell said.

The movement against Everyday Math, which began shortly after its widespread adoption in the early 2010s, and has been written about in publications such as Forbes and the Atlantic, contends that the program makes learning math unnecessarily challenging.

Papas herself advocated for the implementation of Singapore Math, which isolates the learning of mathematical concepts, rather than connecting them to other subjects, as Everyday Math does.

Howell said while he remembers some opposition to Everyday Math when it was first being adopted in GPPSS, students and families in recent years seem to be happy with it, especially after changes rolled out through the adoption of Everyday Math 4. He also said he believes the program more holistically prepares students for the type of mathematical thinking they will have to do in middle and high school, and that this has been a major strength of the adoption of the program.

"Maybe that traditional method is great, but these other ways can also help (students) formulate more mathematical thinking," Howell said. "So as they're getting into middle school and high school, going through some challenging and rigorous curriculum, some of the skills that they've learned in Everyday Math have been able to support that."

AWARDED:

mygpea.org.

The list is developed through nomination forms at each building, where each teacher nominates a colleague they feel goes above and beyond in their work. Then, there is a section for teachers to elaborate on their nominations and provide testimonials to their excellence.

Taryn Loughlin, one of the two presidents of GPEA, said honoring teachers through this award is one of her favorite traditions and because of struggles stemming from the pandemic, she thinks it is more important than ever to recognize the work of teachers.

"Our teachers have really, especially in the last few years, adapted to what has been thrown at them as a result of having to change the way that they teach quickly and then saved the things that worked and implemented them into their daily practice," Loughlin said. "That's something that I think is so inspiring."

MARINA:

going to need to be replaced," said Larry Haggart, a boater and chairman of the commission's marina subcommittee. "I don't know (if) that is any sort of imminent danger to anyone, as long as it's well lit. At night, it can become a navigation hazard because it's so low. If the lights go out, people think they can just plow over that. And they can't."

"You have to stay with the times and we have to be competitive with what's around us," Delmege said.

Among HRC's gripes are:

◆ "Finger docks are generally in fair to poor condition. Some finger docks exhibit side-to-side movement and bounce under foot traffic."

◆ "It is reported that due to water current and configuration of the entrance walls, navigating and maneuvering, especially for a larger watercraft, can be difficult."

◆ "The current dock arrangement and access does not comply with State and Federal Americans with Disabilities Act accessibility guidelines. There are no compliant accessible slips at the marina. Under the current Accessible Boating Facility guidelines, with 270 existing slips, five accessible slips would be required."

◆ "Piles supporting the main piers and finger docks are quite far apart, in some cases as much as 30 feet on center. Typically, spacing between supports would be closer. This condition also contributes to the lateral movement and bouncing nature of the finger docks noted prior."

◆ "The majority of the transformers and panel boards are located next to the docks at dock level. They are subject to submersion in the water when water levels are high, as well as splashing."

◆ "Light poles are inconsistent in the spacing and number of light fixtures on them."

Group honors founder, longtime participant

By Jody McVeigh

For more than 20 years, a growing group of non-profit leaders has been meeting quarterly to discuss projects, network and strengthen community bonds.

The aptly named Connecting the Pointes is unlike many community organizations. There's no one "in charge." Minutes are not recorded. There are no dues or membership fees.

Instead, members meet at different host sites every few months for a light lunch, casual conversation and a round-robin preview of upcoming events and uplifting news. By making these connections, nonprofit leaders find the help they need, project partners or other forms of support.

At its May meeting, hosted by Assumption Cultural Center and catered by Marchiori Catering, the group recognized two of its members for their contributions. Diane Strickler and Jan Treuter received tokens of appreciation for spearheading and sustaining the organization since 2000.

Though technically no leader has ever been named, for more than two decades Treuter took it upon herself to send out invitations and kick off discussions at meetings.

"We want to honor Jan for her years of being our leader and Diane for being our founder," said Joan DeRonne, church administrator at Assumption. "Even though we don't see each other often, we rely on each other. There have been so many people we have met and it's strengthened our community."

Treuter and Strickler were both members of a county organization of similar regard that disbanded more than 20 years ago. Seeing the value in working together, they decided to form a group of their own.

"We found we really benefited from knowing other people in the group," Treuter said. "So we stuck together."

Strickler said founding Connecting the Pointes was a no-brainer after watching several nonprofits each organize their own separate health fairs.

"I thought, 'Let's work together,'" she said. "... Connecting the Pointes is about networking and supporting each other for the community's sake. We're stronger when we work together."

"I knew it was a good idea," she added. "We just needed to find the right people to keep it going."

Finding the right people was slow and steady. The group started with three to five attendees who would brown bag their lunches. Now, the organization boasts more than 30 members, most of whom attend the quarterly meetings. Though not required, often host sites provide lunches.

Members represent a variety of community nonprofits, from the Neighborhood Club and Full Circle Foundation to the Grosse Pointe Chamber of Commerce and Grosse Pointe Artists Association. The school system, library system and other organizations also are represented.

"It's really remarkable what everyone has done to connect all these lines," Treuter said. "I'm amazed at how we've grown and the connections we see every time we meet. We've gotten to know each other; we have fun. It's interesting to know what's going on. The community is lucky to have this kind of group."

Memorial Week returns to War Memorial

In-person events include Our Community Salutes, Memorial Day ceremony

After a three-year, pandemic-related hiatus, The War Memorial once again will host Memorial Week events, beginning with its Our Community Salutes Detroit reception and ceremony, honoring high school seniors enlisting in the Armed Forces after graduation.

The reception begins at 6 p.m. Thursday, May 26, at the historic Alger House. A ceremony follows at 7 p.m. and includes the presentation of the Gen. Colin L. Powell Service Award, which is awarded to one or more high school guidance counselors who best exemplify a counselor's support of young adults in making individual educational and career choices in high school and upon graduation.

Additionally, Brig. Gen. Scott Hiipakka and Dr. Steven P. Bucci will address guests. Hiipakka is the assistant adjutant general for the Michigan Army National Guard. He serves as the chief executive officer of the Michigan Israel Business Accelerator and as advisor and former appointee to the Michigan Community Service Commission. He also serves on the Board of Directors for Leadership Oakland and was the former board chairman and board member for Winning Futures.

Bucci served three decades as an Army Special Forces officer and top Pentagon official. He was the military assistant to former Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, with whom he worked directly more than five years. Bucci retired from the Army in 2005 with the rank of colonel.

The program also includes musical selections by the Motor City Brass Band.

Essay is author's 7th Chicken Soup story

Grosse Pointe Park resident Mary Jo Wyse is at it again, sharing a heartfelt essay with readers of the latest Chicken Soup for the Soul installment, "Kindness Matters: 101 Feel-Good Stories of Compassion & Paying it Forward."

This is the seventh essay she's had published in the series.

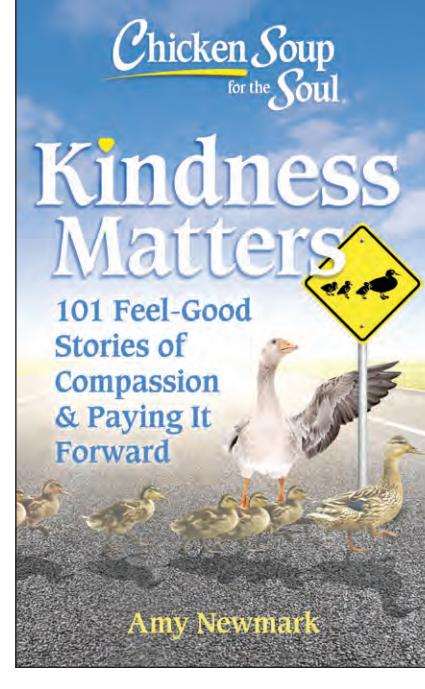

"A Little Extra" centers on a generous tip she anonymously received while waiting tables, during a time she was going to graduate school, working as a teaching assistant and organizing a student trip to Europe, which she planned to take if she could afford her own airfare.

The anonymous tip, which came at an ideal time, helped cover those trip expenses.

And 20 years later, she still has no idea who left it.

"It was an extraordinary event in my life," Wyse said. "It was such a large amount of money, such a generous act. It left an impression on me to pay it forward and (ask) what can I do to give back?"

According to her essay, "Nowadays, when I go to a restaurant with my husband and two kids, I leave a little extra for the server. You never know how much they need it. A few bucks here and there. It means something."

Her experience of paying it forward matches the theme of the latest Chicken Soup book, which is available on amazon.com and barnesandnoble.com, among other outlets.

Wyse, a former English teacher, earned a Master of Arts degree in English and a Master of Fine Arts degree in creative writing. She's been published outside of Chicken Soup for the Soul, including essays in the "Cup of Comfort" series.

Currently, she is a content writer for iMOM, which offers "parenting, marriage and relational advice to help people love their family well," she said.

"I write 12 articles a month for iMOM, so I'm working on my job right now; I've been there six months," she added. "I love what I do. It's exactly what I've always wanted to do — write for a living. I'm thrilled to be doing it now."

More of Wyse's work may be found online at imom.com.

After decades-long hiatus, Woods woman earns degree

By Jody McVeigh
Editor

Marilynn Hymon-Williams can finally check the box.

The 52-year-old Grosse Pointe Woods resident — and wife, mother of five and grandmother of three — recently earned a Bachelor of Science degree in healthcare administration after a nearly 30-year hiatus from school.

"I'm putting a period at the end of that 30-year sentence," she said. "I finished my degree. Period. I did it. I finished."

The accomplishment was a long time coming. The 1988 Denby High School graduate started her college career at Ferris State University. She and her twin sister loved being away at school — Hymon-Williams, perhaps, a little too much.

"I'm a PK — a preacher's kid," she said. "My dad was very strict.... My first party was in college, so you can imagine what my first year of college was like."

While her sister was on a partial scholarship and "more disciplined," Hymon-Williams was caught up in the excitement of it all. "I blew my first year," she said, adding she did well her second and third years.

However, after their mother lost her job during their junior year, the sisters had to move back home. While her sister was close to earning an associate's degree with what she had accomplished at Ferris, "I was knocked back to 30 credits," Hymon-Williams said.

Coming home from college empty-handed was difficult, she said.

"I was a guest student at Wayne State for a time," she added, "but I was ready to go back to Ferris and beg for my degree."

As her sister graduated from Wayne State University, Hymon-Williams took a different route after meeting Darrin Williams in 1991.

"He told me I should finish school," she said. "My grandma said, 'Don't get married; you won't finish school.' But I got married. Then after a year or two, we couldn't afford it; I couldn't get financial aid. Two years later, in 1994, I had my daughter. After that, life happened. The girls happened."

The girls — their daughters, Brittany, Taylor and Tiffany Williams — were in addition to Darrin Williams' children, Darrin "Boomer" and Shynita Williams.

Instead of going back to school, Hymon-Williams became certified as a pharmacy technician specialist. She's been employed with Henry Ford Health since 1993.

Still, "Every September, I'd get an ache in my stomach: I want to finish school," she said. "In 2010 or 2011, I took a few more classes. It got hard to do though, because the girls' schedules interfered with my schedule. They deserved my time."

Then, the unexpected happened.

"In 2015 and 2016, I was sick, so sick," Hymon-Williams said. "I had mercury toxicity. I couldn't do much. It affected me like chemo."

A lack of energy combined with her hair falling out, among other side effects, sidelined her. Her thoughts turned to the brevity and preciousness of life.

"My one regret was, if this was it, that I didn't finish school," she said. "When I started feeling better, I signed up. When my baby graduated (from Grosse Pointe North High School in 2017), I said, 'I'm going with you (to college).'"

Hymon-Williams looked around at schools and decided on Southern New Hampshire University. As she worked toward her bachelor's degree, she said her mother encouraged her every step of the way.

"She was my biggest cheerleader," she said. "She always said, 'You can do it, Marilyn. You can do it.'"

However, Hymon-Williams' mother died from COVID-19 last May.

"It was bittersweet that I graduated but she wasn't there," she said.

One way she made sure her mother — her inspiration — was part of the graduation ceremony, however, was affixing her photo to the top of her mortarboard.

"I wanted her to be with me," she said.

Having a degree is more than a sense of accomplishment for Hymon-Williams. It gives her closure on a 28-year gap in her education.

"When I would do resumes, I couldn't check that (degree) box," she said. "I can check that box now."

"... I value education so much; that was a standard I had for myself," she added. "I'm already working in pharmacy administration. I like what I do.... But I wanted to set an example for my kids. Never give up. Keep trying. During different segments of your life, you never know how they're going to turn out. Just don't stop."

Hymon-Williams encourages her children to stay positive. It was a hard lesson for her to learn, but she wants to make sure her offspring grasp it.

"Our words have value," she added. "You say what you get. Think positive and never stop trying. You don't want to live with regret."

Hymon-Williams made sure her late mother was a part of her graduation ceremony.

Still time to apply

American Legion Grosse Pointe Post 303 invites current high school juniors to attend American Legion Boys State and American Legion Auxiliary Girls State educational programs. Boys State is held at Grand Valley State University in Allendale and Girls State this year will be virtual. Both will take place June 12 to 18.

These "mock government" programs are designed to teach students how state government works while developing leadership skills and appreciation of their rights as a citizen. Attendees get a fast-paced experience immersed in politics and civic responsibilities while having fun and making friends.

Both Boys and Girls State programs also select two outstanding Michigan students to go on to Boys Nation and Girls Nation programs, held in Washington D.C., later this summer.

Applications for Girls State must be completed by May 31, and applications for Boys State must be completed by May 23. For applications and more information on Boys State, visit michiganboysstate.org/ and for applications on Girls State, visit micha-laux.org/girls-state/. The cost of the $400 scholarship is provided by the American Legion.

Because Grosse Pointe North and South have finals during the week of June 12 to 18, a parental request can be made to take finals early. For more information, contact American Legion Post 303 Commander Dan McCrary at (313) 492-7462.

Victor Andre Callewaert Jr.

Victor Andre Callewaert Jr., 85, a long-time resident of Mackinac Island, passed away Sunday, May 8, 2022. At the time of his passing he was a man at peace, grateful for the many blessings of his life and surrounded by people who loved him.

A resident of Mackinac Island with homes in Grosse Pointe Shores and Stuart, Fla., Victor was born in 1936, on Detroit's east side, to Victor Andre and Eugenia Callewaert. His entrepreneurial spirit and love of hard work were evident at a young age. At age 11, he sold Detroit newspapers at the corner of Mack and Chalmers, directly outside the doughnut shop owned by another entrepreneur, his future employer and father-in-law, Harry Ryba. Ryba hired young Victor, a decision that led to Victor meeting and marrying Harry's daughter, Rena. Victor and Rena were together nearly 60 years, 52 as man and wife before her passing in 2009.

Victor's legacy will be carried on by his children and grandchildren who survive him: Mary Callewaert (Sean O'Dell); Todd Callewaert (Jennifer) and their children, Andrew and William; Amy Callewaert and her children, Reese and Brooke, and grandson, Tyler Ratliff; Ann Parrish (Les) and their children, Riley and Lillian; and Gregg Callewaert (Angel) and their children, Eden and Max.

He also is survived by his loving sister, Margie (Sr. Anna Mary Callewaert-O'Meara, OCSO); in-laws, Janis and Julius Deckert and Kevin Ryba; numerous nieces and nephews; and his beloved friend and soulmate the past 10 years, Liz Boyd. In addition to his parents and wife, Victor was predeceased by his granddaughter, Barbara Callewaert Ratliff; dearly loved godparents, Joseph and Julia VerHooye, and their daughter, Eugenia "Jeanie"; and members of the extended Ryba family.

A self-made successful businessman who enjoyed work over school, Victor attended Catholic grade school at St. John Berchman Parish and Servite and Salesian Catholic high schools in Detroit, before graduating from Southeastern High School. He served two years in the U.S. Army, stationed in California. After his honorable discharge, Victor and Rena returned to Michigan, where he considered careers in law enforcement and plumbing before returning to work with Harry Ryba, who directed his son-in-law to open a fudge shop on Mackinac Island in 1960.

Friends wishing to remember Victor are reminded to "Think Pink," as he would say, and may contribute to St. Anne's Catholic Parish, 6836 Huron Road, Mackinac Island, MI 49757; Mackinac Island Medical Center, 7474 Market St., Mackinac Island, MI 49757; or the charity of one's choice.

The family is being served by the A.H. Peters Funeral Home.

Fudge to Mackinac Island, Victor helped renovate and expand the Lakeview and Island House hotels. In 1988, Victor went his own way, amassing a business portfolio on the island that includes the historic Island House Hotel, Pancake House, Starbucks, Seabiscuit, Mary's Bistro and Draught House and Ryba's Fudge, all of which continue to be owned by the Callewaert family. In addition to his Mackinac Island holdings, Victor's portfolio included Starbucks coffee shops in Chicago and fudge sales at auto shows and other public events.

Hundreds of thousands of Mackinac Island visitors have experienced a bit of island culture thanks to Victor and his ability to know what made for an enjoyable island visit. In his younger days he could be seen making fudge in the fudge shop window and in later years, taking a bite of ice cream dressed in his signature pink shirt and brown slacks.

Victor served as a mentor and employer to thousands of young people who made their way to the island for summer employment and often boasted that many have remained personal friends, with several ultimately owning their own businesses.

In addition to managing his business portfolio, Victor gave his time and talent to help make Mackinac Island the place it is today. He was ruthless when it came to selling raffle tickets for the medical center auction and the tourism bureau's Lilac Festival. People often would turn the other way when they saw him coming, knowing Victor would not take 'no' for an answer when it came to supporting worthy causes. His island legacy includes financial support for the rebuilding of the Arch Rock steps in memory of his late wife, the rebuilding of Ft. Holmes and the Botanical Trail to Arch Rock.

In addition to having served on the medical center advisory board, Victor was a member of St. Anne's Catholic Parish on Mackinac Island, the Mackinac Island Department of Public Works board of directors and the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club.

A private Mass of Christian Burial was celebrated at St. Joan of Arc Catholic Church in St. Clair Shores with Msgr. George Michalek officiating. Victor's cremains will be buried at his final resting place on Mackinac Island.

Mary Lou's motto was, "Spread joy and enjoy Daily!"

A memorial service is planned at 1 p.m. Friday, June 10, at Kirk in the Hills Church, 1340 W. Long Lake, Bloomfield Twp., MI 48302. In lieu of flowers, donations are

Delmer Flanz

Delmer Flanz, 79, died Monday, May 9, 2022, at his home in Grosse Pointe Farms. He was born July 16, 1942, in Detroit, to Anthony and Irene (nee Boks) Flanz, both now deceased.

He grew up in Detroit on Buchanan and Junction, one block from St. Francis of Assisi, where he attended grade school. He graduated from Orchard Lake St. Mary's and continued his education at Walsh Institute. Delmer had a manufacturing company for many years.

Delmer's biggest love was boating. He enjoyed walking the docks, whether he was in Harbor Springs or Fort Lauderdale. His prized possession was his 50-foot Royal Mistress that cruised Lake St. Clair.

Delmer was the loving husband of Judy; dear father of Jeffrey (Kathy McGraw), Mark (Linda) and Robin (Christina); cherished grandfather of Mikayla, Roman, Olivia, Remi, Matthew and Aaron; and beloved brother of LeRoy (Henrietta), Theresa Martin (the late Edward) and Debra Kreissman (Gary). He further is survived by many close friends from Orchard Lake St. Mary's.

A funeral Mass took place Monday, May 16, at St. Paul on the Lake Catholic Church, Grosse Pointe Farms.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to The St. Paul Educational Trust, 170 Grosse Pointe Blvd., Grosse Pointe Farms, MI 48236.

The Rev. Dr. Harry E. Capps

The Rev. Dr. Harry Edward Capps, 80, of Grosse Pointe Woods, passed away Friday, May 13, 2022, surrounded by loved ones at Ascension St. John Hospital. He was born March 20, 1942, in Pittsburgh, the son of Harry Russell Capps and Eleanor Virginia (nee Brubach) Capps.

Harry was a 1960 graduate of Avalon High School in Pittsburgh and a lifelong learner. He earned a Bachelor of Philosophy degree from Grove City College; a Master of Divinity degree from Princeton Theological Seminary; a master's degree in counseling from Central Michigan University; a master's degree in psychology from the University of Detroit Mercy; and a doctorate in clinical psychology from Wayne State University.

In addition to his early community involvements and volunteering, Harry began his career as a minister in Lansdowne, Pa., before he moved his family to Cass City. There he served as minister of the First Presbyterian Church of Cass City for 15 years. Harry continued his pastoral work at Point of Vision Presbyterian Church in Royal Oak, then as the night chaplain at Detroit Receiving Hospital before retiring as a minister. He then turned his focus fully toward his career as a psychotherapist in his private practice, Capps Assessment Psychological & Psycho-Educational Services in St. Clair Shores, and finally for Senior Wellness Group of Michigan, where he continued to work until he retired at the age of 76.

Beyond his career, Harry was dedicated to his spiritual studies, health, nutrition and fitness. He continued to exercise vigorously most days of the week until he passed. As a part of maintaining his health and wellness, he participated regularly in a rotation of healing practices including Qi Gong, EFT or "tapping," Reiki and energy work, spiritual retreats and more.

Accomplishments aside, Harry was a man of profound love and wisdom. He took great pride in his children and grandchildren. He celebrated each and every event, big or small, with gratitude and unconditional support. He brought laughter to everyone present with his unforgettable jokes and beaming smile. Harry was incredibly intelligent, insightful, compassionate, loving and committed to the well-being and service of others.

Harry was predeceased by his parents and his wife, Jill Capps (nee Baker). He is survived by his children, Jeremy Capps (Lisa), Stacey Meininger (Brent) and Kylie Gojanaj (Christian). He leaves four grandchildren, Darin and Eric Capps, Sienna Meininger and his newest joy, 2-week-old Lina Gojanaj. He also is survived by his brother, Kenneth Capps (Karen); niece, Kristina Hoops (Tom); nephew, Kevin Capps (Kathy); and his special friend, Beverly Holmes, of Denver, with whom he enjoyed traveling and finding new adventures. The family extends special thanks to the Gojanaj family, Gjok, Vera, Joseph and Nina, for the love and care they shared with Harry the past 10 years.

A private celebration of his life will be held at a later date. In lieu of flowers, memorials may be made to First Presbyterian Church of Cass City, Bell Tower Fund, P.O. Box 152, Cass City, MI 48726. Share a memory at ahpters.com

William Hodgman

Longtime Grosse Pointe Park resident William "Bill" Hodgman, 79, passed away Tuesday, May 3, 2022, at Ascension St. John Hospital. He is loved, missed and survived by his wife of 44 years, Mary Rose (nee Stanlonis); children, Melissa (Peter Strzok), Laura (Tom Rollins), Christopher (Chelsea Woznak), Brian and Andrea; grandchildren, Nicholas, Grace, Jack and Finn; brothers, Dr. Mark (Jane) and Philip (Sue); and sister-in-law, Betty (the late Jeffrey Hodgman).

Bill, the eldest of four boys, was born Aug. 27, 1942, in Detroit, to Daniel and Margaret (nee Langenderfer). He graduated from Austin Catholic High School in 1960; Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., where he played basketball and tennis, in 1964; and the University of Michigan Law School in 1967; and was a Michigan licensed attorney since 1968.

Bill's legal specialty interests included estate planning, physician recruitment and retention and joint ventures, and he wrote and spoke extensively on healthcare topics.

In 1990, he was elected a trustee of the Detroit Macomb Hospital Corporation. As chairman, he helped negotiate the merger of DMHC into the St. John Health System. He then served as chairman of St. John Macomb-Oakland Hospital until 2010.

Bill was an avid reader and enjoyed writing Letters to the Editor to the Grosse Pointe News from 1994 until 2018. He loved tennis and golf, classical music, and enjoyed University of Michigan and Lions football.

He was co-founder and president of Grosse Pointe Baseball Organization for 27 years. The organization funds the Grosse Pointe Redbirds summer baseball program for boys 13 to 18 years old and was led by former Detroit Tiger Dave Bergman.

Bill was involved in the Grosse Pointe Library Foundation, Grosse Pointe Park Foundation and The Rhoades Foundation, as well as the local Witenagemot Society.

A funeral Mass will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, May 28, at St. Ambrose Church, 15020 Hampton, Grosse Pointe Park, with a gathering at 10:30 a.m. A reception will follow at the Country Club of Detroit, 220 Country Club Dr., Grosse Pointe Farms.

Contributions may be made in his memory to the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, dso.org; Detroit Institute of Arts, dia.org; or Capuchin Soup Kitchen, cskdetroit.org.

He will be remembered, celebrated and missed by all who knew him.

Veronica E. DiLaura

Veronica E. DiLaura passed away peacefully Thursday, May 12, 2022, after a courageous fight against leiomyosarcoma.

Veronica was born Sept. 17, 1945, in Charleston, W.V., to George and Evangeline Moses, both now deceased. She grew up in Grosse Pointe and graduated from Grosse Pointe High School in 1963. She married Kenneth A. DiLaura in 1972, and together they raised two children in Grosse Pointe Woods.

Veronica had a huge heart and was happiest when she could make others happy; she was an exceptional cook, a cookie baker extraordinaire, a master of Notre Dame tailgates and a talented artist and seamstress. Most importantly, her kind spirit made the world a better place. She was strong, selfless, generous and loyal to anyone lucky enough to call her family or friend. She will be dearly missed by those who knew her.

Veronica was a proud mother to Brian C. DiLaura (Jackie) and Christina M. DiLaura. Nothing brought her more joy than being "Nonnie" to her grandchildren, Nicholas and Emma. She also is survived by her loving siblings, George Moses (Melanie), Rick Moses (Nancy) and Cathy Labash (Chuck); and many nieces and nephews, great-nieces and great-nephews, cousins and friends.

Visitation takes place from 4 to 8 p.m. Thursday May 19, at A.H. Peters Funeral Home, 20705 Mack, Grosse Pointe Woods. The Holy Rosary will be recited at 7 p.m.

A funeral Mass will occur at 10:30 a.m. Friday, May 20, at Our Lady Star of the Sea Catholic Church, 467 Fairford, Grosse Pointe Woods.

In lieu of flowers, the family welcomes donations in Veronica's honor to the University of Michigan Rogel Cancer Center, rogelcancercenter.org; or Capuchin Soup Kitchen, cskdetroit.org.

A Celebration of Life service for Jean McNelly Elliott will take place at 1 p.m. Saturday, May 28, at Grosse Pointe United Methodist Church, 211 Moross, Grosse Pointe Farms. Jean passed away Tuesday, Jan. 19, 2021. Her obituary appeared in the Grosse Pointe News Jan. 28, 2021.

Racing For Kids goes full throttle with new team at the wheel

The day after last summer's 15th annual Racing For Kids to the Hill event, the RFK team of Pat Wright, Debby Wright, Linda Finger and Kathleen Conway convened at the charity's headquarters and reflected on the success of the event they had been managing for 15 years.

"We were excited and gratified we had been able to pull off yet another spectacular event, but we were also exhausted," Wright recalled. "We knew it was time to bring in a new partner."

From that meeting came the determination that someone else needed to move into the driver's seat and steer this event for the next 15 or more years. The logical choices were native Grosse Pointers Robbie

Buhl, one of the founders of Racing For Kids, and his brother, Tom Buhl, who has co-chaired the event with local businessman Ed Russell, since it began in 2007.

So this year, under the "new" management of the Buhl brothers' company,

COURTESY PHOTOS

For Buhl Sport Detroit, Racing For Kids to the Hill will take place Wednesday, Aug. 31, and feature all the same elements that have led to it becoming the best-attended community event in Grosse Pointe.

The Buhl brothers have secured Fay Savage, another native Grosse Pointer, as this year's event manager, with the Racing For Kids team serving as consultants to ensure a smooth transition.

"We're keeping all the favorite features our guests love about the event, but with a few new features as well," Tom Buhl said.

The day-long event will begin with a street fair hosted by the Hill Association, which is free and open to the public from 11:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Included will be games for kids, music, refreshments, motorsport demonstrations, a classic car show and activities for the whole family. The Grosse Pointe News again will sponsor a scavenger hunt with local businesses and the College for Creative Studies will provide an art station for budding artists.

The evening VIP party and fundraiser will offer a cocktail reception and a live luxury auction on The Hill from 6 to 9 p.m. Funds raised will be distributed to four local children's hospitals and the Racing For Kids hospital visit program.

In 15 years, the event has raised in excess of $1.5 million with proceeds going to pediatric programs at Ascension St. John Children's Hospital, the Children's Hospital of Michigan Foundation, Henry Ford Health System and Beaumont Hospital, Grosse Pointe. Also included in this year's proceeds will be Detroit-based Teen Street Skills and its mission to create better, safer young drivers.

This year's gathering will feature gourmet fare from Dirty Dog Jazz Café, Bronze Door, Jumps, Café Nini, Luxe Bar & Grill, National Coney Island and Fresh Farms Market. There also will be signature cocktails and musical entertainment.

Once again the event will include the presentation of the annual Racing For Kids Courageous Kid Awards to three young people from the community who have shown amazing strength and determination in dealing with challenging health issues. Their names will be announced at a later date.

"We are very proud of the success of Racing For Kids to the Hill," said Wright, CEO of Racing For Kids. "We had 90 people at our first fundraiser in 2007. That number has grown to more than 650 people attending last year as The Hill event has become the popular community end-of-summer event.

"And our street fair, which attracted 200 kids and family members that first year, now welcomes more than 1,500 every year," he added. "So we look forward to working with the new managers, Buhl Sport Detroit, to carry on the Racing For Kids to The Hill tradition."

Only Racing For Kids to the Hill will be affected by the change in management; the Grosse Pointe-based Racing For Kids National Charity, now in its 33rd year of helping sick children through motorsports, will continue under present management and will host several hospital visits and Kids-at-the-Track events in 2022.

For more information or to inquire about sponsorship opportunities, visit racingforkids.org or call (313) 212-2483.

Music at Memorial presents rescheduled organ concert

Music at Memorial's 2021-22 season will conclude at 2 p.m. Sunday, May 22, with the rescheduled concert, "J.S. Bach Reimagined," featuring Grosse Pointe Memorial Church Minister of Music James Biery at the Klais pipe organ.

Three years before his death, Bach published six organ arrangements of movements from his own church cantatas; these are the famous "Schübler" chorales. Pursuing a "what if" scenario, Marilyn Biery created 10 more pieces for organ from music found in the Bach cantata repertoire. These "New Schübler Chorales" were published by Augsburg Fortress in 2020, and James Biery will play all of them.

Also on the program is a favorite of the organ repertoire, the Chorale in A minor by César Franck, commemorating the 200th anniversary of the composer's birth in 1822.

Tickets are $10 in advance, $15 at the door, and are available at the church reception desk or online at eventgroove.com. Search for Grosse Pointe Memorial Church.

May 1 concert tickets will be honored. The concert originally scheduled for May 22, "On With the Show," will be rescheduled during the 2022-23 concert season.

Lakeside Palette Club founder honored

The Lakeside Palette Club recently hosted a special recognition of its founder, Meta Srigley, during the club's 75th annual Spring Art Show and Sale.

Recently, Srigley's granddaughter, Diane Mangiante, reached out to the club after reading an article about the 75th anniversary this year. After several conversations, the LPC board worked quickly to create the Meta Srigley Founders Award for this event.

Criteria for this award was based on Srigley's love of nature, reflected in her many works of art.

A talented artist in a variety of media — oils, watercolors, pastels and ceramics — Srigley exhibited her work at the Scarab Club in Detroit.

In her remarks at the event, LPC President June Nash said, "The Meta Srigley Founders Award is given to the artist whose submission best celebrates the beauty of the natural world, which inspired so much of Meta's work."

The recipient of the first Meta Srigley Founders Award is artist Steve Grunis, for his oil painting, "Bald River Falls."

Though Grunis was unable to attend the event, the award was presented by Srigley's grandson, Tom Srigley, to LPC First Vice President Michelle Callow, who accepted the award on Grunis' behalf.

A total of 43 pieces were selected for this show, including watercolor, oil, acrylic, pastel and photography. The exhibit was juried by artist Adowa Muwzea, a visual artist and humanities professor at Wayne County Community College.

"I was really impressed with what I saw," Muwzea said at the ceremony. "It was not easy to decide which awards to give to which artist; my criteria essentially was that I could see from looking at some of them, the commitment that a particular artist had."

Artist Wendy Kohlmann was awarded first place for her photography submission "Inspirational View."

"I couldn't be happier that my submission was selected as the first-place winner," she said. "There are so many outstanding entries in this show and I'm proud to be part of such an amazing group of artists."

About her first-place selection for the show, Muwzea said it is a "lovely subject of flowers and the beloved Monarch butterfly. How colorful and skillfully the artist captured the image."

The 2022 Spring Art Show and Sale award winners included:

First Place: Wendy Kohlmann, "Inspirational View" (photography)
Meta Srigley Founders

Award: Steve Grunis, "Bald River Falls" (oil)

Second Place: Diane Harris, "Annabell Pouting" (watercolor)

Third Place: Tom Sherry, "Weeds and Sun" (photography)

Exhibition offers insights into Gen Z

"Wow, this is kids' art?" a visitor questioned as she surveyed the walls of the Grosse Pointe Artists Association gallery in The War Memorial. She stayed almost an hour viewing the 65 pieces by students from area high schools.

The public is welcome to visit the sixth annual Promising Artists exhibition. The show is open for in-person viewing from 4 to 7 p.m. Thursdays and 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturdays, through June 2. The show also may be previewed on the Artists Association website, grossepointheadcenter.org.

The annual exhibition is designed to give high school students the experience of entering a juried art show. Using Entrythingy software, they fill out information about their work and upload a digital file of it for the juror to see. To ensure impartiality, the software screens out any personal information from the entry before showing it to the juror, who scores each piece for originality and technique.

For this show, there were more than 100 entries for the juror to view. The software ranks the pieces according to the juror's scores and the exhibition committee responsible for hanging the show decides how many of the ranked pieces will fit in the gallery space.

For the first time, a "graduate" of the program served as a juror. Building on his experience as a Promising Artist, Bryan Wilson began entering gallery shows around Michigan. Last year, he took home second-place awards in the Grosse Pointe Artists Association's "Have Your Say" exhibition and the Huron Art Collective's "Fall Juried Exhibition."

Wilson was assisted by Maria D'Agostini, an experienced gallery manager who has an undergraduate degree in art history and a master's degree in arts administration, both from Wayne State University.

The following are the award winners in the sixth annual Promising Artists exhibition.

ASK THE EXPERTS By Cass Ghiorse

Fighting off the 'Sunday Scaries'

Q: Halfway through Sunday, I'm already dreading Monday. How do I fight the Sunday Scaries?

A: Even if you've never heard the phrase "Sunday Scaries," you probably have experienced them. You've had a nice weekend, but Sunday afternoon an eerie feeling starts to creep in. Your mind starts thinking anxiously about the week ahead — your email inbox, your to-do list and your appointments. You feel overwhelmed, like you've run out of time before you even get started, and you're already counting down the moments until the next weekend.

Many of us suffer from anticipation, apprehension and dread when facing the looming workweek. A recent study on LinkedIn showed that 80 percent of workplace professionals feel some sort of discomfort Sunday night. In other words, you're not alone.

The good news is this cycle is reversible and even preventable. The truth is our minds are bossy and unruly. It is up to us to be aware of our thoughts and learn how to control them.

Here is a practice that can help:

1. Awareness and Recognition

Sit in a comfortable, quiet place. Set a timer for three minutes, put pen to paper and do a thought download. Write out everything you are thinking — what you're looking forward to and what you're dreading. Nothing is too small or silly. Name it. Getting it out on paper gets it out of your head.

2. Inquiry

Look over your writing. How does reading this download make you feel? What sensations are these thoughts giving you? Are they helping you? Are they necessary? Question with curiosity, not judgment.

3. Reframing

When thoughts feel big or scary, your brain recognizes this negative thought pattern and wants to perpetuate the cycle because it's familiar. To break the cycle of doomsday thinking, notice the thought, breathe into your body and ask yourself direct and simple reframing questions, like, "How do I want to feel tomorrow?" Naming the feeling will help you choose your next steps.

4. Empowered Action

Once you know how you want to feel, take action that reflects that feeling. For example, if you want to feel "prepared," take a few simple steps that will make you feel ready for Monday. Write out your schedule. Plan something fun to look forward to. Pack your bag and set it by the door. If you work from home, tidy your workspace. Schedule time for a walk with a friend or set aside time for a funny podcast.

Now that you've taken these steps, come back into the moment. It's still Sunday. Take five deep breaths. Settle into your body and environment. Enjoy your Sunday evening knowing you are prepared for the week.

The Pulse Of The Pointes

Bully coach who uses guilt tactics

Dear Gabby: My kids each have several sports and sometimes they conflict and we have to choose one over the other.

We have one coach who doesn't understand and bullies us and makes our one son feel guilty for missing his games, any advice on how to deal with him?

— Bullied in Grosse Pointe Park

Dear Bullied,
Gabby: Sports these days are uber competitive and each coach expects 100 percent effort from their athletes. That I can understand.

However, if he wants your child on the team — bullying clearly isn't the answer.

When your child is playing on multiple teams and loves more than one sport, this is something that should be clearly communicated to the coach before you join the team to try to avoid this type of situation.

At this point, I would advise a meeting with the current coach and outline exactly when you will be there and when you won't — as well as a directive to speak with you, the parents, rather than your child. I would try to get through the season as painlessly as possible.

12-year-old: Jeez that guy needs to get a life.

Dad: I'd like to have a word with that coach. He can try to make me feel bad (won't work) and leave my son alone.

Nora Nanny: I thought the point of sports as a child is to be exposed to as much as possible. Also that kind of negative pressure coming from a coach is a terrible thing — and can ruin a sport for someone for life. I would definitely speak with the coach, clear the air and make sure he's not putting any more pressure on your child.

We love problem-solving and giving advice! Please send us your questions & problems to advice@grossepointenews.com.

Father-of-the-bride's new wife is excluded from wedding

Dear Ann Landers: My 32-year-old daughter is getting married for the second time. My daughter and I have a good relationship, but my ex-wife and I barely speak.

She and my daughter made all the wedding preparations and paid for the whole thing without any assistance from me.

I received a wedding invitation, but it excluded my fiancee, "Greta."

Greta and I have been together for the past six years. During this time, my daughter has visited us often and always seemed comfortable with the relationship.

Greta is very hurt and angry that she was not invited to the wedding. She asked me to speak to my daughter about the "oversight" and said that if no invitation was forthcoming, I should not go to the wedding, either.

I spoke to my daughter, who told me it was the expressed desire of her mother, my ex-wife, not to invite Greta.

My daughter receives a lot of financial help from her mother and is obviously reluctant to go against her wishes.

What should I do? If I attend the wedding alone,

Greta will think I let her down.

If I don't go at all,

my daughter will assume I favor my fiancee over her and will be crushed. Any suggestions would be appreciated. — Dad in Bonita, Calif.

Dear Dad: Greta should have been invited to the wedding, since she has been your significant other for six years. She was not invited, however, which means she is not welcome. It would be classy of Greta to say, "Go — have a good time, and bring me a piece of wedding cake." If she does not choose to be gracious, go anyway. This is your daughter's day, and her wish to have you there takes precedence.

Dear Ann Landers: I have two sons. My older son, "Randall," is unmarried. Last year, he had to give up his apartment when his lease ran out, so for several months, he lived with his younger brother, "Eddie," and his wife, "Gussie."

I accidentally overheard a conversation and learned that Randall and Gussie were having an affair. I immediately told Eddie what was going on. He promptly confronted his wife and brother. They confessed everything.

Now, all three of them are angry with me. Eddie has finally started to speak to me again after months of silence, but Gussie still won't talk to me. That doesn't bother me much because I never liked her. Meanwhile, Randall hasn't said one word to me since the affair.

Was I wrong to tell Eddie about the affair? I couldn't bear to see my younger son being made a fool of by his wife, and I didn't think it was right for Randall to be involved with her under any circumstances.

It breaks my heart that my children are so upset with me. Is there any way to fix this? — A Sorry Mom in Iowa

Dear Sorry Mom: While your moral stance was understandable, you created a great deal of animosity, and it will take time to repair the damage. You owe an apology to Randall, Eddie and Gussie (even though you don't like her).

I suggest that you drop a note to each of them and ask for forgiveness. This should serve as a lesson to you. Vow to carry no more tales. Sometimes, they kill the messenger.

Woman faces uncertainty in marriage, health and future

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for 14 years and have two kids. Our youngest is 11.

For the last nine years, it has been a loveless marriage. Luckily, he works a lot, but when he's home, I stay in my bedroom.

The only thing we do together is eat dinner. Our kids are thriving in school, and I worry that leaving will hurt them terribly. Should I wait until our youngest graduates?

I am 47 and have multiple sclerosis that is slowly progressing. I do not have family and friends for support.

Could I be even more lonely if I leave? The thought of divorce feels overwhelming, but I feel like life is passing me by.

Hoping you can point me in the right direction. — LIVING IN LIMBO IN MISSOURI

DEAR LIVING: I wish you had mentioned what it was nine years ago that created a rift between you and your husband.

If it was your diagnosis, it is truly regrettable. In the interim, have you tried talking about this with a marriage and family therapist? If the answer is no, you should.

I am concerned about the degree of isolation you are feeling. The National Multiple Sclerosis Society (nationalsociety.org) offers virtual and in-person support groups that might benefit you greatly.

Divorcing one's spouse is not a guarantee that one's loneliness will end, as many divorced women and men can attest.

The National MS Society may be able to provide what you need right now.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are expecting our first child. We are over the moon about it, and have lots of support from family and friends near and far.

My husband's family lives in another state and would need to fly to visit us. His parents are separated, and elderly.

I love his mother dearly, but I have an issue with her best friend, "Myra." Myra has always been passive-aggressive. She makes things difficult and makes rude, snide comments.

My mother-in-law plans to travel to meet our new baby, but she wants Myra to be her travel companion.

Abby, after the stress and exhaustion of delivering a baby and any postpartum aftermath, plus the desire to keep our circle small due to COVID, I do not want to see Myra in the first few months after delivery.

I have no issues with my mother-in-law, and don't want to prohibit her from seeing her new grandchild. But she refuses to travel alone.

Am I going too far in saying I won't be up for visiting with her snide best friend? — PREGNANT IN PENNSYLVANIA

Ultimate spring salad

Coming up with recipes can be challenging at times. I start my week out with an idea but by the end of the week the idea has completely evolved and changed.

Sometimes, that's the best way to have the best idea. Sometimes, you just need to sit and think for a bit.

I wanted to bring you an optimum spring salad. And somehow, it turned into a protein packed, vegetarian, hearty dish.

It's filled with fresh ingredients that you can find anywhere and takes very little time to make.

I chose quinoa, garbanzo beans and almonds for protein. Sugar snap peas, scallions, radishes, mint and a lemony vinaigrette make it taste so sunny.

To add a bit of comfort, I've included feta. Once again, the mint elevates and perfumes the entire dish. It's a healthy and hearty spring lunch that I hope you will give a try.

Cheers, Mombeau

Spring Salad

1 cup quinoa	$\frac{3}{4}$ cups toasted, sliced almonds
2 cups water	Lemon Vinaigrette
$\frac{1}{4}$ tsp salt	Juice of 2 lemons
1 16 oz can garbanzo beans, washed	1 tbsp dijon mustard
2 big handfuls of sugar snap peas	2 tbsp honey
4 radishes	2 minced garlic cloves
3 scallions	$\frac{1}{4}$ cup olive oil
1-2 tbsp freshly chopped mint	Vinaigrette:
2 tbsp chopped parsley	In a small bowl whisk all ingredients, except olive oil, until combined. Slowly drizzle in the oil until everything is combined.

Salad:

Bring the water and salt to a boil and add the quinoa.

Simmer on low for 15 minutes and set off the heat for another 5 minutes.

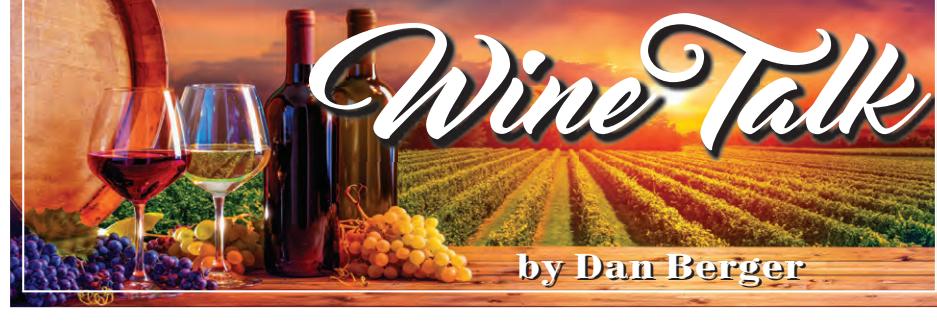

Let the quinoa cool. Meanwhile, start preparing the vegetables.

Wash and slice the sugar snap peas into thirds and the radishes into circles. Wash and chop the scallops.

the remaining ingredients with the dressing. Toss to combine. It's great at room temperature and better the next day.

California crush report

Most consumers are well aware of how impacted they are by inflation — and each industry that has to explain why its prices have gone up has a slightly different explanation.

Whether it's supply chain issues, trucking problems, delays at sea, raw material shortages or labor issues, none are the only reasons. Several explanations apply to each industry.

What's most obvious, of course, are gasoline price rises, which impact almost everyone; petrol is one of the vital essentials to our normal life activities.

And as wine is an optional luxury for most people, seeing prices climb for our favorite vinous products may be hard to accept, but price increases don't represent a life-and-death situation.

And so, it was interesting last month when the California Department of Food and Agriculture (CDFA) released its preliminary grape crush report. One result of that report was seeing Buckle up! Gas prices, pandemic-induced labor shortages and Mother Nature have created financial strain for both wineries and grape growers, which will be passed on to the consumer.

how high prices for wine grapes have moved upward as a result of several factors that most industry observers could see coming.

Devastating fires, pandemic-induced labor shortages and Mother Nature's usual persnickety-ness over the last four years all created difficult situations for both wineries and grape growers.

This will have the effect of causing them all to face the reality that no one will make as much money in 2022 as they did in the last few years. And next year won't be a picnic either.

Disparity between wine prices and grape prices was subject to strange economic analytics after the pandemic-imposed restrictions forced wine salespeople to adapt to new models and new strategies and to face new realities.

As a result, some wineries actually saw revenues increase in 2021 over normal periods, partly due to creative direct-to-consumer sales strategies.

However, prices for wine grapes continued to rise, according to the net. But regardless of variety, we can use an old formula to see what's ahead for retail pricing.

Traditionally, the price of a bottle of wine is linked to its grape price by a simple formula. The shelf price roughly equates to 1 percent of the grape price. In this case, the average bottle of Napa Valley wine should be about $61.

Offsetting that, to a small degree, is that growers almost universally said the crop quality was exceptional.

By contrast, even though Sonoma County grape prices rose 10 percent over the prior year, the average price of a ton of grapes translates to an average bottle price of about $26.

And most local wine lovers suggest that Sonoma County produces some exceptionally high-quality wines. And Sonoma has more wine to sell than does Napa.

Sonoma's vineyard plantings exceed Napa's 45,000 acres of vines by an additional 15,000 acres.

What also was interesting in the report was that the one area of California that seemed to be spared enormous price increases was Santa Barbara County.

In 2021, the average price for a ton of wine grapes in Napa was almost 33 percent higher than the year before, to $6,091! The average ton of grapes yields about 150 gallons of juice, or roughly 70 cases of wine.

It is for that reason that we selected the following wine for its astoundingly good value.

Wine of the Week: 2019 Huntington Pinot Noir, Santa Barbara County ($26) — Pali Wine Co.'s Huntington brand of pinot is a blend from several vineyards in the prestigious Santa Rita Hills appellation. This wine reminded me of one that probably could sell for about twice as much, based on its remarkable quality. It has a trace of the distinctive central coast dried herbs, is more reflective of its fruit than of any production values, such as oak, and will probably improve for several years. It has often been seen for around $23, and at that price is an absolute steal.

Sunday Funday!

Mother and daughter duo, Ruth "Mopsi" Gowman and Kate Gowman, have designated Sunday Funday to celebrate each other and explore metro Detroit within an hour's drive.

Mother's Day, May 8, provided the perfect weather and opportunity to get out and explore.

Our Mother's Day!

What better way to begin a beautiful sunny Mother's Day than on the terrace of The Continental restaurant overlooking the cove of the Edsel & Eleanor Ford House in Grosse Pointe Shores.

We enjoyed a fabulous brunch; Kate's custom omelette and my decadent mixed berries and cream french toast were both excellent.

Because of its extraordinary landscaping, the grounds of the estate are home to a large variety of birds, each with its own song. Currently there is an exhibition from local photographers of the "Birds of Gaukler Point."

Since we both enjoy art, our next stop was the Grosse Pointe News' "Finer Pointes" art contest on Kercheval. The former Scott Shuptrine store provided the perfect gallery for inspiring art. What fun to be part of selecting the winning entries, which will be announced May 14. Our compliments to the talented artists who entered; the exhibit is impressive.

Now on to a "hidden" treasure: Patterson Park in Grosse Pointe Park. The luscious landscaping has just come to life and the park offers a serene and tranquil opportunity to totally relax.

We found a comfortable bench on the beautiful, lengthy boardwalk close to the waves and boating activities of our lake. What a special place to open my Mother's Day gifts.

Hoping you are inspired to embrace life around you. Follow us for more adventures.

We Tried It!

Lately when I watch TV, every cool girl has the winged eyeliner look. When I noticed Sienna Miller wearing it in "Anatomy of a Scandal"—amazing show, by the way—I got even more interested. I really like it, but figured it was way above my makeup-applying skill level.

Cue the "Flick Stick" ad that was served up to me on Facebook. It's a stamp and it's foolproof, you say?! Waterproof and smudge-proof?

Naturally, I had to try it. With more than 27,000 great reviews, this seemed like a slam dunk. When the package arrived, I realized there is one stamp/liner for each eye. It took me two tries to make it look right. The first time my "wing" was way too vertical and looked ridiculous. A quick swipe of some eye makeup remover, another try and voila! A perfectly sized and positioned wing!

The final step is to use the other side of the Flick Stick to line your eyelid and connect it to the wing you have just stamped on.

This part is surprisingly easy given my skill level (beginner). I really like the look and the result.

The wing is not outrageous at all and is totally appropriate for work or going out.

I have to give Flick Stick 5 stars. It's easy to apply, under $15 and is exactly what I was hoping for.

Note: I ordered the 10mm "classic" wing stamp, but you can get a mini or a larger one as well. If you order this, I hope you like it as much as I do!

We LOVE testing out new things! Tell us about your favorite item or something you want us to try for you! Drop us a line at media@grossepoincenews.com.

MOVIE REVIEW "Love & Mercy"

2014 - PG-13
2 hr 1min

I enjoyed this very engaging and entertaining biopic about Brian Wilson. For those not familiar with him, he's the leader and songwriting genius behind The Beach Boys, the seminal California surf-rock band. The group was hugely popular in the 1960s and early 70s, rivaling The Beatles, if you can imagine that.

In this film, Paul Dano plays the younger Brian, while John Cusack plays the older version of him. It may seem odd for two actors to play the same role, and Cusack seems to be an unusual choice, since he looks nothing like Brian Wilson or Paul Dano. However, I think he did a brilliant job depicting the troubled side of Brian.

The movie gives us a behind the scenes look into the creation of some of the band's megahits.

We see the young Brian crafting what would become the album Pet Sounds, considered by some critics one of the greatest recordings of all time. A lot of time is devoted to him in the studio, working with an orchestra to cobble together his visionary concept.

There are plenty of scenes of the band just goofing around as well. They could almost be MTV music videos if they had existed at the time.

It's also during this period, the late 60s, when Brian's demons catch up with him. He suffered from schizoaffective disorder and manic depression, which were complicated by his relationship with an abusive father.

Brian admits at one point that not only did his dad emotionally torment him, he smacked his head so frequently, it resulted in a partial loss of hearing in one ear.

Dano does a remarkable role playing the distressed Brian, and we get a sense of the torture he was going through at the time.

When we first encounter the 1980s version of Brian (Cusack), he visits a Cadillac dealership, looking to buy a car. There he encounters Melinda Ledbetter (Elizabeth Banks), an attractive young salesperson, who is unaware of who he is.

He purchases the car on the spot, and this is the beginning of their relationship.

Critics have questioned the choice of Cusack to play this role. I personally felt he delivered an Oscar-worthy performance. His facial expressions, the way he speaks, even the awkward way he holds his arms at his side while he walks down the street, perfectly capture an affected man.

by Mark Domin

The film jumps back and forth in time to tell the story. The fact that two actors are used helps the viewer avoid confusion, since the transitions are rather abrupt at times.

It's during the later time period when we meet Dr. Eugene Landy (Paul Giamatti), a psychotherapist, or more accurately, a quack, who the band hired to treat Brian. He has total control of Wilson's life, including his finances, where he goes and who he sees, what he does in the studio, and the medications he takes. From the sounds of it, Brian was heavily overmedicated. This certainly didn't help his condition.

When Melinda gets wind of what a control freak and a monster Landry really is, she works to loosen his grasp on Brian.

I've read that Wilson was consulted during the making of this film, and during the initial screening, was unsettled seeing Giamatti's depiction of Dr. Landy. I too found him to be super creepy, quite a different role for this multi-faceted actor.

The title "Love & Mercy" is the name of a Brian Wilson song, and we see him perform it live in concert at the end of the film. It's a perfect closing number and a great way to wrap things up.

For several days after seeing this movie, I found myself humming a couple of the Beach Boys hits. It brought back a flood of memories from my childhood, especially listening to my little transistor radio under my pillow at night. If you're of a certain age, perhaps it'll have the same effect on you!

My rating system:

★ A real stinker. A movie that is so bad, you're embarrassed to admit you've seen it, but you have to rate it nonetheless.

★★ So-so. Not a total waste of time, but you would have been better off reading a good book.

★★★★ Pretty good. In fact, if there weren't any other movies in your queue, you might watch it again.

★★★★★ One you'd recommend to friends.

★★★★★★ So good you'd actually go out and buy it!

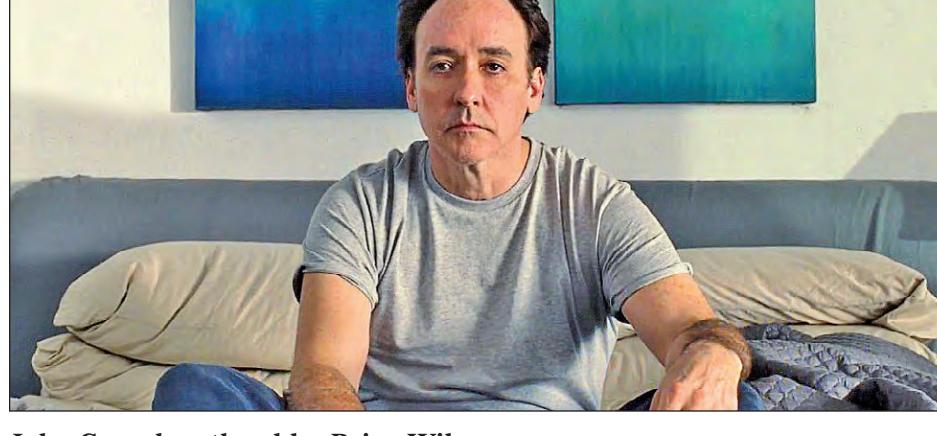

About this column:
My main focus is on films that I feel have gone under the radar and deserve more recognition.

Cadillac CT5-V Blackwing 120th anniversary edition debuts and minutes later is auctioned off

This year marks the 120th Anniversary of the Cadillac brand. To celebrate, Cadillac is proud to expand the Collector's Series with the introduction of the 2023 Cadillac CT5-V Blackwing 120th Anniversary Edition.

The 120th Anniversary Edition is limited to 120 cars, each uniquely numbered with a year in Cadillac's history. Car 1902, the first in this new Collector's Series, represents the founding year of Cadillac.

The opportunity to own the first 120th Anniversary Edition raised $250,000 at the Barrett-Jackson Palm Beach auction. Cadillac donated the full hammer price to the SAE Foundation, whose goal is to increase access to world-class STEM experiences for students around the world. As they do with all charity sales, Barrett-Jackson waived all fees and commissions for the auction of Car 1902.

"Everyone at Cadillac is thrilled with this auction result. We proudly support the SAE Foundation and are grateful to Barrett-Jackson for providing this opportunity," said Rory Harvey, vice president, Global Cadillac. "We will help create a new sustainability focused challenge for high-school students across the country, as well as provide hands-on immersive STEM learning for students in under-resourced communities."

The Cadillac CT5-V Blackwing 120th Anniversary Edition celebrates Cadillac's 120-year heritage as an iconic luxury brand, with exclusive features that make each vehicle a one-of-one creation:

- VIN serialization of commemorative year between 1902-2022.

- Unique sill plate with the Cadillac Crest design from commemorative year.

- B-pillar builders' plate with graphic and commemorative year.

- Shifter medallion (for cars equipped with manual transmission) with 120th anniversary commemoration.

- Steering wheel plate with commemorative year.

- Certificate of authenticity.

- Spring Mountain V-Performance Academy driving experience.

"The second edition of the Collector's Series celebrates storytelling and craftsmanship for the discerning individual," said Brandon Vivian, Cadillac executive chief engineer. "The 120th Anniversary of Cadillac is represented by unique content celebrating each individual year in the 120 years of Cadillac innovation."

Henry Leland founded Cadillac in 1902, and his expertise in advanced machining revolutionized the auto industry to establish the brand as the Standard of the World. Through the decades, Cadillac defined new standards in design, technological innovation and quality to cement its status as an American luxury icon.

Bred to perform on and off the track

Leveraging the brand's championship-winning racing heritage to create the most track-capable Cadillacs ever built, the V-Series Blackwing models represent the pinnacle of Cadillac performance, technology and craftsmanship.

The CT5-V Blackwing is the most powerful and fastest Cadillac production model in history — with a top track speed of more than 200 mph — while the CT4-V Blackwing is the most powerful and fastest-ever Cadillac subcompact.

Under their hoods, the CT5-V Blackwing uses an upgraded and hand-assembled 6.2L supercharged V-8 rated at 668 horsepower (498 kW) and 659 lb-ft of torque (893 Nm), while an evolution of the Cadillac 3.6L Twin-Turbo V-6 drives the CT4-V Blackwing, rated at 472 hp (352 kW) and 445 lb-ft of torque (603 Nm).

Every V-Series Blackwing offers a standard six-speed manual gearbox or an available 10-speed paddle-shift automatic transmission. Both models also feature advanced, extensively track- and road-tested high-performance braking systems. The CT5-V Blackwing features the largest factory-installed brakes in Cadillac history, along with an available lightweight carbon-ceramic brake package that offers weight savings, durability and heat management.

2023 Cadillac CT5-V Blackwing 120th anniversary edition shifter.

The opportunity to own the first 2023 Cadillac CT5-V Blackwing 120th anniversary edition raised $250,000 at the Barrett-Jackson Palm Beach auction.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

You will find that you express yourself more forcefully when talking to friends and members of groups today. Because you can do this so easily, you will make a strong impression on someone!

(If you see the hair blowing back over their ears, take it easy.) Tonight: Be agreeable.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

A discussion with a parent or boss will be powerful today. Be careful you don't cross a line and threaten them in any way, because you will be forceful.

You want to get things done, and you want to move quickly! Nevertheless, remember that you catch more flies with honey than vinegar. Tonight: Work.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

You might want to avoid subjects like politics, religion and racial issues today, because these will be buttons that could trigger arguments with others. This is because you're coming on like gangbusters, even if you don't realize it.

Note: Someone else might come on just as strong! This is a recipe for a fight.

Tonight: You're on a roll!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

Today the Sun in your sign is dancing with big daddy Pluto, which gives you a powerful energy to look around you and decide what needs to be changed or improved.

Do you need to introduce reforms into your daily world? You can make these changes rather easily now. Tonight: Study.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

Today your ruler Mercury is retrograde, dancing with lucky Jupiter, which means you have lots of optimistic, hopeful energy to finish projects that you have already started.

Your hopes and wishes are more important to you today. Write down your plans for the future.

Tonight: Get a bead on where you're headed.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

Today you might attract someone to you who is very powerful. ("Hi, Darth.") Nevertheless, you will also be powerful, so express yourself with care.

and good judgment. This is an excellent day to join forces with someone to investigate something. Tonight: Trust yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

Today you're gung-ho to introduce reforms to improve your health. Meanwhile, some will use this same energy to introduce reforms to your job or how you do your work. The bottom line is you intend to make things better! Tonight: Enjoy shopping.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

Whether you are in sports, the arts or music, be aware that today is an excellent day to practice something. That's because you will get better results for your efforts than you usually would. Practice dance, arpeggios, catching a ball, batting, martial arts — whatever. Tonight: Express yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

You will see ways to introduce improvements to where you live today, especially in areas related to plumbing, bathrooms, garbage and recycling. Meanwhile, in a family discussion, a secret might come out. Or you might suspect that a secret exists. Tonight: Do research.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

You are super convincing today when talking to others, which makes this a strong day for those in sales, marketing, teaching, acting and writing. Personally, you might want to determine what motivates you. What changes do you need to make? Tonight: Set goals.

ace is that virtually all players have learned in one way or another that leading away from an ace against a suit contract will prove to be a losing proposition in the great majority of deals. You should therefore play the six of hearts from dummy at trick one, dismissing the unlikely possibility of West's having the ace.

East wins the heart with the queen and cashes the ace, but he is then at a dead end. Whatever he returns, the only other trick you can lose is the ace of diamonds. You don't lose a club trick because your clubs can eventually be discarded on dummy's diamonds.

Now let's suppose that you imprudently played the king of hearts from dummy at trick one. In that case, good defense would defeat you.

East takes the ace, but instead of cashing the queen, he returns a low heart! He does not have to be a genius to do this. East realizes that if you had the jack, you would have played low from dummy at trick one rather than put up the king.

West wins the heart at trick two and shifts to a club, and in the fullness of time you go down one.

South wins 8th straight MAC Red title

By Mike Adzima
Sports Reporter

Looking at the legacy of girls tennis at Grosse Pointe South, it is impossible to deny the program is one of the most successful in the history of the state. The Blue Devils took one of the first steps in continuing that winning tradition last week when they secured the MAC Red Division title for the eighth season in a row.

Winning the division for an eighth consecutive time may make it feel like commonplace at this point, but this year's title seemed extra special. South's four opponents in the Red are all highly ranked teams in Division 1, according to the Michigan High School Tennis Coaches Association. Having to fight through some of the toughest competition in the state just to win the division made a statement on just how badly the Blue Devils want to win.

"There's a lot of parity in the conference this year," South coach Mark Sobieralski said.

"Romeo, Port Huron Northern and Eisenhower are all ranked in the top 10 in Division 1 and are all in our league. We dropped to Division 2 for the first time and are ranked third. ... It was so close and we came out on top with no ties. We just beat everybody."

Competing in Division 2 this spring is a first for South's girls tennis program. The team has won 15 state championships in its history, conquering Division 1 most recently in 2019.

Taking the state championship has become a top priority for the Blue Devils, given the program's consistency and history of success. Winning the MAC Red usually is just an extra cherry on top. However, Sobieralski thinks his players knowing the historic goals of the program helped them overcome tough tests in the division this year that made this MAC Red title mean more.

"They know the history of the program and that we've won more Division 1 championships than any program in the state," he said. "That's our expectation every year. Usually we put our state finish ahead of the MAC Red title in terms of our goals, but this year it was different and special because of all the ranked teams in our league."

Sobieralski and the Blue Devils are no strangers to regularly facing tough competition. Having a group of strong teams in the MAC Red this year was an added bonus to the team's already rigorous schedule.

South is used to facing the state's top teams and it has been that way for years. That is true especially this time of year when it becomes late in the regular season. Sobieralski isn't shy about putting his team up against the best, knowing his players can stand up to the challenge.

"What I usually do is start off facing decent teams to help the kids build up some confidence," Sobieralski said. "Then I make our schedules brutal at the end of the year. Every team we're playing is ranked really high. ... I kept a lot of strong D1 teams on our schedule, but made sure we got all the good D2 teams too. ... We have a very veteran team and they know every Saturday we're going to be playing some of the best teams in the state."

The regular season is winding down for the MAC Red champs, who are now turning their focus to regionals and the state championship. Regionals are set to take place on Thursday at Grosse Pointe North, with the state championships scheduled for June 2 and 3 in Holland.

Athlete of the Week

By Mike Adzima

Despite growing up in an athletic family, Ella Maltby never imagined she one day would be a future college athlete.

"I had been a dancer for like my entire life," said Maltby, a senior at Grosse Pointe North. "I had grown up around sports because of my dad playing for the Red Wings and stuff. ... When I got to fourth grade, I started up lacrosse. I never stopped loving the sport since."

Maltby also has spent the past few fall seasons as a member of the Norsemen's field hockey team. In both sports, Maltby specializes in being a leader on offense. Using her skills and athleticism to find the net and give her teams a spark is what she is all about.

"I've always been a her love for lacrosse and other sports is what has brought her to where she is today. Maltby is a senior and leader of North's girls lacrosse team, averaging just above one goal per game this season.

Maltby picked up lacrosse in fourth grade and played for many years before playing in high school for the Norsemen. Field hockey is a bit of a different story, as Maltby wasn't introduced to the sport until she got to North.

Over the last few years, Maltby has developed as much of a love for field hockey as she has for lacrosse. One thing that stands out to her about field hockey is the uniqueness of the sport. Field hockey has become like second nature to Maltby and she describes it as a sport unlike any other.

"It's not a very well-known sport," she said. "It's like nothing else because the rules aren't a copy of lacrosse or hockey or anything like that. It has its own rules and its own lines on the field. The positioning is different. There's no face-off. You either get the ball or you don't."

Field hockey may have been the latest sport Maltby picked up, but it turned out to be the sport that would launch her on her way to becoming a college athlete. She began getting notice for her skills in field hockey during the fall, while also remaining a passionate lacrosse player in the spring.

Maltby will attend Concordia University Wisconsin after graduating from North and will play both field hockey and lacrosse. Field hockey helped get her noticed and being able to also play lacrosse at the next level was an added bonus. Overall, Maltby never thought she would be in the position to be a college athlete, let alone a multi-sport one.

"I joined a travel team in field hockey and would go to tournaments," she said. "Coaches would introduce themselves to me and tell me, 'You really have something going for you.' ... I was unsure about it at first because I was really invested in another school at the time. ... Then the Concordia Wisconsin lacrosse coach reached out to me saying that they saw I've played lacrosse. ... It was very random and it never would've crossed my mind that I'd be a dual-sport athlete in college."

While she gets ready to head off to college for field hockey and lacrosse, Maltby still carries her longtime dream of being a dancer and actress on Broadway. No matter what she does, Maltby is driven with a passion to lead.

That passion has helped her this season with North's lacrosse team. The Norsemen have been struggling and Maltby is a veteran on a roster with plenty of young and inexperienced players. Even though losses can be discouraging, Maltby's leadership is helping her and her teammates remain positive and taking lessons from both the good and the bad.

"I give a lot of tips and tricks to the girls no matter if they're a freshman or even a senior," Maltby said. "They're all really positive and want to do as well in the sport as possible."

The passion and effort she brings to everything she does makes Maltby a perfect example of an ideal high school athlete. It is that same passion

Golfers swing through spring

By Mike Adzima
Sports Reporter

The final weeks of the spring boys golf season are here and high school teams from around the Pointes have been busy with plenty of matches and tournaments as playoffs approach. The squads from Grosse Pointe North, Grosse Pointe South and University Liggett School have been competing against each other in various events while the regular season winds down.

The Knights, Blue Devils and Norsemen were all on the course at the Blue Devil Invitational earlier this month on May 2. It was a special day as the teams got to experience a round at the Country Club of Detroit while facing off with some of the best competition from around the area.

Liggett took second place in the event, finishing just two strokes behind first-place Ann Arbor Greenhills. Junior Sean Sullivan led the way for Liggett with a score of 77. Seniors Jack Estes and Bennett French each shot 78, while freshmen Charlie Cooksey and Steve McMahon scored 81 and 87, respectively.

Finishing in sixth place at their own invitational were the Blue Devils, with senior Alex Blyth posting the team's low score of 76. The Norsemen were 11th as senior Niko Karoutsos shot a 73.

North and South met again just a few days later, May 6, as part of the Shorian-Husky Invitational at the St. Clair Shores Country Club. The Norsemen and Blue Devils finished in fifth and sixth place, respectively, with North edging out South by a total of three strokes.

Karoutsos once again was the low scorer for the Norsemen with a 72 for the round. Evan Burney shot an 84, while junior Nicholas Fleming finished at 85, to round out North's top three golfers in the invitational.

For South, junior Evan Brown led the way with a low score of 81. Hayden Crane was two strokes behind as the sophomore shot 83. Seniors Jack Jones, 85, and Ryan Bernard, 86, rounded out the field for the Blue Devils.

The Blue Devils continued their run of tournaments last Monday, May 9, when they traveled to the Flint Golf Club for the Charger Invitational hosted by Flint Powers Catholic. The hosts were victorious in the tournament, with South finishing fourth out of more than a dozen teams.

Sophomores Thomas Ciconte and Brennan Sullivan led the way for the Blue Devils with respective scores of 79 and 80. William Jordan ended the day at 87, while Blyth and Evan Brown each shot 88.

"Now the team's focus is on the playoffs," South coach Rob McIntyre said as the regular season nears a close. "We'll be focusing on hard work ahead. It's through this work that our potential will be realized."

Championship tournament Monday. Liggett finished third in the division out of 10 teams, with Everest Collegiate taking first place in the division tournament.

Estes and Sullivan for the Knights tied for the team's low score of the day, each shooting 81. Cooksey finished at 83, as did junior Leo Pampalona. McMahon was right behind at 84, while French rounded out the group with a 99.

Liggett continues the season next Wednesday, May 25, with a match against Ann Arbor Gabriel Richard at Ann Arbor's Leslie Park Golf Course. South is in action this Friday and Saturday at the Big Rapids Invitational at Ferris State University, while North gets ready for the MAC Tournament May 25, at Katke Cousins Golf Course.

Baseball teams enter home stretch

By Mike Adzima

Grosse Pointe South

The Blue Devils baseball team had an important stretch of MAC Red Division games over the past week to help decide its fate in the standings as the regular season nears a close. South picked up three key wins and ensured itself at least a share of the MAC Red title.

The team hit the road last Wednesday for a division contest at Dakota, which ended in an 8-6 victory. South went down 1-0 early, but an RBI double by River Kraus in the third inning tied the game. The Blue Devils then exploded for five runs in the fourth inning and added two more before the seventh and final inning. The Cougars almost mounted a comeback, scoring five times in the seventh to cut down South's lead, but the Blue Devils hung on.

Hunter Belanger led the way for the Blue Devils on offense with four RBI that came from a grand slam in the team's big fourth inning. Robbie Leonard pitched 6 and 1-3 innings on the mound and surrendered six runs on seven hits. Coming in for relief was Wells Graham, who allowed two hits but kept runs off the board to end the seventh.

South and Dakota met again on Thursday with the Blue Devils hosting. Connor Stafford and Cliff Grabowski powered the Blue Devils' bats forward with a pair of RBIs each in a 6-2 win that completed a three-game sweep of Dakota.

South went back on the road Monday to Utica Eisenhower and brought the offensive fireworks. Tallying 13 total hits, the Blue Devils trounced Eisenhower 12-0 to earn the victory that would guarantee them at least a share of the MAC Red.

Graham had five RBIs on the day for South while going a perfect 4-for-4 at the plate. Joey McEvoy brought in three runs and Belanger knocked in a pair as well.

Chase Mazey tossed a gem on the mound to shutout Eisenhower, spending all five innings on the mound and allowing only three hits.

The Blue Devils and Eisenhower continue their MAC Red series this week on Wednesday and Thursday. South then hosts Mount Pleasant, Portage Northern and crosstown rivals Grosse Pointe North on Saturday as part of the Grosse Pointe Invitational.

Grosse Pointe North
North continued to hold its narrow lead on the top of the MAC White and is drawing closer to clinching at least a share of the division. The Norsemen split their most recent games in the division, taking a loss and a win to help pull them closer to the title.

Although they would win the three game series overall against St. Clair last week, the series ended in a 6-1 loss for the Norsemen on Thursday.

North went down early in the game and was never quite able to recover as the team's bats were silenced by the Saints. James MacAuley had the lone RBI for the Norsemen as the team had only six total hits in the game.

While the bats were cold for the most part last Thursday, the Norsemen entered this week in the opposite fashion. North began a new MAC White series on the road Monday at Utica and looked unstoppable on both offense and defense en route to a 13-0 win.

The win was highlighted by the stellar performance on the mound by Jake Tedesco. The senior pitched all five innings of the blowout victory and tossed a shutout while allowing just one hit and striking out 14 Utica hitters.

During the same time as he was twirling a gem on the mound, Tedesco also had three RBI with three hits at the plate. Catcher Luke Babcock and outfielder Jordan Arsenau also had three RBI each in the win, while MacAuley brought in two.

The Knights had a pair of Catholic League games over the weekend and a dip into non-league play on Monday. Overall, Liggett was able to take wins in two of its three most recent games as it gears up for both league and state playoffs in the coming weeks.

Liggett hosted Detroit Catholic Central for a CHSL doubleheader over the weekend, splitting the two games. The Knights took an 11-7 win in Game 1.

Preston Barr had three RBIs at the plate for the Knights in the win to open up Saturday. Oliver Service and Matthew Greene brought in a pair of runs each as well to bolster Liggett's offense in a high-scoring showdown.

After taking the win in Game 1, the Knights dropped Game 2 to the Shamrocks 7-4.

Barr, Greene, Jarren Purify and Reggie Sharpe had an RBI each for Liggett in the loss, with Barr and Purify each sending balls over the outfield fence.

Lutheran Westland on Monday for a quick non-league game. The Knights dominated the Warriors, taking just three innings to cruise to a 15-0 victory.

The pitching performance by Kurt Barr highlighted the win. The senior allowed no hits and struck out six batters through all three short innings of the game.

Neil Murphy led Liggett's explosive offense in the win with four RBIs. Jake Martin had three, including a home run, and Sharpe brought in three runs as well.

Coming up for the Knights later this week is the beginning of Catholic League playoffs. Liggett gets to start the league tournament on the big stage at Comerica Park Friday against Brother Rice.

she hopes to bring into her college career as she continues to play both of her favorite sports.

Being able to play multiple sports in high school and soon in college has furthered Maltby's devotion to be the best athlete she can. Having that sort of passion in field hockey and girls lacrosse is especially important to her, as she feels like the impact she can have in the communities of those sports has the potential to last a long time.

"It's really helped with my time management and leadership skills," Maltby said. "Being a captain, it holds me responsible and I feel like I have a title to uphold and show a good example for my team and for younger girls coming in. Girls lacrosse and field hockey are very small communities and positive communities and I feel like they hold a high standard."

Softball squads battle through highs and lows

Grosse Pointe South

Last week was not too kind to the softball team from Grosse Pointe South. The Blue Devils took a break from MAC Blue play to take on a couple of non-league opponents in its most recent games. Despite the games not counting against their division record, the Blue Devils suffered a pair of late-season losses.

South hosted St. Clair Shores Lakeview last Wednesday in a matchup of MAC Blue vs. MAC White. The Blue Devils' offense fell flat, scoring just once on two hits in a 9-1 loss to the Huskies. Audrey Smihal brought in the only run for South in the loss with a sacrifice fly in the fifth inning.

The Blue Devils traveled to Regina on Thursday looking to bounce back from Wednesday's disappointment. While the offense picked up a bit, South was still unable to keep up on the scoreboard and suffered another loss, this time 6-2.

Lily Stidham and Katie Steiner each had an RBI for the Blue Devils in the loss. South fell into a four-run deficit in the early innings and never recovered, although the offense tallied seven hits in this performance.

Monday's scheduled league game against Port Huron was postponed for South, giving the team a bit of an extended break. The Blue Devils get back in action and host L'Anse Creuse in a MAC Blue showdown on Friday.

Grosse Pointe North

The Norsemen took a trip to Algonac over the weekend to take part in the Algonac Tournament. The weekend started a bit rough for North, but the offense eventually came alive and helped the team capture a second-place finish.

Friday saw the Norsemen drop their opening game of the tournament with a disappointing 12-0 loss to hosts Algonac. North recovered on Saturday, winning both of its games.

The day began with an 8-5 win over Marysville. Katelyn Barr tossed a complete game on the mound, allowing three earned runs and getting the victory.

Sophia Borowski led North's offense in the first win of the weekend, who went 4-for-4 at the plate and scored twice. Jenna Winowicki also powered the attack, who had three hits and a pair of RBIs.

Next up was a back and forth showdown with Utica in Saturday's second game. North went down 2-0 early but managed to tie things up. Utica once again took the lead back late, but the Norsemen again brought things back to even in the sixth inning.

Barr and Maraina Smith were able to get on base in the bottom of the seventh inning to set North up in a winning position. It was Borowski who ended up being the hero on offense again for the Norsemen, hitting a walk-off RBI single to secure a 5-4 win.

North hosts Sterling Heights Stevenson on Saturday for a non-league doubleheader. The Norsemen host another non-league game on Monday against Utica before returning to MAC Red play Tuesday on the road at Utica Ford.

University Liggett

Last week's schedule for the Knights was highlighted by a Thursday doubleheader on the road at Lutheran North. While Liggett hoped to build some momentum with some late wins on the schedule, the Knights ended up dropping both games of Thursday's series. The team returns back against Lutheran North on Friday.

Thursday's first game was a 9-5 loss for the Knights. Victoria Nugent led the offense with three RBI on two hits. Nugent also got the start on the mound, allowing nine earned runs in six innings.

Unable to recover in Game 2 on Thursday, Liggett fell once again. Nugent had another RBI at the plate, but the offense was largely silent overall for the Knights as they fell 12-2 to be swept for the day.

The Knights will look to recover this week as doubleheader on Friday against Westland.

Blue Devils lacrosse captures second season win over Norsemen

By Mike Adzima
Sports Reporter

The boys lacrosse teams from Grosse Pointe North and Grosse Pointe South met on the field last Wednesday night for their second scheduled meeting of the spring. With the regular season winding down and playoffs on the horizon, a late-season rivalry win would be a huge boost for either side. As the Blue Devils played host in this meeting, they captured the victory over North for the second time this season with a 14-4 win.

South opened the game by scoring four unanswered goals in the early moments of the first quarter. Junior attack Jack Hanigan scored the first and third goals for the Blue Devils, while Griffin Adams and William Henry added the other pair of goals in the opening run. North answered with a goal by senior attack Jason Michalski to make it 4-1, but another goal by Hanigan and one from

Adams made it 6-1 was able to get the second goal of the game for the Norsemen. The first half closed with a goal by Blue Devils' senior Liam Mathieson to send the game into halftime at 9-2 in favor of South.

After plenty of scoring in the first quarter, the second quarter saw the offense quiet down. Adams scored twice in a row to extend South's lead to seven goals before Mitchell Mills another from Adams, his fifth and final goal of the evening, to put South on top 11-2. Michalski scored his second goal of the game for the Norsemen to bring the deficit to eight at the end of three quarters.

The Norsemen scored the first goal of the final quarter as Mills netted his second of the evening. That ended the offense for North, as three unanswered goals from South's William Rauh, Sutton Wright and Harry Wright brought the advantage back to 10 for the Blue Devils and helped close out the 14-4 victory.

The rivalry victory for South helped the team stay near the top of the MAC Red, where it now sits just a half game behind current leader Dakota. North remains winless in MAC Red Division play. Both teams now enter the regional playoffs this week. The Norsemen travel to Warren De La Salle for the opening round on Thursday evening while South will host University Liggett in the playoff opener Friday.

Sailing legend leaves legacy on the water

By Peggy Walsh-Sarnecki
Staff Writer

Eddie Bayer and his father were pretty successful racing his dad's Ranger 37, Phoenix.

But he was getting a little tired of being told they were winning because the boat had a favorable rating.

"A lot of people were saying that it's just that you've got a big handicap; it's why you're winning," Eddie's sister, Mary Allen, said.

Their brother, John Bayer, agreed.

"He thought that he was a good sailor and people would discount that and say it's due to the ratings," John Bayer said.

So Eddie Bayer, along with partners — his brother John Bayer and Mike Welch — bought a one-design, the J-35 Falcon. Not only were the J-35s a competitive class, but with the same rating, no one could pin any winnings on the handicapping.

And Eddie Bayer not only kept on winning, he won even more.

"He was special to a lot of people. He was a big part of a lot of people's lives, especially through sailing," Welch said.

Edwin Adam Bayer III of Grosse Pointe Park was 68 when he passed away in February. But the lifelong Grosse Pointer left behind a long and storied record in sailboat racing.

"He was somewhat of an iconic guy," Welch said. "He'd been sailing for so long and had enough success that just about everybody in the sailing community knew him. He was a very talented driver. He was exceptionally talented. He was very emotional and took it very seriously."

Eddie Bayer earned a Bachelor of Science degree in urban planning at Michigan State University, then earned a Juris Doctorate degree from Wayne State University.

But his heart was on the lake, where he competed for more than 50 years.

"We were from a sailing family," Allen said. "We were on boats at a very young age. There's a photo of Eddie at 6 months on a boat."

Eddie Bayer started racing on his father's 30-foot Chris Craft Capri, Breezin' Thru. It was a cruising boat, but he and his father turned it into a racing boat. They won their first Mackinac flag, a second place, in 1983.

In 1985, he and his dad bought Phoenix. In Phoenix, he had his second Mackinac win in 1986, along with five DRYA season championships and was A course Boat of the Year in 1998.

Ed and John Bayer and Welch became partners in the J-35 Falcon and the victories began to add up.

"We bought the boat in 2000 and BYC was going to have the North American Championship for J-35s. So the timing was kind of right to gear up for the North American Championships," John Bayer said.

They finished in the middle of the pack.

"We realized it was a very competitive class at that point," John Bayer said.

They knew crew work was key and every small mistake could come with a big cost. They brought in local sailmaker and coach Wally Cross for Tiger Woods is a good coaching tips. But they didn't want to have Cross on the crew for fear people would say he was the reason they won.

"Wally stressed consistency," John Bayer said. "It was really details."

Eddie Bayer wanted to practice, John Bayer said. Some crew members would resist, but Eddie Bayer told them plus a Lake Ontario championship and several NOOD wins.

He also won several times with the Detroit Yacht Club's Flying Scots. He was DYC's Man of the Day in 2013.

"He loved sailing, both the racing aspect of it and he enjoyed sailing for the camaraderie of it," John Bayer said. "Sailing was a priority."

Track and Field teams hitting stride at the right time

By Mike Adzima

The girls track and field teams from Grosse Pointe South and Grosse Pointe North picked up some momentum late in the season recently. The Blue Devils and Norsemen had strong showings in their most recent outings as regional and state championships loom on the horizon.

This past weekend, South competed in the Marysville Invitational along with seven other teams. The Blue Devils earned second place overall, placing in 15 of 17 total events.

"This meet featured a state regional format and was perfect preparation for next Saturday's MHSAA regional," South coach Steve Zaranek said. "Our girls ran extremely well and we are reaching our peak. We are in a tough regional that features girl powerhouses Cass Tech and Renaissance but we are ready to give them a battle."

Savannah Spangler, Kelly Gavagan, Morgan Deenik and Ella Pazuchowski started things off with a season best performance of North's week was highlighted with a fourth place finish at the MAC Red Meet on Monday in Romeo. Ava Hopko earned first place in the shot put and set a personal record at 37' 8". Hopko continued her strong day with a win in high jump and a fifth place finish in discus.

The Norsemen team of Abby Dombrowski, Emma Babcock, Lillian Deskins and Gia Derrick finished second in the 3200 distance relay. Zofia Lutoborska, Nicolina Gusmano, Sarabeth Thomas and Gia Derrick finished in second place in the 1600 relay.

Both North and South are set to compete in the Regional final meet this Friday and Saturday at Renaissance High School in Detroit.
