Demand for electricity sputters; bills may fall

Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Consumers and businesses may finally be seeing some relief from rising utility bills, thanks to the biggest decline in U.S. electricity demand in decades.

Prices on wholesale markets are expected to decline for the rest of 2009, according to the Energy Information Agency. While rates will probably begin edging up again in 2010, it will likely be less than half the 6.2 percent jump recorded last year.

For decades as Americans bought more electronics, more appliances, air conditioners and other gizmos, energy demand has only moved in one direction and prices have followed suit.

The decline in power usage over the past year is a rarity and also an indication of how badly the recession has jolted the economy and changed the way Americans spend.

The shift began last year, when power consumption fell 1.6 percent. Government forecasters see consumption falling another 2.7 percent this year. That would mark the first time since 1949 that the nation has seen energy demand fall in consecutive years.

Given the broad apprehension over the economy, any money consumers can keep in their pockets

"You might see a decrease in your bill or, at the very least, less of an increase. And these days that's not bad," said Charlie Acquard, executive director of the National Association of State Utility Consumer Advocates.

You can trace the shift from major industrial power users all the way back to individual consumers to see what has happened.

The number of unemployed Americans is nearing 15 million, and prospects for the job market remain gloomy. Retailers just reported their 12th straight month of declining sales and many people are buying only what they must.

Power consumption by the industrial and manufacturing companies that make everything from cars to cotton swabs has fallen faster than anywhere else — 10 percent this year by government estimates. Industrial consumption fell about 20 percent in parts of the Midwest, Carolinas and the South during the second quarter, utilities say.

This pullback by some of the biggest energy users in the U.S. may provide a silver lining for millions of people and businesses in the form of declining or flattening utility bills.

The recession has suppressed demand for coal, natural gas and oil. This has sent a ripple through wholesale electric markets, where fossil fuels are turned into energy.

Schools to decide on speech

Mattern: Timing and technology issues for hearing Obama speak

Monongalia County Schools will leave it up to individual schools to determine if they want to design lesson plans around President Barack Obama's "speech to students" Tuesday.

"I certainly think it's an opportunity," Assistant Superintendent Becky Mattern said. The district administrator learned of the scheduled speech late last week. District administrators provided information from the West Virginia Board of Education to county schools, Mattern said.

The speech is scheduled for noon when Obama speaks to students about staying in school and finding success in the classroom, according to a release from the U.S. Department of Education. It will be broadcast on C-SPAN.

Mattern said she thought the speech was apolitical and that it was only going to tell students the importance of staying in school. From what

Deputies break for cup of joe, spot suspects

The Associated Press

MANKATO, Minn. — It didn't take much work for two county sheriff's deputies in Minnesota to track down four burglary suspects. In fact, the suspects pulled right into the Happy Chef restaurant where the Blue Earth County deputies were on a coffee break Wednesday night.

The deputies had been investigating three residential burglaries that seemed to be related. When they were on their break at Happy Chef, a report of another burglary came in from another county, along with a description of the suspects' pickup truck.

A truck matching that description pulled into the parking lot. The stolen goods, including laptop computers, other electronics and jewelry, were in the back.

Captain Rich Murry said it shows even a coffee break can be productive.

THE DOMINION POST - WEEK IN REVIEW

Sunday Family: Holdup suspects have alibis

Three of the four men accused in the armed robbery spree in Morgantown and Fairmont say have alibis, family and friends told The Dominion Post.

Charles "Bo" Michael, 22, Paul Shaffer, 19, and Robert Shaffer, 18, all of Morgantown, were not anywhere near the stores at the time of the robberies, the relatives and friends said. Furthermore, the three are not capable of the crimes, sources said. Michael and the Shaffers are half brothers.

The three and co-defendant Gregory Cale, 22, of Masontown, are charged with one count of first-degree robbery each in connection with the seven armed robberies during a 10day span earlier this month. Cale and Michael are also half brothers.

Michael's fiancee, Lisa Mayfield, said he was watching their 4-monthold daughter at her house at the time of the robbery at Maverick's on Don Knotts Boulevard—the robbery police have charged him with committing.

Manchin's office correcting reports

Three clerical errors were discovered by The Dominion Post in Gov. Joe Manchin's 2008 re-election campaign finance reports.

Jack Rossi, Manchin's volunteer campaign treasurer, said one of those has been corrected, one is in process and one slipped by him and the secretary of state's office.

Rossi and Chap Donovan, Rossi's assistant, said they would correct the third error in the final amendments they are preparing.

The error that slipped by the review of Rossi and the secretary of state appears on a donation dated April 15, 2008, on Manchin's Preprimary report — the first of six required for the 2008 election cycle.

State campaign finance law requires the name and address of any individual or group giving more than $250. In this case, the address for a $1,000 donation by the Foundation Coal PAC (political action committee) was left off.

Monday Mon County Schools enrollment figures up

Enrollment numbers from the first week of school show Monongalia County gained more than 240 students — 2.46 percent — while Preston lost 25 and Marion, 21 — less than a 1 percent decline in each of those counties.

For the first day of school, Monongalia County Schools had 9,300 students come through the doors of its 20 schools. The enrollment numbers shouldn't include kindergarten or pre-k students, but Superintendent Frank Devono said some principals might have included them.

That is a high number for Mon County, and Devono said he doesn't expect it to remain that high once the tally is official.

In his five years as superintendent. Devono said, enrollment grew each year, usually by 50 to 60 students, much of it among pre-k students. If the district does have 50 more students than last year when the final count is done, Devono said, it can qualify for additional federal funding.

'I don't put a lot of salt in first-day numbers,"Devono said.

W.Va. lags in broadband speed

While West Virginia lags behind the nation in Internet connection speeds, some local cable customers can surge ahead.

A national Speed Matters Speed Test report released this week by the Communications Workers of America shows West Virginia falling behind other states, and America falling relative to the rest of the world in broadband connection speeds.

West Virginia ranks 33rd among the 50 states for connection speed, averaging 4.6 megabits per second (mbps); the national average is 5.1 mbps. Globally, South Korea is tops, with an average speed of 20.4 mbps.

Following one day on the heels of the Speed Matters report, Comcast announced that high speed Internet customers in Monongalia, Marion and Taylor counties now have access to download speeds up to 50 mbps though its DOCSIS 3.0. — a step beyond broadband to something called wideband.

The Communications Workers of America (CWA) agrees with officials and other broadband advocates that broadband access is important for a number of reasons, including economic development, education and access to medical services.

Tuesday Police seek witnesses to beating

A Morgantown man says unknown attackers laughed as they beat him unconscious in a downtown parking lot early Saturday.

Alan Smith, 34, said the beating left him with multiple facial fractures, a broken jaw, a collapsed sinus cavity, a burst blood vessel in his eye, a smattering of cuts and dark purple bruises.

Morgantown Police are looking for five or six men who were involved in the beating.

They just kept punching me," Smith said. 'It's like they were trying to kill me.

He couldn't remember much of what they may have said to him, but said he did remember them saying something like, "How's that?" or 'Do you like that?

Smith said he has no idea what the motive was. He said he and several friends had been celebrating the impending birth of a friend's child.

State group suing Mon County BOE

West Virginia School Service Personnel Association is suing the Monongalia County Board of Education, alleging that the BOE is putting students' lives in danger by not properly investigating privately owned bus companies that transport children. Superintendent Frank Devono said, however, that the school system's policies do not in any way endanger students.

The Service Personnel Association filed a petition for a writ of mandamus, asking a circuit court judge to order that Monongalia County BOE follow state code and require proof that the bus companies meet safety standards set by law.

According to the lawsuit, privately owned vehicles that seat 16 or more and transport students must meet certain insurance, safety and related requirements, similar to what school buses and their drivers must meet.

These items include information on vehicle safety inspections, school bus or public transit ratings, driver training, driver certification, driver criminal history check, and insurance coverages, the suit said.

Fire station transfer irks residents

Some Wiles Hill residents are fired up over rumors that WVU is planning to use the old Wiles Hill fire station property to build an access road to the WVU College of Law.

The Morgantown City Council approved the first reading of an ordinance deeding the Wiles Hill fire station property to WVU during its Tuesday meeting. Charlie Byrer was the only council member to vote against the measure.

City Manager Dan Boroff said the city agreed to give WVU the Wiles Hill fire station property when WVU first offered the city one-third of an acre near the Robert C. Byrd Health Sciences Center for the new Northside Fire Station.

The fire station was built on the property from WVU, and one-third of an acre the Monongalia County Commission donated to the city.

The Wiles Hill fire station sits on about 0.3717 acres, according to city documents. It is on North Street, near WVU's College of Law.

Two WVU students have contracted swine flu and university officials expect "a large number" of students to show symptoms.

'It's exactly what we predicted, that it will hit campuses," said Dr. Jan Palmer, director of WVU's student health service. "Everybody is expecting more cases."

The cases were confirmed Wednesday by university officials. One of the cases is from a student who lives on campus, while the other lives off campus, Palmer said. He said he was asked not to

Bond reduced for 3 robbery suspects

Bond for three of the four men accused of a rash of recent armed robberies was reduced by Monongalia County Magistrate Hershel Mullins on Wednesday.

The county prosecutor agreed to the bond reduction for Charles "Bo" Michael and Paul and Robert

The men were arrested last month in connection with seven daytime robberies at small businesses in Morgantown and Fairmont over a 10day time period. Each was charged with one count of first-degree robbery and waived their rights to a preliminary hearing Wednesday.

Prosecuting Attorney Marcia Ashdown said the men will be "intensely supervised" if they post bond, and the public should not feel unsafe.

'I believe, given the circumstances and the status of the investigation, we are satisfied that this bail is sufficient," Ashdown said. The investigations into the robberies continues, she said.

Friday One arrested in bank robbery

KINGWOOD — A Preston County man was arrested Wednesday evening for the Aug. 21 robbery of BB&T in Reedsville. Police said he may be linked to other area robberies.

Preston County Sheriff's Department Lt. J.C. Stiles arrested Eric Littrell Hudson, 20, of Reedsville. Hudson was charged with firstdegree robbery and arraigned Thursday morning in Preston County Magistrate Court. He is in Tygart Valley Regional Jail, with bond set at $200,000.

"Mr. Hudson voluntarily came in to face the charges," Preston County Sheriff Dallas Wolfe said at a press conference Thursday afternoon. He said Hudson may have moved to Preston County "about seven days before the Reedsville robbery" and lived in Morgantown for a time before moving to Reedsville, in August.

Wolfe said Hudson has no criminal record "that we can find."

The sheriff's department is also investigating the Masontown Wes-Banco robbery, which occurred on July 30, "as though both are connected," Wolfe said, and is not ruling out a connection between Hudson and some unsolved robberies in Morgantown.

"Mr. Hudson is a suspect in at least two other armed robberies in Morgantown," said Trooper 1st Class J.G. Baker of the Morgantown State Police Detachment.

Ex-deputy appeals conviction

The West Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals is considering the appeal request of a former Monongalia County sheriff's deputy convicted of molesting a 16-year-old girl while he worked at Morgantown High School.

Robert G. Fields, 32, was convicted by a jury in 2007 of sexual abuse by a custodian of a child and was sentenced in November 2008 to 10-20 years in prison, the statutory sentence.

The molestation occurred in 2005, while Fields worked as a school resource officer stationed at MHS. The girl was then 16. Fields maintained his innocence throughout the trial and sentencing.

Fields' attorneys petitioned the Supreme Court for an appeal, stating that his conviction should be overturned due to three errors of judgment by Monongalia County Circuit Court Judge Russell Clawges.

Supreme Court justices reviewed the petition papers Thursday, but had not yet made a decision as of Thursday afternoon, spokeswoman Jennifer Bundy said.

The attorneys, John Angotti and Chad Noel, said, in their filing, that Fields, as a deputy assigned to work as a school resource officer, should not have been considered a "custodian" of the girl in the eyes of the law. They said Clawges should've dismissed that charge, the only charge Fields ended up being convicted of.

Fish dying in Dunkard Creek

When Jeff Graham looked at Dunkard Creek on Wednesday, he saw something he had not seen before — dead fish lying on the banks and rust-colored water in the creek bed.

But Graham said, he had no idea how the creek near Blacksville ended up this way. "I wish I knew."

West Virginia Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) investigators are also baffled over what caused the fish to die. The investigation into the situation is "It's a very unusual case," said

Mike Carico, a DEP investigator.

The DEP estimated that at least 60 fish were dead. Others said they believed the number to be higher.

Carico said it is a unique situation because they haven't been able to trace the problem to a source. He said they were looking at every possible reason, from a natural process to industrial waste.

Saturday Victim'charged in hot spot heist

A clerk at a video gaming parlor held up during the armed robbery spree in Morgantown this past month was in on the robbery, police said Friday. Ashley Rachelle Shillingburg, 25, of Reedsville, was arrested Friday afternoon for firstdegree robbery in connection with the Aug. 10 holdup at Maverick's on Don Knotts Boulevard.

Family members of three codefendants in the robbery rash told The Dominion Post that Shillingburg is the girlfriend of the fourth codefendant, Gregory Cale. Morgantown Police detectives would not confirm that, instead stating the two are acquaintances.

The Maverick's robbery was the fourth of seven businesses robbed during the 10-day crime spree this past month in Morgantown and Fairmont Charles "Bo" Michael, 22, has been charged in the Maverick's robbery. Police said it is the only one of the seven robberies in which the

Three Pittsburgh men face multiple felony drug charges for allegedly bringing drugs to Morgantown

Multiple area police agencies conducted a search Thursday night on a hotel room at the Star City Econo Lodge.

Dane Michael Childs, 24, is charged with felony conspiracy to deliver a controlled substance (heroin) and three felony counts of possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver (heroin, crack cocaine and ecstasy).

Amir Jamon Miller, 27, is charged with conspiracy to deliver a controlled substance (heroin) and four felony counts of possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver (heroin, crack cocaine, marijuana and ecstasy).

Robert L. Abram, 31, is charged with four felony counts of possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver (heroin, crack cocaine, marijuana and ecstasy).

According to a spokesperson for the Monongalia County Sheriff's Department, the men have been under investigation 'for more than a month" and allegedly came to Morgantown just to sell drugs, setting up shop at hotels and local residences.

Police: Man admits to robbery

A Masontown man accused of participating in the recent armed robbery spree in Morgantown admitted to detectives that he robbed a Collins Ferry Road speciality shop while one of his codefendants waited in a truck down the street, police said.

Monongalia County Magistrate Sandy Holepit found probable cause at a preliminary hearing Friday for Gregory Cale, 22, after hearing the testimony of Morgantown Police Detective M.J. Charlton. Cale is charged with one count of firstdegree robbery for the Aug. 11 holdup of Slight Indulgence.

He is one of four men arrested in connection with the armed robberies of seven shops in Morgantown and Fairmont over the course of 10 days last month.

Charlton said, eight days after the Slight Indulgence robbery, Cale admitted to committing it — a statement another detective witnessed and recorded.

Former senator returns to Capitol as advocate

CHARLESTON — Former state Sen. Randy Schoonover used to be a "lock 'em up and throw away the key" kind of lawmaker.

Then he was locked up himself, spending 14 months in federal prison after pleading guilty in 1999 to accepting $2,725 in bribes from a Summersville towing company looking for business on the West Virginia Turnpike.

And then, things got really bad. Schoonover was riding his allterrain vehicle in the Clay County woods on May 15, 2004, when the 800-pound machine flipped, pinning him to the ground by his left arm. Rescuers found him, still trapped, a day later. He had spent the intervening time praying to die.

When he was released from a Charleston hospital nearly a month later, his left arm had been amputated and he was on his way to a drug addiction that would dominate his life for nearly five years and land him in trouble with the law again.

Morphine, fentanyl, oxycodone and hydrocodone — Schoonover soon learned the drugs that could ease the agony he felt from the accident. Before long, he learned he couldn't go a day without them, although he refused to believe he was an addict.

His wife left him. He traded his car for drugs. He was arrested for delivering $100 worth of pain pills to a police informant and sentenced to a year of home confinement. He got clean, then relapsed after getting a prescription for hydrocodone while suffering from an ear infection.

Lobbyist Randy Schoonover stands inside the Capitol lobby Friday in Charleston. Schoonover, a former state senator who was convicted of federal corruption charges and later became addicted to painkillers after losing his arm in an ATV accident, is returning to the Capitol as a lobbyist advocating for prison sentencing reform.

Finally, he found himself in front of a judge in Buckhannon, who sentenced him to six months of rehabilitation at FMRS Health Systems in Beckley.

Today, Randy Schoonover presents himself almost as a man returned from the dead. He has enrolled in college for the first time, pursuing a social work degree at Mountain State University. He tells his story at day report centers, in hopes he'll persuade younger people to avoid his mistakes. And he plans on returning to the Capitol.

This time, though, it won't be as a politician.

Schoonover, 55, is setting up a political consulting firm to persuade his former colleagues in the Legislature that rehabilitation is a better solution for nonviolent criminals than jail time.

On a recent visit to the Capitol, where he served first as a delegate then as a Clay County senator representing eight counties, Schoonover shows he still has the politician's touch. Clad in a WVU polo shirt with a silver cross around his neck, he shakes hands with old friends, swaps stories and fields calls on his cell phone.

But on the subject of addiction, he quickly becomes serious.

"This is the first time in five years I can remember the whole summer," he said. "I lost everything I had. I lost a beautiful wife, I blew all my money, I got so bad I gave away my car. I am so happy now to be back in the real world.

His addiction and treatment have taught him, he says, that the toughon-crime approach he adopted when in office is doomed to fail. Schoonover wants to see changes to sentencing laws that will give drug offenders a range of treatment options instead of packing them into the jails and prisons of West Virginia.

"Why send people with a nonviolent crime to prison when we can send them to rehab for three or six months?" he asks. "When I was a state senator, I had the philosophy, 'Lock 'em up and throw away the key.' That doesn't work."

Schoonover believes his years in the Legislature, with three terms as a delegate starting in 1988 and a sixyear tenure in the Senate, make him well-suited to deal with lawmakers.

"I know how the committee system works," he said. "If I can swing one vote, if my story can convince one senator who's on the fence to pass this bill through, I've done something.'

Schoonover returns as prison reform is becoming a significant topic at the Capitol. Earlier this year, a commission appointed by Gov. Joe Manchin to study overcrowding in the state's 14 prisons and 10 regional jails produced 14 recommendations, including modifying sentencing laws and diverting inmates with drug and alcohol problems to rehabilitation.

The state prisons are designed to hold 5,300 inmates, but more than 1,000 wait in regional jails for transfer to state facilities because there's no room. Meanwhile, although twothirds of state inmates are incarcerated for nonviolent crimes, the Legislature has gotten tougher in handing out sentences.

Since 1991, the Legislature has voted 75 times to modify sentencing laws or create new ones. Lawmakers also increased the mandatory minimum sentences for several crimes. The report found that between 2001 and 2006 sentences grew by as much as 33 months.

W.Va. man surpasses 100,000 miles on a bike

Associated Press

CHARLESTON — If Gene Teaney were a satellite and not a cyclist, he'd be on his fifth orbit of Earth by now.

Teaney, 66, recently pedaled his 100,000th mile since taking up bicycling as a fitness activity in 1988. He knows exactly how many miles he's ridden because, for the past 21 years, he's logged each and every one.

"I started keeping logs because I was taking part in the [Union] Carbide Fitness Club," he said as he took a brief break during a threehour ride in and around Kanawha State Forest. "I started out as a runner, but took up cycling when I started having problems with shin splints. Cycling was good cross-training, and it was a lot easier on my legs.'

After Teaney retired from Carbide in 2001, he redoubled his cycling efforts.

"Two or three times a week, I do solo rides that average 50 to 55 miles apiece. And two or three times a week, I also take part in rides with the Mountain State Wheelers [Bicycle Club]," he said.

Believe it or not, that's less than he's accustomed to riding. From 2002 to 2005, Teaney averaged more than 10,000 miles a year. He did two west-to-east transcontinental rides — one of 3,500 miles, the other of 3,700. He did three northsouth crossings of the United States — one along the Eastern Seaboard, one along the Mississippi River, and one along the West Coast. He took part in 13 cycling tours that lasted more than five days. Six of those lasted 20 to 50 days.

"I've ridden in 49 states and three Canadian provinces," he said. "The only state I haven't ridden in yet is Hawaii.'

Nowadays Teaney averages "only" 7,500 miles a year — mainly because, as he put it, "I've done

He did three northsouth crossings of the United States one along the Eastern Seaboard, one along the Mississippi River, and one along the West Coast.

all the tours I'm interested in."

Some cyclists like to ride the latest and greatest in bicycle technology. Teaney has had the same titanium-framed Litespeed Vortex since 1999. The bike now has 78,000 miles on its odometer.

"I sent it back to the factory two years ago to have it refurbished. The components were pretty much worn out. Everything is new now except the frame," he said.

Three years ago, Teaney started wondering exactly how many miles he'd accumulated down through the years. He got out his logs and began adding up the totals.

"At that time, I had about 81,000," he said. "I decided that 100,000 miles was reachable, and I made that my next goal."

He rolled past the epic milestone July 21, on a routine solo ride near his South Hills home. He said he felt a sense of achievement, but he added that he now has no specific goal to pursue.

"I guess now the goal is to keep healthy and get plenty of exercise," he said.

The health part shouldn't be a problem. Teaney's resting pulse rate is a turtle-slow 50 beats a minute, a telltale sign of a high fitness level.

'People ask me about riding at this age," he said. "I tell them, 'We don't quit exercising when we get old; we get old when we quit exercising.'

Public Service Commission said it will hold 11 public hearings on a proposal to build a 756-kilovolt power line across West Virginia to Maryland.

The PSC announced Friday that the first hearings will be held in Shepherdstown on Sept. 22 and 23.

Other hearings are planned for Sept. 28 in Flatwoods, Oct. 2 in Charleston, Oct. 13 at Canaan Valley State Park near Davis and Oct. 22 in Buckhannon. Allegheny Energy and Ameri-

Owner debates whether to rebuild antique mall

OAK HILL — The owner of a torched building in Oak Hill that housed the largest antique mall in southern West Virginia is debating whether to rebuild.

Terry Musick said he plans to talk with his insurance agent Friday. But he said the inventory is irreplaceable and the chances of securing another tenant is doubtful. The Carpetbaggers Antique Mall was destroyed in a Wednesday night fire.

Oak Hill Fire Chief Tim Richardson estimated the loss at $500,000.

Police have charged 25-yearold James Michael Shell of Oak Hill with arson. He remained at the Southern Regional Jail on Friday on $15,000 bail and does not yet have an attorney.

Shell told police he lit a candle so he could see after getting locked inside the building when it closed.

Brothers meet, marry pair of sisters

Associated Press

PRINCETON — On Sept. 20, 1941, a day when President Franklin D. Roosevelt monitored world events from the White House and all was still peaceful at a place called Pearl Harbor, brothers William and Wesley Synan married the two young women they had been courting, Dorothy and Lou Ellen Davidson.

The simultaneous weddings of Lou Ellen Davidson to William Synan and Dorothy Davidson to Wesley Synan at the Maybeury home of Pastor Hayes are now approaching their 68th anniversary. Still together today and still living near each other, the couples recalled how the Synan brothers met and started dating the Davidson sisters.

"Wesley told me one Sunday about these two pretty girls," William recalled.

"Very pretty girls," Wesley elaborated.

Wesley had noticed the Davidson sisters and decided that both he and his brother should meet them.

"I had done spied on them at Switchback at the carnival, and I got introduced to them, and I knew I wanted to see her [Dorothy] again," he said.

William then met his future wife Lou Ellen at church, so the brothers started seeing the two sisters.

"We talked to them and walked them home, and from then on we started dating them," William said.

Of course, in the latter days of the Great Depression, dating often didn't include the ingredients most young people take for granted today. Cars were difficult to get when the minimum wage was about 30 cents an hour and a new vehicle sold for more than $900, and luxuries such as text messaging were not even science fiction.

The young couples still dated, anyway. They walked from Peel

Environmental groups oppose W.Va. coal rally

Associated Press

CHARLESTON — Organizers of the Friends of America rally have added a karaoke competition to the pro-coal Labor Day event, but anger among environmentalists continued to mount Friday. Auditions for 8- to 18-year-old singers were scheduled for 3 p.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday at the rally site on a reclaimed surface mine near Holden. Organizers said the best 30 will advance to a second round of auditions starting at 4 p.m.

Plans call for the top three to sing Monday at an event that could draw as many as 100,000 people.

Coal producer Massey Energy and more than 100 associations and businesses are sponsoring the rally and free concert, which will feature country singers Hank Williams Jr. and John Rich, among others.

Earlier this week, the Arizonabased Center for Biological Diversity blasted Verizon Wireless for its sponsorship of the event, arguing it amounts to support for mountaintop removal coal mining and opposition to legislation designed to control climate change.

Late Friday, the group said more than 80,000 people had signed on to their letter to Verizon, including groups that represent millions of members. They include the Natural Resources Defense Council, Defenders of Wildlife, Rainforest Action Network, Greenpeace USA, Friends of the Earth, Appalachian Voices and Christians Caring for Creation.

Massey Chief Executive Don Blankenship has said the rally is designed to focus attention on the need to protect American jobs by ensuring they aren't taxed or regulated out of existence. The rally Web site asks concertgoers to sign a petition against federal cap-and-trade legislation designed to limit greenhouse gas emissions.

Blankenship told a West Virginia on Friday that he does not believe in climate change and that the benefits of mining and energy production must be weighed against the environmental costs.

"You've got to either have energy or be willing to live in poverty and die young," he said.

Chestnut Mountain to Coaldale Mountain, a distance of approximately three and a half miles.

"Three times a week," Dorothy recalled.

"We were keeping each other company," Lou Ellen added.
"No car, no instant messaging, no computers."

"No anything," said Dorothy. Eventually, love blossomed and the couples decided to get married. Almost 68 years later, they had to think for a moment to recall which brother proposed first. They came to the same decision at about the same time. "I guess I proposed first,"

William said.
"But Wesley was going to," Lou

Ellen added.

Lou Ellen may have guessed that William was about to propose to her and that Wesley was about to propose to her sister Dorothy, but there was one more hurdle to overcome.

"Billy asked Daddy first because he was afraid he wouldn't let us both, both girls, get married," Lou Ellen said. "I was 17. He was 18." Dorothy was 18, and Wesley

"She married an older man," Lou Ellen commented.

Finally, the brothers got their future father-in-law's blessing and the proposals came less than a week apart. These big moments were followed by a joint wedding on Sept. 20, 1941, at Pastor Hayes's home in Maybeury. Wesley immediately took care of the pastor's fee; it may not sound like much today, but for a young coal miner, it wasn't a small amount.

"I paid him two dollars," Wesley said. "I had $54; it was my pay day. I had to pay board out of that and had to go on a honeymoon with the rest of it."

The new couples soon set out for their honeymoon.

"We hired a taxi and went to King, N.C.," Dorothy said. "We stayed with Aunt Carrie overnight, and she prepared us a nice dinner." William and Lou Ellen went on to have six children, 12 grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren. Wesley and Dorothy had three children, eight grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

Now in their mid to late 80s, the couples had advice for newlyweds who hope to have a long lasting relationship, too. What's needed is clean living, love of each other, love of God and the Bible. "And learn to say, I'm sorry. My fault," Wesley added.

night. Come tailgating time, children were often found in the RV, playing video games or watching TV.

Outside, seats made a semicircle along the RV. A television and a spread of food and drinks were easily within reach. Tailgating is also a chance to converse with fellow fans, Stern said. But he most enjoys the chance to get together with his extended relatives. "It's good to see family and friends," Stern said.

Stern said he attended WVU, as did many other family members. He has been a Mountaineer "since birth." His two children, Jared, 7, and Ariel, 6, have gone to bowl games since they have been in car seats, Stern said.

Stern said he was happy football season was beginning, but also knows the amount of effort it takes to make his tailgate successful.

"I'm excited and apprehensive," Stern said. "It can be a bit of work."

Other tailgaters said they had no problem putting in the hours of labor for their party. "I don't think it's any work at all," Charla Schulz said.

Schulz's tailgate featured a variety of food for people to enjoy. There were cookies, pancakes, breakfast sandwiches, hamburgers and hot dogs to keep everyone full.

"My favorite [part] is eating and drinking," the McMechen native said.

Their tailgate was situated along University Avenue. Schulz said they use their location to get drivers excited about the game.

Schulz said her tailgate started off as a small gathering. But, as they got to know those who sit around them in the stadium and other tailgaters, their gathering has grown.

For some, this year's tailgate seemed much different than previous outings. Brian Pancoast, of Morgantown, said it was his first time bringing his two young children to the game.

With his children, Pancoast said there was a lot less drinking than in previous years. He said he had to spend most of his time watching his children. He had to tell his son, Issac, to get down from climbing on the car, as he was speaking.

Yesterday, it was hard to get the youngsters to settle down, especially at bedtime, Pancoast said.

"All day they asked us, 'Is it time to go to the game?' "Pancoast said. "They drove us nuts.'

His daughter, Sofia, was dressed in her Mountaineer cheerleading outfit. When asked if she was excited to go to the first game, Sofia sounded like any confident WVU fan.

"Yeah." Sofia said. "'Cause they're good."

she has read, the speech is designed for students 13 and older.

Many of the schools face technology issues, Mattern said. There aren't televisions in every classroom, so it might be hard for some students to view the speech. There is also another logistical issue with Obama's speech, Mattern said. "Part of the problem [is] it's going to be happening during the lunch hour," she said. Mattern said they could turn on the televisions in University High School's cafeteria, but with 300 kids eating and socializing, it is unlikely anyone would hear it.

Administrators around Mon County said they were unaware if any of their classes would be designing plans around the speech, Mattern said.

Morgantown High School principal Robert DeSantis said he has not heard of any classes that will watch the speech. University High School principal Jim Forst could not be reached in time for this report.

Chris Knight, of Harrisville, said she didn't have a problem if her children participated in a class exercise using the speech. She liked that the President was in classrooms encour-

Gibbs: Furor is 'silly season'

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House on Friday dismissed as pointless the furor over President Barack Obama's plan to deliver a televised back-to-school speech to the nation's students.

"I think we've reached a little bit of the silly season when the president of the United States can't tell kids in school to study hard and stay in school," presidential spokesman Robert Gibbs told reporters.

Obama's planned address to students has prompted a surprising push-back from some quarters over what the White House sees as an important but innocuous topic.

Also, seeing the President can help get students interested in politics at a young age, Knight said.

Not everyone is that eager. Some organizations have raised concerns about the speech, saying Obama is trying to use it for political gain.

"I think it stinks," said Carl Corsco, of Morgantown.

Corsco said he thought schools shouldn't air the speech. He believes Obama is campaigning to students, trying to get them to support him in the hopes of getting their parents to do the speech or to express their concern, Mattern said.

Some parents have already called the district's office to question the

Some parents thought the speech was about health care and others wondered if the schools were planning to teach around the speech.

Parents are allowed to remove students from class, Mattern said. But, if they remove their student, it is counted as an absence.

If parents do have questions, Mattern encouraged them to contact their individual school.

Preston County Schools sent out an automated message to parents telling them they plan on using the speech in school and if parents have questions they can contact the individual schools.

Transgender activist runs for mayor of U.S. town

NAMPA, Idaho — About a block from a street concert in downtown Nampa, Melissa Sue Robinson strolls with purpose into a trendy coffee shop — the unofficial liberal embassy of this sprawling Republican stronghold in southwest Idaho.

Dressed in a cream-colored pantsuit, a political flier clutched in one hand, a soft brown leather purse in the other, she orders a mocha and takes a seat as a group of teenagers stare at her from near the door.

The 58-year-old was born male and still carries the slightly largerthan-an-average-woman build of Charles Staelens Jr., who legally changed his name and underwent surgery in 1998 to become a woman. She also kept his voice.

He was married for 17 years, owned a construction company, and was a Republican when he ran for city council in Lansing, Mich. where he was raised with his identical twin brother until their parents divorced in the 1960s.

Now she says she is celibate, a telecommunications worker who is "just another cog in the machine," and a Democrat who in 2004 became the first transgender to run for the state legislature in Michigan.

This farming and manufacturing town of about 83,000 residents, where a sugar factory and a local hospital are among the biggest employers, doesn't seem to be all that concerned that Robinson previously lived as a man. But they are scratching their heads that a newcomer, a non-

Republican, would run for mayor. For her part, Robinson said she has been warmly received in Nampa, just 15 miles west of Boise in the sagebrush-ridden high desert. "Idaho has a bad rap," she said. "I haven't found a person I don't like yet." There has been one conflict - in cyberspace.

Robinson threatened to take legal action against the hugely popular micro-blogging Web site Twitter after stumbling on a fake account set up in her name under the title: "Woman with a penis." The account has since been closed. 'You don't do that to somebody," said Robinson, who as an adult, always thought of himself as a woman but waited until his late 40s before undergoing the gender reassignment surgery. Her job moved her from Seattle last winter to southwest Idaho, where Nampa is the largest city in Canyon County and a Democrat hasn't held an elected seat in local government in more than a decade. Sen. John McCain received a landslide 67 percent of the vote here during the presidential election last year. Mayoral races in Idaho are nonpartisan, meaning that candidates do not have to declare a party.

Robinson, who appeared in the pages of The National Enquirer in 2003 and was a guest on Oprah with her twin brother and ex-wife in 2005, is challenging a two-term incumbent mayor, former teacher, and a graduate of Northwest Nazarene University, one of eight liberal arts colleges in the country affiliated with the Church of the Nazarene.

"It doesn't seem like her chances are high — or there at all," said Joseph Shafer, a boutique owners in Nampa. "We're one of the most conservative counties in the state. I think we're one of the most conservative in the country."

DENVER - U.S. Roman Catholic bishops have taken a consistent line on a health care overhaul: It's vital, but they cannot support proposals that go too far in covering abortion and not far enough in protecting health workers who don't want to provide that procedure.

Now, at least a half-dozen bishops have gone beyond that position, some of them using hardhitting terms such as "socialization" and "monopolization" to launch a broader critique of big government.

Their argument isn't that the federal government should necessarily stay out of health care coverage altogether, but that an oversized government health system could wield too much power over people's lives.

"Among the Catholic bishops, on all issues, there will be disagreement," said Mark Rozell, a professor of public policy at George Mason University.

"This is almost like the minority report being issued here."

Although the limited-government bishops are a small minority, if their arguments gain momentum it could pose another challenge to President Barack Obama's efforts to make sweeping changes to the nation's health care system.

U.S. bishops for decades have advocated comprehensive health care coverage as a right for all Americans, with a special focus on meeting the basic medical needs of the poor, elderly and disabled.

But bishops taking the lead on health care — the ones who have written letters to Congress on behalf of the bishops' conference — have made it clear that the current legislation has too many Bishops have criticized proposals that would allow the proposed government-sponsored insurance plan to cover abortions. As it stands, federal funds for abortions are restricted to cases involving rape, incest or danger to the life of the mother. Bishops also are insisting on protections for health care workers who in good conscience feel they cannot have a hand in abortion services.

"The bishops want to support health care reform," Bishop William Murphy, chairman of the bishops' Committee Domestic Justice and Human Development, wrote to Congress.

"We have in the past and we always must insist that health care reform excludes abortion coverage or any other provisions that threaten the sanctity of life.'

The conference has not taken a position on the public option — a proposed government-run competitor to private insurers. But it supports "a variety of options" in health plans which may include a public one.

Labor Day is when storms work

BY KEN KAYE Sun Sentinel (MCT)

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Labor Day is traditionally when many of us look forward to cooler fall weather after a long hot summer. What we prefer not to dwell on is that it's also when the tropics come to a full boil Indeed, the last week of August and the first week of September often see a blitz of tropical activity, sometimes with several storms swirling at once. So far this season, within that time frame, Hurricane Bill and tropical storms Danny and Erika have shown up. Meanwhile, another system is moving west across the Atlantic.

In the past 20 hurricane seasons, only one, in 1994, was calm during that two-week stretch. Many of the others were similar to last vear, when hurricanes Gustav, Hanna and Ike collectively threatened coastal areas from North Car-"It's rare that we don't have something going on around Labor Day," said Dennis Feltgen, spokesman for the National Hurricane Center in Miami-Dade County. Because it's such a busy stretch, hurricanes have frequently struck the U.S. coast in late August and early September.

Hurricane Katrina, for instance, struck South Florida on Aug. 25, 2005, and New Orleans four days later.

In all, since 1851, the starting point of tropical record-keeping, South Florida has suffered eight hurricane strikes between Aug. 25 and Sept. 7.

Among them was one of the most intense hurricanes in history: The Labor Day Hurricane of 1935, which struck the Keys as a Category 5 monster on Sept. 2.

Then there was Hurricane Andrew, which hit south Miami-Dade County on Aug. 24, 1992, also as a Category 5 buzz-saw. It went on to strike Louisiana two days later.

In nine of the past 20 storm seasons, at least three tropical systems emerged between late August and early September. Some of the memorable ones: Hurricane Felix emerged as a tropical depression on Aug. 31, 2007, and struck Nicaragua as a Category 5 system on Sept. 4. Hurricane Frances formed on Aug. 25, 2004, and hit the Treasure Coast as a Category 2 storm on Sept. 5.

Chris Landsea, science and operations officer for the hurricane center, said that, more broadly speaking, the hurricane season sees 90 percent of its activity in August, September and October. He said, on average, 50 percent of the activity occurs between Aug. 20 and Oct. 10.

"It does vary, year to year, which weeks are most active," he said.

The peak of hurricane season falls on Sept. 10. More hurricanes and tropical storms have been swirling on that date than any other, he said.

"It's not like it's quiet until Sept. 9 and then very busy on Sept. 10," Landsea said. "It's busy before and it's busy after.

Why are August, September and early October the most active months?

"You have all the ingredients for the hurricane recipe showing up at the same time," Landsea said. Among them: warm waters, an abundance of moisture in the atmosphere, strong waves coming off Africa and low wind shear.

Crews dodge flying corks in Wyoming wine truck fire

WAMSUTTER, Wyo. — Battling an intensely hot fire after a semitrailer crashed on Interstate 80, emergency crews were surprised to find themselves suddenly fired upon — by corks from exploding wine bottles inside. "The corks were popping out of the bottles like the old Jiffy Pop we grew up with," Wyoming Highway Patrol Lt. Scott Keane said. "My trooper got hit in the arm with one."

The fire Thursday was so intense it burned the trailer down to its ed the tires and damaged about 75 feet of pavement.

Besides the heat and flying corks, firefighters also had to deal with shattering bottles.

When someone who is hurting financially is invited out with friends, and the person declines your invitation, please don't take it personally. He or she may be watching every penny. Every cent matters if it's needed for bills. A person in this situation cannot afford to "splurge." Believe me, I know what I'm talking about. I have been invited to participate in various social events, and I can't afford to go. This is not something that I want to broadcast either. Some of us may be keeping quiet about it. — IN THAT BOAT IN ILLINOIS

DEAR IN THAT BOAT: I'm sorry you're experiencing tough salling, and I nope you will be out of rough waters soon.

Folks, this person is giving you a timely heads-up. If someone suddenly starts declining social invitations, it does not necessarily indicate that he or she has become antisocial. It may mean the person is financially unable to do so.

DEAR ABBY: My husband, "Fred," sees absolutely nothing wrong with the fact that he did not take a day off from work to attend my 94-yearold mother's funeral. He stopped by the ceremony for the graveside service, then left immediately and returned to work

Fred is an independent traveling salesman who never works more than half a day. He didn't need to hurry back to an office. He didn't even have enough love or respect for me or my mother's family to spend the day with us.

Do you agree this was unkind? He thinks I'm being unreasonable. — WOUNDED WIFE IN COLUM-

DEAR WOUNDED: Of course nis behavior was unkind. It was also insensitive. Losing a parent is painful and his place was by your side offering emotional support.

It appears you married someone who is usually centered on his own needs, and I'm willing to bet this incident isn't the only example. Please accept my sympathy on two counts: First for the loss of your mother, and second, for marrying someone who would be willfully absent when you needed him the most. Whatta guy.

Oct. MUB, Allegheny work may affect water service

The Morgantown Utility Board (MUB), in conjunction with Allegheny Power Company, plans to replace an electric transformer at the Robert C. Creel Water Treatment Plant between 7 a.m.-3 p.m. Oct. 4. Because this work will interrupt power supply to the water treatment plant, MUB will be unable to produce water during this time.

Customers are asked to refrain from unnecessary water use such as watering lawns, washing vehicles, laundry, etc. during this time. Upon completion of the work, water production will resume, and the water storage tanks will begin to refill. Customers at higher elevations may experience changes in water pressure. These conditions will be temporary and the pressure should return to normal by 6 a.m. Oct. 5.

This notice applies to all MUB customers, including the resale water utilities of Star City, Pleasant Valley PSD, Cheat View PSD, Clay-Battelle PSD, River Road PSD, Chaplin Water Association and Clinton Water Association. MUB apologizes for any inconvenience. Info: MUB at (304) 292-8443 from 8 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Monday-Friday or mubmail@mub.org.

Registrar: Degree errors rectified

WVU working to improve its record keeping

BY CASSIE SHANER

The Dominion Pos

WVU is working to improve its record-keeping policies and procedures, and Registrar Steve Robinson said he's confident the discrepancies that left 118 degrees in question won't occur again.

"There's a lot of checks and balances," he said. "I'll never say anything's impossible, but I can't imagine it would happen."

The American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers (AACRAO) recommended creating a registrar's office

- and Robinson's position — earlier this year, after a record-keeping review indicated that WVU lacked campuswide policies and procedures for records management and retention.

As a result of WVU's failure to follow best practices, a follow-up report found that WVU had issued 104 undergraduate and 14 executive MBA degrees from 1997-2008 to students who appeared to have graduated with fewer than the required number of credit hours. In all 118 cases, the records required to verify whether those students earned their degrees were either missing or no longer existed.

AACRAO, a national nonprofit consulting group, was hired to examine records management at WVU after an investigative panel determined that the university had awarded Heather Bresch, the daughter of Gov. Joe Manchin and chief executive officer of Mylan Inc., an eMBA degree she did not earn.

AACRAO recommended a total of 30 action steps to help WVU address its record-keeping issues and prevent discrepancies from occurring in the future. Robinson said it's hard to say how long it will take to implement all the recommendations, but WVU is making progress.

Several critical elements have already been addressed, Robinson said. Deans are required to sign off on degree candidates, every college has designated someone who's responsible for records management, and schools have been directed to use Banner — the university's official record-keeping system instead of other systems to document student information.

"Some of the other things are still a work in progress, but I think on some of the real hot-button items that were in the report, the university's already moved very affirmatively to deal with them,' Robinson said.

He said a variety of individuals and offices at WVU are responsible for implementing the AACRAO recommendations, but

Hotel, McDonald's to open along W.Va. 705

Sonic signs contract, others consider move to Suncrest Towne Centre

UPDATE

The Dominion Post

Fans wanting to get closer to Milan Puskar Stadium for WVU home football games will have another 112 rooms available in late September.

That's when the new Hilton Gardens at Suncrest Towne Centre is aiming to open, said 705 Five Development Group spokesman David Biafora.

A new McDonald's is under construction, and the company projects it will open in mid-October, he added. The roof is going on now. And Sonic signed a contract to locate next to McDonald's with work to start in three or four weeks, he said. The two fast-food establishments will be on parcels adjoining W.Va. 705. But they haven't stopped working on filling the flagship building that runs along the back of the property, which has 95,000 square feet on the first floor and 70,000 square feet on the second, Biafora said.

The first floor, he said, is about 45 percent leased, with restaurants, a nail care salon and other businesses showing interest.

Confirmed are a Ledo's Pizza, the second West Virginia location for the chain, according to the company. The company has numerous pizza and pasta shops in Virginia and Maryland, with the nearest at Deep Creek Lake, McHenry, Md. The chain, featuring rectangular pizzas, began in 1955 in Adelphi, Md.

Leases have been sent to, but not yet returned from, several firms, Biafora said.

"I have a lease out on another restaurant I can't name," he said. "Five Guys Burgers has a lease in hand and is considering it. I have a lease out to a pet food and supplies store. Jimmy John's sandwich shop, Ntelos and Cellular One all have leases to sign.

The nearest Five Guys Burgers restaurant is in the Pittsburgh area, according to the company. The first Five Guys location opened in Arlington, Va., in 1986, and gradually spread with more than 300 locations in more than 25 states now. This would be the firm's first West Virginia location. Five Guys features burgers and hot dogs, with your choice of 15 toppings.

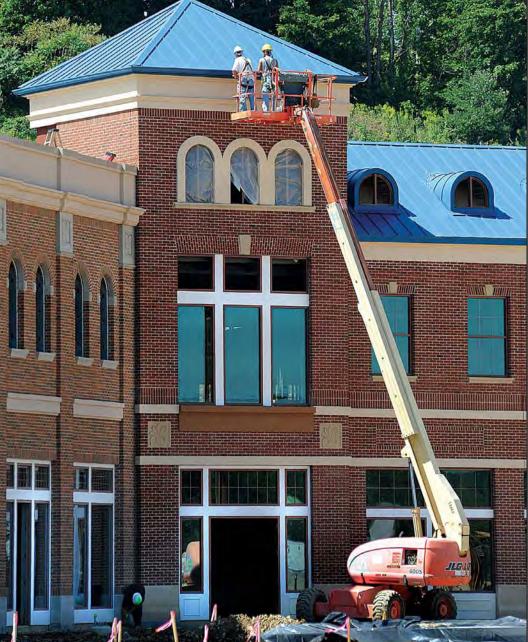

Morgantown already has a Jimmy John's sandwich shop on High Street. Both cellular firms are well known in the area.

What else is on the way?

"We've got a Chinese sit-down restaurant that took 8,000 square feet," Biafora said, "and a theme/logo store for logo goods. There's a brother-and-sister Mexican restaurant, also a sit-down restaurant, and we're talking to an eyeglass store.

Other parts of the Towne Centre property aren't being ignored while efforts are made to fill the main building.

"WVU is planning to remodel and build out the rest of the building across from First United Bank for the Heart Cardiac Rehab center, taking a floor and a half above Damon's," Biafora said.

Construction crews near completion of the exterior work for the retail complex in the new Suncrest Towne Centre.

"In about two months, we'll start finishing the three skeletons down on the edge. We had to put everybody on the main building, so not much work has been done there.'

General Industries is in charge of the entire site, he said.

In addition to the buildings that are under way, plans are to have four more buildings, about 65,000-70,000 square feet in total, closer to W.Va. 705, he said.

"I would like to see a craft store, a book store — we have some outpad sites for restaurants, and we're talking to a couple furniture

Three puppies stolen from Fairmont Road home

BY BRANDY BRUBAKER The Dominion Post

Someone broke into a Fairmont Road woman's house Thursday and stole three 5-week-old English Bulldog puppies, while the woman was out trying to find a prospective buyer who claimed to be lost.

The woman, Debbie Corwin, said she thinks she was conned.

"They broke in through our sliding glass door, after they lured me down the road, and they took my puppies," Corwin said.

She has filed a report with West Virginia State Police, but the investigating officer was not available for comment in time for this report. Corwin said a man, who said he was from Pittsburgh, called her and wanted to see the puppies Thursday. He phoned from the road to say he was lost and asked her to meet him so he could follow her back to her house.

He never showed and, when Corwin got back, her sliding door was open and the puppies — three red and white males — were gone.

Corwin, a bus driver for Monongalia County Schools, said she placed an ad on an online service to sell the puppies for $2,000 each, although they weren't weaned yet. Her personal pet, an English Bulldog, had three boys and one girl and Corwin planned to keep one of the boys — who she named Brutus — numbers online and one of them may be from a free Internet phone service, which means the call could've been placed from anywhere in the world even though it appeared to come from New York City.

Corwin said she wanted to share her story to try to find her puppies and, also, to try to make sure no one else has their puppies stolen.

She said the man she talked to had a foreign accent. Her neighbor saw a white Pontiac Grand Prix drive around the area several times between 9:45 and 11 a.m. Thursday, around the time the theft occurred. They don't know if that car is related to the incident.

Corwin said she sent a text message to the Pittsburgh telephone number saying something like "How could you take my puppies?" and someone replied "Ha ha ha. Good luck. You're looking in the wrong place.'

Corwin's husband, Bruce, said he's certain the prospective buyer was involved in the theft because he got Debbie Corwin to drive six or seven miles away from the home — giving him plenty of time to steal the puppies.

He suggested that people selling puppies should not use their home telephone number or give their home address to prevent this from happening. Meet prospective buyers in a public place, he said.

"I figure they're not just doing it to us. They're doing it to other people," Bruce Corwin said.

The situation got even more bizarre Friday afternoon when the Corwins started getting more text messages from the Pittsburgh number.

The texter said the puppies are fine and are nursing on his or her bulldog. The person texted "You harassed my son last year," which made Debbie Corwin think it could be the parent of one of the kids she had trouble with on her bus routes.

WVU spokesman Dan Kim said the provost's office is ultimately accountable.

Jonathan Cumming, chairman of WVU's academic records management task force and WVU's AACRAO project team leader, said Robinson — who reports to interim Provost E. Jane Martin — has assumed the bulk of the responsibility. "All the details of implementation that were easily done have been taken care of," Cumming said. "We hired Steve, and that was a

'Ready-made agenda'

Robinson said the AACRAO recommendations served as a "readymade agenda" when he started work at WVU, but some changes will take more time, like improving and increasing the use of Banner.

"Everyone was using it," he said. "It's just a matter of knowing its complete functionality and how it can support their individual missions.

"That's really a process that's going to take a while, as we uncover individual needs that we have never known about and demonstrate how we can support that in Banner."

AACRAO recommended hiring a Banner specialist and expanding the registrar's staff, if necessary, but Robinson said he's not sure if he needs to hire anyone yet. There may be someone on staff now who can fill the specialist's role, and AACRAO data shows that his staff is on par for an institution of its size. Robinson's staff consists of about 25 people who previously worked in WVU's combined admissions and records unit. Another 30 employees within the unit report to Marilyn Potts, WVU's interim director of admissions.

Other recommendations WVU is still working on involve crafting policies for unreported grades and document retention.

The retention policy will be a highly specific document that spells out record-keeping rules for each school and the campus as a whole. Robinson said he plans to start by determining what records will be kept in his office, and then work with the schools to determine what records they need to keep and for how long.

An advisory board with representatives from each college will meet with Robinson monthly and help determine school-specific rules.

"We're definitely in the infancy on that one, but we have started it," Robinson said. "We're starting with my office, and then we'll go university-wide.

AACRAO also suggested WVU invest in additional software to improve record-keeping and degree certification. Kim said the university paid $144,000 for a degree audit system called DegreeWorks, but document-imaging software has not been purchased vet.

WVU is seeking a new chief information officer, and Robinson said the person who fills that position will likely help select the best imaging software.

Student transcripts and other documents will still be kept in hard copy or on microfilm, but Robinson said the imaging software will help minimize paper and save space. Like Banner, the information it contains will be safeguarded and backed up by WVU's information technology department.

Records kept in hard copy are stored in the registrar's office, at Colson Hall and off-site at Iron Mountain, a storage facility in

Assisted Living Week to shine spotlight on caregivers' traditions

West Virginia Health Care Association announces that assisted living communities statewide will celebrate National Assisted Living Week by focusing on the traditions of those who play an important role in their communities — residents, family members, volunteers and staff. The celebration will be Sept. 13-19. This year's theme, "Traditions of the Heart," is a reminder to stay connected with family, friends and history by sharing traditions. Numerous activities and events are planned to honor those who live and work in assisted living communities.

Gov. Joe Manchin recently issued a proclamation to assisted living staff and residents in the Governor's Reception Room at the Capitol. He welcomed attendees and thanked the staff for their commitment to caring for residents.

Assisted living staff work daily to learn about residents' traditions and how the traditions influence who they are and how they live life. In West Virginia, family traditions are so important. We hope that friends and family members will stop by assisted living communities to visit loved ones during the week of Sept. 13. Take time to reminisce about the traditions you share and start new traditions with those you care about," said Jesse Samples, chief executive officer of the West Virginia Health Care Association.

Submitted to The Dominion Post

The Monongahela National Forest, the Canaan Valley National Wildlife Refuge, and WVU Adventure Club have teamed up to host a National Public Lands Day event Sept. 26.

Volunteers are being sought to help plant native red spruce seedlings on the forest and adjacent refuge lands to protect high elevation streams and connect spruce in the higher elevations to the floor of Canaan Valley.

People willing to assist in the red spruce planting project should meet at the Canaan Valley National Wildlife Refuge Visitor Center at 10 a.m. Sept. 26.

Gloves, sturdy shoes or boots, long pants and appropriate rain gear should be brought by each volunteer, along with food and water. National Public Lands Day 2009 T-shirts will be given to the first 100 volunteers.

The project is part of a long-term landscape scale effort by a consortium of partners cooperating as the High Elevation Working Group to conserve high elevation habitats in West Virginia.

A major focus of the group's efforts is on restoring a functioning red spruce-northern hardwood forest ecosystem across both public and private lands.

Among the wildlife species which will benefit from the additional planting of red spruce in Canaan Valley are the threatened Cheat Mountain Salamander; the West Virginia northern flying squirrel, which was only recently removed from the federal list of threatened or endangered species; rare birds such as the northern goshawk and sawwhet owl; and other species that inhabit the limited spruce-fir forests in West Virginia.

Summit tackles W.Va. asset poverty

Submitted to The Dominion Post

The West Virginia Alliance for Sustainable Families (WVASF) will host a statewide summit Sept. 29 at Jackson's Mill in Weston to discuss asset poverty in the state.

The issue is of great concern because many families have limited opportunities to build wealth and financial security. Assets range from bank accounts to homes and cars, as well as more intangible items, such as knowledge gained from education or relationships and social networks.

The summit will feature experts from the field of asset building, both nationally and statewide. Kartik Athreya, Ph.D., senior economist with The Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, Va., will present the keynote address "An Economic Framework for Understanding Asset Accumulation among Low-Income Populations." "How To Protect Yourself And Your Loved One From Ending Up In A Nursing Home And What To Do If You Can't"

Morgantown, WV - One of the biggest fears that many people have today is the fear of having their life savings of 30 years or more wiped out in a matter of months because of a nursing home need. This workshop is designed to inform you about Senior Financial Survival in the year 2009 and beyond. Whether you or a family member is in a crisis or not, it's important to know that there are Federal Laws that could potentially enable you to avoid paying thousands of dollars out of pocket for nursing home costs and ultimately probate. The Government will not notify you of your eligibility; it is your responsibility to find out for yourself. Most retirees are unaware that the laws on asset protection and long term care planning changed drastically on February 8, 2006. It is extremely important to learn how these changes may affect you, your money and your ability to pay for long term care now or in the future. A free informational workshop hosted by the Estate and Elder Planning Center will be held at:

Sen. Baucus: Time to act on health care

WASHINGTON — The Senate's chief Democratic negotiator on a health care bill is indicating it's time to act and has told his colleagues he won't wait much longer for a Republican compromise.

"I am committed to getting health care reform done - done soon and done right," Montana Sen. Max Baucus said in a statement. He is considering making a formal proposal soon to the small group of Senate negotiators who call themselves the "Bipartisan Six."

Baucus held a nearly two-hour teleconference on Friday with the other five negotiators from his committee. The group has struggled for months to come up with an acceptable bipartisan bill.

While careful to leave the door open to a long-sought deal, Baucus clearly signaled the time has come for him to move ahead.

President Barack Obama plans to address a joint session of Congress on Wednesday to boost health care reform, a key element of his ambitious domestic agenda.

The president, meanwhile, is trying to placate some unhappy House members who fear he's too eager to compromise with Republicans and conservative Democrats to get a bill.

In a call from Camp David, the presidential retreat in Maryland, Obama spoke to leaders of the Congressional Progressive Caucus and other liberal-leaning House groups.

The caucus leader, Rep. Lynn Woolsey, D-Calif., said the lawmakers expressed their commitment to creation of a governmentrun plan to compete with private health insurers. On Thursday, they sent Obama a letter saying they could not support a health bill that lacked such a public option.

Woolsey said Obama listened, asked questions and said discussions should continue. She said a follow-up meeting will occur next week at the White House. Another participant said the president was noncommittal about the government-run plan.

tee is the only one of five congressional committees with jurisdiction over health care that has yet to produce a bill.

The Senate Finance Commit-

On Friday, Baucus said the members of his group agree on several bigpicture items, including the need to control costs, provide access to affordable coverage for all Americans and ensure that health care fixes don't add to the deficit. The negotiators have been working on a pared-back bill that would cost under $1 trillion over 10 years and drop contentious components, such as the government-sponsored insurance plan that liberals insist must be in the legislation.

But with Republican leaders solidly opposed to Obama's approach, the GOP negotiators are under tremendous pressure not to cooperate. In the last few weeks, two GOP negotiators — Chuck Grassley of Iowa and Mike Enzi of Wyoming - have made harsh public statements about the Democrats' approach. The third Republican, Olympia Snowe of Maine, has been circumspect.

For jobless, Labor Day is hardly a holiday

WASHINGTON — Every day it's a battle.

The nearly 15 million unemployed Americans won't enjoy Labor Day as a relaxing respite from work. Instead, they'll once again need to prepare to get up, hit the pavement and keep hunting for a job.

As the jobless rate nears 10 percent, even those fortunate enough to be employed fret about keeping their jobs. But for those without them, it's a daily struggle with emotional and economic distress.

"It's hard to maintain your focus that you're a valuable member of society when you go three months and nobody really wants to employ you," says David O'Bryan, 59, of Barre, Vt.

To cope with the stress, O'Bryan jots down his thoughts in a journal he carries around. He's seeking a new career in the education field. In one recent entry, he wrote:

"I'm finding the process of trying to get into schools both tedious and frustrating. I wish I could have some concrete feedback on why I'm not being hired. Overweight? No para-educator certificate in effect? No confidence in my ability to perform the job?"

The economy is showing signs of being on the mend. Yet that's hardly reassuring to the unemployed this Labor Day weekend. The job market is in lousy shape and will stay that way for a while.

The nation's jobless rate jumped to a 26-year high of 9.7 percent in August from 9.4 percent in July. It's expected to top 10 percent this year and keep climbing into part of next year before falling back. The post-World War II high was 10.8 percent at the end of 1982.

And it could take four years or more for the unemployment rate to fall back down to a normal level of about 5 percent. Gregory Przybylski, 46, of suburban Milwaukee has grown increasingly anxious since losing his job as a machine operator in March 2008.

"It's getting scary," said Przybylski, a bachelor who has spent the past several months studying for a high school equivalency degree. "I'm just hoping to be working by Christmas.' Przybylski said he's using his time to study and improve himself so he'll be ready once the economy turns around. But he fears being thrust into a new career after spending so many years as a machinist.

"I've been doing this since 1980 that's what I know," he said, slowly shaking his head.

"It's stressful whether you have a job or not," says Patricia Drentea, associate professor of sociology at the University of Alabama at Birmingham. "If you are out of a job, it can be demoralizing to know that the tide has not yet turned. For those still in jobs, there is the constant worry that there is going to be more layoffs."

The worst recession since World War II has claimed a net total of 6.9 million jobs — and more losses are expected, casting a pall over this year's Labor Day.

The strains of rising unemployment are making people — those with jobs and those without — more frugal. And they're likely to remain cautious spenders in coming months, crimping the budding economic recovery.

Portion of deadly Calif. wildfire under control

Niko Solario, an artist who had lived in his friend's home on Stonyvale Road off and on for five years, prepares to videotape the ruins of the home after the Station fire swept through Big Tujunga Canyon in the Angeles National Forest, just outside the Sunland area of Los Angeles.

Close to Morgantown & Westover near the River Rd.

LOS ANGELES — The entire western edge of the massive wildfire burning north of Los Angeles was under control Saturday, but the arson-caused blaze continued to move unchecked into wilderness to the east, officials said.

Investigators, meanwhile, were working to find the arsonist responsible for the huge wildfire that has killed two firefighters and burned nearly 242 square miles, or 154,655 acres, of the Angeles National Forest. It was 49 percent contained. At least 76 homes and dozens of other structures have been destroyed.

Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger offered a $100,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the culprit.

The risk to homes was significantly reduced as hand crews held the fire line to the north, south and west, said U.S. Forest Service spokeswoman Michelle Caldwell. Aerial water drops were expected to resume Saturday to slow the fire's eastern movement into the rural San Gabriel Wilderness.

Overnight, firefighters built six miles of new lines on the northwestern flank of the blaze near Santa Clarita, according to Forest Service spokeswoman Barbara Rebisky.

A historic observatory and TV, radio and other antennas on Mount Wilson, which at one point were dangerously close to the flames, appeared safe, she said.

"They say Mount Wilson is prepped better than it's been in about the last 100 years," Rebisky said. "That's looking real good."

Crews with local utilities were preparing to move into the fire zone to repair or replace more than 1,000 damaged or downed power lines, Rebisky said.

The weekend weather forecast called for cooler temperatures and slightly higher humidity that could help firefighters further surround the blaze, which has cost fire agencies $37 million to fight.

At least a dozen investigators were working to analyze clues found at a charred hillside, including incendiary material reported to have been found there. Officials said the fire was arson but were still investigating who started it and how.

'We are in the early stages, just beginning to put things together," said Los Angeles County sheriff's Lt. Liam Gallagher, who is heading the homicide investigation. "Firefighters losing their lives in the line of duty is an added incentive, but we work every case to the fullest."

Near a large shade tree where crews get their twice-daily briefings, firefighters set up a makeshift memorial for Capt. Tedmund Hall and Specialist Arnaldo Quinones. The fallen firefighters helped save about 60 members of an inmate fire crew last Sunday as flames approached their camp when they set a backfire that allowed the group to get to safety.

Hillary movie puts campaign finance limits at risk

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court appears poised to wipe away limits on campaign spending by corporations and labor unions in time for next year's congressional elections in a case that began as a dispute over a movie about Hillary Rodham Clinton.

The justices return to the bench Wednesday — nearly a month early — to consider whether to overrule two earlier decisions that restrict how and when corporations and unions can take part in federal campaigns. Laws that impose similar limits in 24 states also are threatened.

The court first heard arguments in March in the case of whether "Hillary: The Movie," a scathingly critical look at Clinton's presidential ambitions, could be regulated as a campaign ad. The emphasis has shifted away from the 90-minute film.

Now the justices could decide whether corporations and unions should be treated differently from individuals when it comes to campaign spending.

Appeals court rules against Ashcroft in 9/11 case

BOISE, Idaho — A federal appeals court has ruled that former Attorney General John Ashcroft can be sued by people detained as material witnesses after 9/11, and called the government practice "repugnant to the Constitution.'

who claim they were wrongfully

A three-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit of Appeals ruled Friday that the claims of a former University of Idaho student plausibly suggest Ashcroft purposely used the material witness statute to detain suspects whom he wished to investigate and detain preventively.

The ruling allows Abdullah al-Kidd, a U.S. citizen, to proceed with a lawsuit that claims his constitutional rights were violated when he was detained in 2003 as a material witness in a federal ter rorism case.

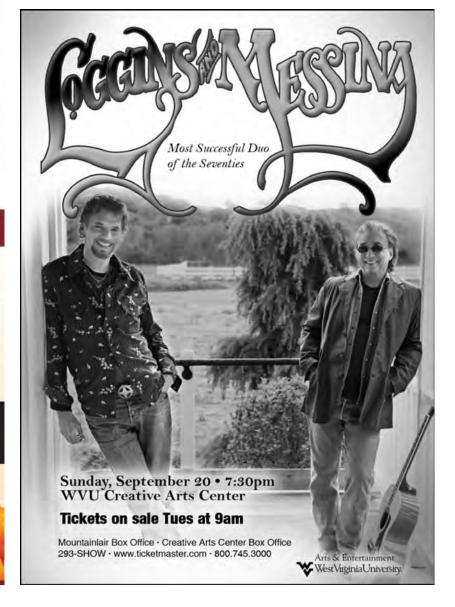

Small plane crashes into Okla. park, 5 dead

TULSA, Okla. — Five people are dead after a small plane crashed amid heavy fog in northeast Oklahoma.

The Piper aircraft was on its way to Dallas on Saturday when it crashed into a park near a baseball field in Tulsa.

Investigators said the six-passenger plane may have hit a guide wire from a communications tower that wasn't visible because of fog.

Authorities said two adult males, an adult female and two juvenile females were killed. Their names haven't been released. No one on the ground was injured.

Subsidence common but recent data lacking

Associated Press

BENLD, Ill. — The way a few teachers tell it, the elementary school in the central Illinois farming town suddenly started giving off freakish cracking and popping sounds on a Saturday not too long ago. Walls sprouted lightning boltshaped cracks and floors buckled, dooming the building on a day no students thankfully were inside.

The culprit: A long-abandoned coal mine hundreds of feet below whose pillars had given way. It's a wildly unpredictable phenomenon all too common across coal country, where over the years scores of homes, schools, businesses and roads have cropped up over closed mines and threatened their stability.

The problem, called subsidence, has been around for more than a century, though recent figures pinpointing its national scale are lacking. Comprehensive federal reports often are decades old. One report dated 1979 estimated that more than eight million acres of U.S. land had been burrowed out by mining, with subsidence affecting about one-fourth of it. Those numbers are certain to be stale.

Subsidence experts say the problem has been documented in more than 30 states and on lands belonging to six American Indian tribes.

On a road in Pennsylvania's Washington County, subsidence

Gillespie School District superintendent Paul Skeans shows off cracks on the wall and floor inside the Benld Elementary School caused by mine subsidence, leading to the condemning of the building in Benld, III.

Aug. 6 caused anything but a pothole. The 12-foot-wide, 20-foot-deep sinkhole blamed on a mine below opened up on Pa. 88, forcing continued detours for motorists as crews try to mend the crater.

In Illinois, more than a million acres — 3 percent of the state have been mined out for coal as of 2007, including 827,000 acres of underground burrowing, according to the Illinois State Geological Survey. More than 178,000 acres of that is occupied by homes or industry, according to state figures dating to 1991. Those numbers are the latest available and certain to be outdated as urban sprawl gobbles up one-time mine lands.

Avoiding those mines in central and southern Illinois is very difficult, said Bob Gibson, a subsidence expert with the Illinois Department of Natural Resources' abandoned mine lands unit. His team has monitored every subsidence event in southern Illinois since the late 1970s.

In the 1,500-resident town of Benld, the district's leaders knew the school sat above a mine even before it was built seven years ago to replace an 82-year-old school next door also damaged from a mine below. But they didn't hire collapse-predicting specialists, buy extra insurance or backfill the mines with noncompressible waste material or concrete, a very pricey proposition.

In fact, they're not required to. Illinois has no state building regulations that mandate a complete study of the prospect of mine collapse.

Then on March 28, pillars in what had been Superior Coal Co.'s No. 2 mine collapsed and filled in those tunnels with tons of soil and rock, dooming the elementary school.

Such collapses frustrate property owners left holding the bag because the companies that created the underground honeycombs often have long faded away.

While seeking a $350,000 insurance payout, the Benld school's district is suing Union Pacific Railroad, which in the mid-1990s swallowed up the former railroad company whose holdings included Superior Coal Co. The suit, also targeting architect Wight & Co. that designed the school, seeks damages of $22 million — the district's estimated cost of tearing down and replacing the ruined school.

The school is on borrowed time. In the gymnasium, a 2-inch-wide crack zigzags along the floor, then juts outside and across the parking lot.

Red circular metal posts shoring up some entryways are the only things keeping the roof from caving in, said Paul Skeans, the district's superintendent.

'The entire frame of the building is being twisted. At some point, it's all gonna come down," Skeans said, shaking his head, "Wheneyer I come down here, I get sad all over again."

Obama's back-to-school message is responsibility

WASHINGTON — Classrooms are filling up as kids head back to school, and Education Secretary Arne Duncan's two children are among them.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Duncan said students should take more responsibility for doing well in school, and he called on their parents to step up, too.

Duncan said that is the message of President Barack Obama's address to students on Tuesday. He also thanked teachers for being "unsung heroes." Highlights from the interview:

Q: What was your favorite thing about going back to school as a kid?

A: I love this time of year. I remember there was almost a smell of new school — new pencils, new erasers, new magic markers. There's something magical about it.

Q: What's different for kids today than when you were a kid? They face bigger challenges than when you were a kid.

A: I actually think there's more at stake than ever before. It's almost a life-or-death issue today.

For students that don't have a great education, students that don't really apply themselves — those that do have a whole series of doors continue to open for them as they get older. And those who don't see doors start to close on them very, very quickly.

There's also a lot more temptation than ever before. I'm not that old, but I didn't have MTV. We didn't have video games. There's a whole bunch of things today that can get in the way of students really applying themselves academically.

The flip side is, there's a whole set of opportunities, the Internet, chances to learn in ways that just didn't exist before.

Q: What's different about the back-to-school time now that you're a parent?

A: It's super exciting. I have an incoming second-grader and a kindergartner. I can't believe they're that old. As a parent, you just want

It's the first time our kids are going to be at the same school together. They're really looking forward to that. My daughter's being a great elder sibling, figuring out how she can take care of my son on the first day and walk him into class. She's

Q: The president is making an address to the nation's schoolkids on Tuesday. You've encouraged schools to watch the speech. What ideas, broadly speaking, do you expect him to talk about? A: What's so fun about working for the president is this is so personal for him. He did not grow up with a silver spoon in his mouth. His father wasn't around much. There were times when his family was on welfare.

And here he is, the president of our country, the leader of the free world, because he received a great education and worked so hard.

He's challenging all of us, but he is absolutely going to challenge students and parents to take their education seriously, to really have personal responsibility.

He really is asking students to think about how critically important it is that they do well, that they take advantage of those opportunities and they apply themselves and they work hard.

Q: The one idea kids might not want to hear about is more time in school.

A: This is not my most popular line when I've talked to young folks. But I think the idea of schools being open five days a week, six hours a day, nine months of the year just doesn't work for families in our country anymore.

Families are working one and two and three jobs now to make ends meet. Schools are safe havens. We want to make sure those are open longer hours, after school, weekends, throughout the summer.

I also want to make sure that our students can compete in an international economy. They're competing for jobs against children in India and China. And the fact is that many of those young people in other countries are going to school 25, 30 percent longer than our students here.

I think our students are smarter than anyone. I just want to give them a chance to be successful.

Project turns former mines into habitat for honey bees

LEXINGTON, Ky. — On a recent muggy morning, Tammy Horn used a smoker to puff aromatic drafts into wooden beehives beneath a locust tree, then carefully removed the top of a hive.

Inside, thousands of honeybees were making sweet liquid gold in this place where noisy machinery once dug out a form of black gold.

The bee yard is on a reclaimed surface coal mine, one of four Horn has set up in Perry and Leslie counties in a project to create good conditions for honeybees on reclaimed mine land.

The Coal Country Beeworks project is among the emerging efforts to find new uses for such land.

Horn, a researcher with Eastern Kentucky University, is looking to expand the project to other counties and neighboring states.

The goal is to help create a flourishing industry in eastern Kentucky based on bees, with hundreds of people producing honey as well as wax for cosmetics and candles; rearing queens; providing bee colonies to pollinate crops; and doing research.

Even if that dream doesn't come true, using surface mines to create food for bees will have significant benefits.

"We may not provide positions for 500 employees, but we'll provide food for 500,000 pollinators," said Horn, with the Environmental Research Institute at EKU. "We're setting up a biosphere for the future."

That's important because bees play a crucial role in agricultural production. A third of our diet comes from sources pollinated by insects, the U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates, and bees do 80 percent of that work.

It's also important because the nation's bee population has been decimated, first by mites in the 1980s and more recently by an affliction called colony collapse disorder.

Commercial beekeepers began eing losses of 30 percent to 90 percent of their colonies in 2006. Scientists have not pinned down a cause for the disorder.

Part of the solution, however, could be providing habitat and food

Man who reported Ga. massacre charged

Associated Press

BRUNSWICK, Ga. — Family members prepared Saturday to bury seven people killed in a mobile home park massacre in southeast Georgia, while also grappling with the shocking news that one of their own relatives had been charged in the slayings.

Police arrested Guy Heinze Jr., 22, late Friday in the killings that included his own father. Heinze reported the gruesome scene to authorities in a chilling 911 call, frantically telling a dispatcher "My whole family's dead" after returning home from a night out to the mobile home where he lived with his father and other relatives.

After a week working a case so murky they could not say whether a killer was on the loose, police said Heinze was responsible and charged him with eight counts of first-degree murder. Among the dead were seven of his relatives, plus a boyfriend of one of Heinze's cousins.

Football creates a community

EACH SEPTEMBER we're reminded of the event that transforms Morgantown from a college campus to something much greater than a mere institution.

This time of the year the fresh, mountain air fills with autumn rain and the sight of changing leaves. It also fills with the spirit and community that makes each and every one of us a Mountaineer. Even from the farthest vantage point, every spectator's reaction is the same: exhilaration, suspense and the feeling that among the tens of thousands of other students, faculty, staff and Morgantown residents, he or she belongs among the blue and gold.

Sure, it sounds cliche and most likely, it is, but I challenge

any nonbeliever to visit even a mile from the stadium on game day and listen carefully. At that moment they will hear the voices of more than 60,000 people cheering and and at one point, singing along to "Take Me Home, Country Roads.'

They will hear the sound of football season and undoubtedly will finally understand.

For those who didn't have a ticket this Saturday or fail to receive them in the future, there's no reason to be discouraged. If you didn't notice, there is just as much energy outside of the stadium as there is inside. In fact, if you go to the game and don't at least walk through the "blue lot" or take part in a tailgate of some kind, you're missing out on part of the experience. The scene outside the stadium is a giant tapestry of people in blue and gold, with music blaring, barbeques smoking and fans tossing bags in games of corn hole. Thousands of strangers come together to celebrate the same, unifying support for our team.

In other words, it's a must see. Some may view football games as free-for-alls filled with binge drinking and inappropriate behavior. To be honest, it's partially true. There's a large number of people who just go for the party and due to alcoholfilled pregaming, don't stay awake long enough to see kickoff. But these people can be found at any major sporting event and no matter how many e-mails the university sends out, students will continue to make their own choices.

Despite this, all spectators should at least keep in mind two essential rules: Be respectful

All of us are part of the intense fanaticism, fervor and passion that transcends the field. In other countries, this phenomenon can be seen in a different sport with the same name. Despite the difference in rules, the size of the field or the language in which we cheer on our players, we all share the same understanding of the excitement that comes with a new season.

On Saturday, this excitement was ignited within us and will burn bright until the last game arrives and the sad December sun sets in the sky.

Let's go Mountaineers!

Office of Multicultural Programs promotes ethnic awareness

BY NIKKI CANNON For The Dominion Post

Found under WVU's Office of Student Life, the university's Office of Multicultural Programs stands on three pillars: promoting ethnic awareness, and increasing awareness of local Appalachian and foreign cultures.

The program has been in existence five years, since Perunative Cecilia Rollins, a former WVU professor who passed away from cancer last year, brought the idea to fruition.

"She was a wonderful person. Truly a multicultural person," said Tom Sloane, senior associate dean of Student Life and a member of the Multicultural Program since its beginning.

Rollins, who hailed from Peru, grew up in France with a strong Italian background. As a WVU professor, she taught a course on diversity, and as a student completed her dissertation with the same theme.

"She wanted everyone to have the opportunity to know about as many cultures as possible," Sloane said, noting that WVU houses students from more than 100 countries and every state in the United

Many subdivisions of interest are housed in the Office of

One of the programs' larger activities, the Cultural Attache series, promoted the awareness of French culture during the 2009 spring semester. Program officials design the events to inform students and community members of the cultures and current themes of interest in other countries. Presented by official representatives from that nation, they have a goal of strengthening relationships between foreign countries and the United States.

Multicultural Programs, including promotion of historical, cultural, and religious understanding, as well as an awareness of gender and gay and lesbian rights.

But the program does not limit itself. It has also branched out into the environmental world, the theme of one of the very first programs hosted. Another forum was themed on spirituality and offered views from all walks of life, Christianity to Atheism, Buddhism to Islam and everything in between.

Rollins' former assistant, Vivien Exartier, now heads the program, offering a variety of events and activities for students and community members to attend and take part in.

"We always want to do better and bigger," said Exartier, a native of France who's lived in the United States for eight vears now.

While working on a doctorate in political science at WVU, Exartier also plans the program's activities which include the Brown Bag Lunch Film and Discussion Series, a series of excerpts from a variety of films and documentaries showcasing diversity. These films are often presentations from one of WVU's organizations or students from outside the country and are presented Thursday afternoons at the Gluck Theater in the Mountainlair. "You really get to learn about what happens in a specific culture." he said. "They just do a tremendous job."

One of the programs' larger activities, the Cultural Attache series, promoted the awareness of French culture during the 2009 spring semester. Program officials design the events to inform students and community members of the cultures and current themes of interest in other countries. Presented by official representatives from that nation, they have a goal of strengthening relationships between foreign countries and the United States.

"All of our programs are trying to reach out to the community," Exartier said.

The programs also include a series that hits close to home for area residents. Called "The Benefits of Being Appalachian," it's presented by the Appalachian Cultures Committee and brings to light the sometimes forgotten wonders of the region, including folklore, song, food and dance, as well as forums focused on problems in Appalachia, such as poverty and diet.

The Multicultural Program can also be found getting involved with Welcome Orientation Week and Mountaineer Week. They also have various activities that take place during awareness months, such as Black History Month and push for freshman attendance through their involvement with University 101 classes.

In association with the Black Culture and Research Center, the program is hoping to develop a similar center in relation to the Latino population as well as to branch out to Muslims and Asians.

"We're always looking for ideas to expand," Sloane said.

If any student would like to become involved with the Multicultural Program, they can visit their offices in the Umoja Room in the Mountainlair or attend one of the programs offered.

Upcoming events include a three-day Cultural Attache on Peru beginning Sept. 22. Held in memory of Rollins, students from Adventure West Virginia – who recently visited Peru will make a presentation in addition to Rollins' brothers and husband.

International Studies Program welcomes CIA Officer in Residence

Submitted to The Dominion Post

Students in WVU's International Studies Program will have the opportunity to learn about the inner workings of the intelligence and national security field from an experienced insider thanks to the Central Intelligence Agency's Officer in Residence Program.

Valerie Patterson will be an officer in residence in the International Studies Program from August 2009 through May 2011. This fall, she is teaching Civil Liberties in the Time of War. In the future, she will also teach courses in intelligence issues through spy novels and national security law.

"This is an unprecedented opportunity for our students to learn from a senior analyst working in field," said Joe Hagan, Barnett Professor in Political Science and director of the International Studies Program. "In the past, officers have typically chosen to serve at Ivy League institutions and the major sion to join the program underscores the richness of our academic offerings in international affairs, specifically in the area intelligence and national security. She is a terrific addition to our strong faculty."

Patterson was pleased that WVU already had an active international relations program and offered courses in national security-related topics.

"I specifically wanted to be part of a program at a state university rather than a private university because I like the idea of giving something military academies. Valerie's deciback to public education," Patter son said. "This is an opportunity for me to broaden my experiences and understand how the agency is perceived on the outside. When I go back, I hope that my time here will benefit the government."

Most recently, Patterson was the chief of the Administrative Law Division in the Office of the General Counsel at the CIA. In that capacity, from 2005 to June 2009, she managed a legal team that provided guidance on a full range of administrative law issues. Beginning as an attorney-advisor in 1990 and moving through the ranks to an associate general counsel, she concentrated on fiscal law, personnel and ethics, as well as issues related to intelligence collection and covert action within the National Clandestine Service. She also served as executive associate general counsel (a chief of staff equivalent position) from late

From 1985 to 1990, Patterson was an intelligence analyst for the Directorate of Intelligence at the CIA. She provided political risk and leadership analysis of the South American region. In her position, she routinely briefed U.S. policymakers and served as a substantive expert at interagency meetings.

In addition to her work with the CIA, Patterson is an author of fiction. Her first work for teens, "The Other Side of Blue," will be published by Clarion Books, an imprint of Houghton Mifflin Harcourt, in October. The book is about how 15-yearold Cyan comes to terms with the mystery of her father's death.

Patterson graduated cum laude from Florida State University with a double major in English and Spanish and is a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

At FSU, she went on to complete a master's degree in international affairs and a law degree. Additionally, she received an MFA in children's literature from Hollins Uni-

Since the program started in 1985, the CIA has sponsored officers at more than 50 academic institutions. Usually, there are eight to 12 Officers-in-Residence each year at institutions across the country. The objective of the program is to promote broader understanding of intelligence roles and missions, closer collaboration with the academic community and contributions to the scholarly literature on intelligence.

Mistakes? Sure, but still not too bad for openers

WHEN HE DESCRIBES the style and play of his unit, Jeff Mullen often breaks things down in terms of perception vs. reality. So let's take one out of the WVU offensive coordinator's playbook in talking about the Mountaineers' season-opening, 33-20 win against Liberty.

The perception, which isn't necessarily false but rather lacking a few details, is not a great one: WVU let a Division I-AA program stick around until the fourth quarter. The Mountaineers were 5-for-5 in red-zone scoring opportunities, but the offense stalled and had to settle for four field goals.

A veteran WVU defense, meanwhile, wasn't so crisp, and the kickoff coverage in the first half? Yikes.

The reality is, no one could argue any of those points, but it's a first game, so let's look at the bigger picture here.

Saturday was a test run, a time to check the engine and work out a few kinks. WVU's next game against East Carolina, perhaps the best team on its schedule now that's the test.

"This first game, it's a lot of just seeing how everything works in the offense, defense and special teams," WVU tight end Tyler Urban said.

There were times Saturday when WVU's offense looked like a well-balanced product, and there were times quarterback Jarrett Brown was forced to scramble for his life.

But to call the game frustrating, well, Mullen couldn't go that far. For good reason.

"Clearly, too many mistakes we've got to get cleaned up, so there is ... I guess if it was a loss, tremendous amounts of frustra tion, but with a win it kind of buffers that evil word," Mullen said. "Clearly, we have a lot of work to do to get corrected."

But rather than just look at the obvious, let's consider the finer details for a second. Before the season, former WVU coach Don Nehlen said this Mountaineers team would be better than a year ago. Most people would be hardpressed to say WVU didn't look more comfortable, more natural than it did a great deal of the 2008 season. Consider: WVU had 438 yards of offense; in 2008, it topped that number just four times. The first time was the fourth game of the season, against Marshall.

Other things are less visible but still offer little insights into progress. For instance, just the way WVU signals in plays to Brown and company is different. Before many plays, backup quarterback Geno Smith was standing on the field to shield one of three signalers from view of many Liberty defenders.

'We've kind of done some things differently this season," Mullen said. "We've got three guys out there signaling, and we mix up who is 'live,' and we've got a guy hiding. It's just things you're able to do a little bit better as the offense has been implemented. You can get better with the little things, and that's one of the little things we've improved upon."

On the defensive side, no doubt there was frustration about some mistakes. But coordinator Jeff Casteel classifies them as more minor issues.

"For the most part, it was a typical good first game for us," Casteel said. "There are some things we obviously need to continue to work on, but we got a lot of guys in the game, a couple freshmen and that's good.'

There was a different tune sung after the first game in 2008, when the defense grew into a

This test run wasn't great, but it was just that. WVU feels it's at a better starting point than it was a year ago, but the next two weeks will reveal a lot about what true progress has been made.

Offensively, the Mountaineers' 33-20 win against Liberty University, at Mountaineer Field, on Saturday afternoon, was an extension of 2008's season-ending victory against North Carolina.

This offseason, Stewart said he'd like to establish about a 60:40 pass-run ratio, and the Mountaineers came very close in their first game, putting up 438 total yards, with 243 (or 55 percent) coming through the air.

It was an auspicious start to Tyler Bitancurt's career as WVU's field goal kicker.

In the Mountaineers' 33-20 win against Liberty, on Saturday, Bitancurt became the first freshman kicker in WVU football history to make four field goals in a game.

Wearing the No. 40 jersey formerly assigned to Pat McAfee — who's now with the Indianapolis Colts Bitancurt had a perfect game and converted field goals of 38, 35, 45 and 36 yards.

Hawks win on Marcucci's goal, Gerbo's big saves

UNIVERSITY 1 WHEELING PARK 0

BY ASHWIN JAGANNATHAN For The Dominion Post

After Saturday's game at Mylan Pharmaceuticals Stadium against Wheeling Park, University High (3-2-1) wishes it could play every game the way it played this one.

On the heels of a 3-0 loss to Bridgeport, the Hawks defeated the Patriots, 1-0, in a well-played, all-around effort that left the team feeling satisfied.

For the majority of the first half, the game was scoreless, as each team had a handful of opportunities to score that fell short. With about 4:30 left in the half, University finally broke the stalemate with a header by Tony Marcucci, off a corner kick by Zac Currence.

Marcucci, one of the team's captains, normally plays as a center/midfielder, but came up for the corner kick. "I didn't have a man on me, and Currence gave me the ball, and I just managed to head it in," he said.

It was enough to give University a 1-0 lead going into the second half, and ended up being the only field at any given moment. goal of the game.

University relied on a balanced approach to hold its lead and keep Wheeling Park off the scoreboard.

Hawks coach Michael Johnston said, "We figured out what we needed to do to defeat Wheeling Park, and the whole team played really well. The way we looked against Bridgeport, that's how we made Wheeling Park look today. We made them run around a lot and kept them on their heels."

Johnston also noted that his team did a good job of transitioning from offense to defense, and that the team's midfielders had a knack for knowing where to be on the Johnston mentioned midfielders Ben Coakley and Michael Gerbo as examples of those who played with a high level of field awareness.

Wheeling Park came inches from scoring on a couple of occasions in the middle of the second half, but was denied goals by senior goalie Robert Gerbo, who made two impressive and physically demanding saves. On the first attempt, with about 23 minutes left in the half, a Wheeling Park player took a shot from just outside the goalie box, which appeared that it would strike the top left corner of the net. However, at almost the last possible second, Gerbo fully extended himself to deflect the ball and send it sailing safely over the goal.

"It definitely would've gone in if I didn't make that save. I just tried to get my hands on it," Gerbo said.

A few minutes later, Wheeling Park had another golden opportunity, as a player took a shot that dribbled on the ground toward the left side of the goal. Once again, Gerbo made the save, diving at the ball and knocking it out of bounds just before it had the chance to reach the goal. "I got my entire body behind the ball," Gerbo said.

The Hawks will travel next to Fairmont Senior, on Tuesday.

Alexandra has made history at Saratoga Race Course, at Saratoga Springs, N.Y., by becoming the first female to win the prestigious Woodward Stakes, holding off Macho Again by a head. The sensational 3-yearold ran an electrifying race against the older boys for her ninth consecutive victory Saturday and all but clinched Horse of the Year honors. Rachel Alexandra dueled early with 2008 Belmont Stakes winner Da'Tara before taking the lead along the backstretch. She set a blistering early pace on the way to running 1 1/8 miles in 1:48.29. She beat 3-year-old boys in the Preakness and the Haskell Invitational, and overwhelmed 3-year-old fillies in the Kentucky Oaks and the Mother Goose Stakes.

The New York Giants released Super Bowl hero David Tyree on Saturday. Tyree made one of the most remarkable catches in Super Bowl history some 19 months ago when the Giants defeated the previously unbeaten New England Patriots. With the Giants trailing, 14-10, late in the fourth quarter, Tyree hauled in a 32-yard pass from Eli Manning, pinning the ball against his helmet as defender Rodney Harrison yanked him to the ground. It set up Manning's game-winning touchdown pass to Plaxico Burress. Tyree battled injuries in training camp.

Roger Clemens' defamation suit against Brian McNamee in Texas has been dismissed, leaving the pair to fight their legal battle in New York. U.S. District Judge Keith P. Clemens initially had sued his former personal trainer in Texas state court in January 2008, a month after McNamee's accusations against the seven-time Cy Young Award winner were published in the Mitchell Report.

O'Hair, Furyk leading Deutsch Bank tourney

GOLF

Associated Press

NORTON, Mass. — Tiger Woods couldn't make enough putts to catch up with the players who couldn't miss.

Sean O'Hair and Jim Furyk set the pace Saturday at the Deutsche Bank Championship and brought Retief Goosen along for the ride. That threesome combined to make 17 birdies and one eagle finishing two rounds at a combined 34-under par.

All that counted was the individual scoring, which wasn't bad, O'Hair ran off six birdies and an eagle during an eight-hole stretch in the middle of his round for a 7under 64, giving him a share of the lead with Furvk, who had six birdies to offset a few mistakes for a 67.

They were at 12-under 130.

"We saw a lot of good golf and a lot of good golf shots," Furyk said. "And obviously. I saw some putts go in."

Woods arrived later in the day, and instead of making a charge, he flirted with missing the cut. He cut line when he faced a 12-foot par on No. 9, a tricky 5-foot putt on the 10th and a 20-foot par putt on the 11th after gouging a shot out of a plugged lie in the bunker. He made them all, then ran off four birdies

That left the No. 1 player still stewing over three birdies he missed inside 10 feet on the back nine, realizing that he needed to make up as much ground as the could. Woods was seven snots benina.

Ga. teen Oudin tops Sharapova

'Had a blast' in advancing to 4th round

NEW YORK — Melanie Oudin's face was flushed from a mix of exertion and excitement and maybe even a bit of bewilderment — "Yes, I did Tennis beat Maria Shara-U.S. Open pova!" running through her mind TV: CBS Chs. 2, 5 when she 11 a.m. today stepped out of the U.S. Open locker room and saw Mom.

The pair embraced, kissed each other on the cheek, and Leslie Oudin told her 17-year-old daughter: "I'm very proud of you." Then they hugged some more, holding tight.

Melanie Oudin is still very much a kid from Marietta, Ga., enjoying the trip of her life in the Big Apple, playing foosball in the players' lounge and using words like "amazing" and "cool" as she works her dizzying way through the draw at Flushing Meadows. Oudin's latest win was the biggest so far: She knocked off three-time Grand Slam champion and former No. 1 Sharapova, 3-6, 6-4, 7-5, Saturday to reach the U.S. Open's fourth round.

"I just had a blast," said Oudin, who buried her face in a towel and sobbed on the sideline when the match ended.

Sharapova, it bears noting, double-faulted 21 times, the most by a woman in any 2009 tour match. But the 5-foot-6 Oudin's solid groundstrokes and tremendous court coverage — all those small, squeaky steps — and veteran-like presence played significant roles, too.

So, perhaps, did the partisan fans, who began hootin' and hollerin' to celebrate their girl's victory right as her racket met the ball on the clinching forehand winner.

'I try to pretend that it's not, like, Arthur Ashe Stadium, playing Maria Sharapova. I try to just pretend it's any other match — even just practicing. Sometimes I tell myself I'm just practicing at my academy at home, and I'm just playing one of my friends," Oudin said. "So it's not a big deal."

Oh, it most certainly is a big deal. A year ago, Oudin was ranked 221st and lost in the first round in New York. Now she is 70th - steadily moving up — and the youngest American woman in the U.S. Open's final 16 since Serena Williams a decade ago.

"Her first goal was to get into the tournament," Oudin's coach, Brian de Villiers said, "and the second one was to win a round here."

Check. Check. And then some, including a second-round upset of No. 4 Elena Dementieva, a two-time Grand Slam finalist and the Beijing Olympics gold medalist.

Nothing happening around the tournament grounds on a busy Saturday afternoon matched the buzz of Oudin-Sharapova, although that would have changed had 276thranked Jesse Witten, of Naples, Fla., managed to pull off a similar stunner against No. 4 Novak Diokovic. Witten won one set, and had chances to take another, before losing, 6-7 (2), 6-3, 7-6 (2), 6-3. 'I wasn't getting outplayed too much," said Witten, 0-6 in tour-level matches before this week. "I felt like I was right at home a little bit.'

Heading into No. 5 Andy Roddick's match against John Isner, the top 16 men in the tournament were a combined 38-0. Leading the way was No. 1 Roger Federer, who overcame a sloppy first set and tumble to the court to beat two-time major champion Lleyton Hewitt, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5, 6-4.

Federer has won 14 consecutive matches against Hewitt, and 37 in a row at Flushing Meadows.

Also into the fourth round: No. 8 Nikolav Davydenko, No. 10 Fernando Verdasco and Robin Soderling.

Yankees ease by Toronto

Associated Press

TORONTO — Mark Teixeira and Robinson Cano homered, Andy Pettitte won his fourth straight start and the New York Yankees beat the Toronto Blue Jays, 6-4, on Saturday.

The AL East leaders, who had a seven-game winning streak snapped Friday, have won 15 of 19 on the road.

Toronto dropped to 4-11 against New York this season and has lost 18 of 24 overall.

After flirting with a perfect game in his previous outing, against Baltimore, Pettitte (13-6) allowed four runs and four hits in six innings.

The left-hander, unbeaten in eight starts, walked five and struck out three.

David Robertson worked the seventh, Brian Bruney got two outs in the eighth and Phil Hughes closed it out for his third save.

Twins 4, Indians 1

CLEVELAND — Scott Baker (13-7) won his seventh straight decision and extended his mastery of Cleveland, pitching Minnesota to victory.

Baker, who gave up one run in six innings, is 4-0 with a 0.93 ERA in four starts against Cleveland this season. The right-hander hasn't lost since July 7, a span of 11 starts.

Andy Marte homered for the Indians in the third, ending Baker's scoreless streak against the Indians at 18.

Orioles 5, Rangers 4

BALTIMORE — Melvin Mora homered and drove in three runs, rookie Brian Matusz earned his third straight win and Baltimore beat Texas.

Texas did not get a hit after the third inning and remained two games behind Boston for the AL wild card.

National League Cubs 5. Mets 3

NEW YORK — Derrek Lee homered twice and drove in three runs in his return to the lineup, leading Rich Harden and Chicago past New York.

Harden struck out 10, all swinging, and Aramis Ramirez also had a two-run homer for Chicago.

Harden pitched five effective innings and the Cubs won for the third time in seven games. The right-hander allowed two runs, one earned, and seven hits to improve to 4-2 with a 2.40 ERA since the All-Star break.

Giants 3, Brewers 2

MILWAUKEE — Matt Cain (13-4) outpitched Yovani Gallardo for his first win in more than six weeks and San Francisco beat Milwaukee.

HUNTINGTON — Brian Anderson threw for 316 yards and three touchdowns to lead Marshall to a 31-28 win against Southern Illinois, on Saturday.

Chuck Walker had 119 yards on 10 catches, while Cody Slate caught nine passes for 114 yards and two touchdowns for the Thundering Herd. Marshall gained 388 yards in the season opener for both teams.

The Salukis, who had three turnovers, brought the game to 31-28 with 1:40 left, on a 5-yard run by Chris Dieker. Marshall recovered the Salukis' onside kick to win for the first time in three meetings between the two teams.

Your goose, caught and cooked

DOVE AND GOOSE SEASONS opened Tuesday. The early goose season lasts through Sept. 19. The daily limit is five and the possession limit is 10. You must have in your possession both the state and federal waterfowl stamps in addition to the free Harvest Information Program (HIP) registration card.

DAVE MILNE

Also, if you leave any of the birds you've killed with another person, you must tag the birds with the following information: the hunter's signature; the hunter's address; the total number of birds by species;

The first dove season ends Oct. 10. After the first day, shooting can begin a half hour before sunrise until sunset. You must have your HIP card in your possession. If you've already been out shooting with very little luck, go to a skeet or sporting clays range and shoot a few rounds. If this isn't possible, have someone throw some clay targets with a hand thrower. Practice on true crossing targets at no more than 35 yards. When you can consistently break them, you're ready for dove and goose season.

Having watched a lot of hunters trying to hit doves, I've noticed that most of them try to shoot them too far away and shoot way behind them. They have no idea how much lead to give the bird. Believe me, when that bird is crossing in front of you going full tilt, it takes from 8 to 10 feet of lead, and this is not one that's out of range.

The same thing is true for geese. Even though they're very large, they're moving a lot faster than you think. It's kind of like watching a passenger jet approaching an airport to land. It's moving a whole lot faster than it appears.

Since it is illegal to use lead shot on geese, it is especially true that you have to take closer shots. Steel shot is not as effective as lead and patterns differently. If you have some extra money that you want to get rid of, buy some "heavy shot." I tried some this past year and it's very effective on geese at greater distances than steel shot. However, keep in mind that every time you pull the trigger, about $2 is going out the muzzle.

Another problem I have seen with many hunters is that they use a gun that is "choked" too tight for doves. If you are a good enough shooter to hit them within range with a tight choke, you'll find that it tears them up too badly. I use either improved cylinder and modified or two improved cylinder chokes.

Now, back to hunting. Most people don't realize that if they violate a state migratory bird regulation, it is also a federal violation. Doves can be field dressed in the field, but geese have to removed from the field before cleaning.

and the dates the birds were killed.

I've seen some hunters kill a few geese and give them away because they say the birds don't taste good and they don't really know how to fix them without being tough. There's an old saying that the best way to cook a goose breast is to put it on a board, bake it, throw the goose away and gnaw on the board. Well, it just doesn't have to be that way.

Here, without a doubt, is my favorite recipe for fixing goose. I've had it in the column before, but I think it's worth telling again. I've also done pheasants this way.

Take two goose breasts and put them in a pressure cooker for 30 minutes at 15 pounds of pressure. Make sure they are covered with water. When done, pull the meat apart into very thin pieces and set aside.

Next, saute six cups of mushrooms (may be shiitake, crimini, buttons or a combination of all of them) that have been coarsely chopped along with one cup of chopped leeks, the white part only.

Then add two cups of cooked wild rice and a teaspoon of freshly minced garlic. Saute until you can begin to smell the garlic. Then add, slowly, four tablespoons of allpurpose flour. Use a whisk. Don't be alarmed when this mixture, called a roux, becomes thick and lumpy. Keep stirring and cooking until the starchy taste of the flour is gone. This should take about three minutes.

Next, slowly stir in two cups of chicken broth and two cups of half-and-half. Keep stirring so as to ensure a smooth, creamy texture. Then add the goose meat. Keep stirring until fully mixed. At this point, you can add a couple of tablespoons of freshly chopped chives and parsley. Salt and pepper to taste.

If you really want a rich soup, stir in a couple more tablespoons of butter and maybe a little sherry.

The day before you read this, I will have been at my friend's farm in Virginia for a dove hunt. About the only way I like doves is to wrap them in a piece of my home-cured and smoked bacon sliced thick and broiled. It's a good thing they raised the limit on doves to 15 because it takes a lot of them to make a meal.

A quiz on bird-watchers

Many readers of this column watch birds. At least I hear from many who say they are bird-watchers. So, I thought it might be fun to have a little quiz on birdwatching and bird-watchers to see how well you know yourselves

Giving a quiz is a genetic thing. Every so often, old university wildlife professors feel like they have to give a quiz. In this case, however, you can't fail. It's just for fun. A new survey on bird-watchers just came out, with data from 2006 and that is where I got the information.

So, grab your pencil and dig in.

What percentage of the U.S. population over 16 years of age took at least one trip one mile or more from home to see birds, or tried to identify birds around the home in 2006?

- A. 10 percent
- B. 20 percent
- C. 30 percent D. 40 percent

Question 2

The highest percentage of bird-watchers falls into which age group?

- A. 16-24
- B. 25-34
- C. 35-44
- D. 45-54
- E. 55 plus

Question 3

The highest percentage of bird-watchers falls into which annual income bracket?

- A. Below $20,000
- B. $20,000-29,999 C. $30,000-49,000
- D. $50,000-74,900
- E. Over $75,000

Question 4

The highest percentage of bird-watchers falls into which level of education?

- A. High school graduate
- B. Some college
- C. College degree plus

Question 5

- Where do bird-watchers live? A. In cities of more than 1 million
- B. 250,000-999,999
- C. Under 249,000

DR. DAVE SAMUEL

When we look at bird-watching participation rates, how does West Virginia rank among the 50 states?

- A. Top third
- B. Middle third
- C. Bottom third

Question 7

Match the region of the United States with the bird-watching participation

- 1) 33 percent
- 2) 27 percent
- 3) 21 percent 4) 19 percent
- A. Northeast
- B. South
- C. Midwest
- D. West

Question 8

Which state has the highest percentage of bird-watchers that are nonresidents?

Question 9

For bird-watchers who go away from home to see birds, which species do they go to see?

- A. Water birds
- B. Song birds
- C. Waterfowl
- D. Birds of prey

Question 10

Birding is a huge industry, and in 2006 it created the following number of jobs in the U.S.:

- A. 221,000
- B. 441,000 C. 661,000

D. More than 1 million

1. B, 20 percent, and the total number of bird-watchers (48 million) has held steady since 1996. That's a lot of bird-watching and a lot of money spent to do it.

2. E, 27 percent of all bird watchers are in this oldest age group. The younger the age category, the fewer the bird watchers. Probably a function of time and money.

- 3. E, 29 percent. The lower the income, the lower the percentage of bird-watchers.
- 4. C, 28 percent of bird-watchers have more than a college degree. Do you see the trend here? Bird-watchers are older and well-educated, and have higher incomes. All three go together.
- 5. D, though more (by number) birdwatchers live in cities of more than 1 million, those with the highest participation rate (27 percent) live in more rural areas, or cities with fewer than 50,000 people, such as Morgantown and Bruceton Mills.
- 6. C, bottom third. Actually, we rank number 37 out of 50 states, at 18 percent participation. Considering our average income and education, that is actually pretty high. But those factors don't tell the whole story. For example, Montana is first, with 40 percent participation. Pennsylvania and Colorado are in the middle, at 25 percent; New York and California are near the bottom, with only 15 percent participation rates; and Hawaii is at the bottom, at 10 percent. There are some puzzles. South Dakota is sixth, at 32 percent, yet North Dakota is 49th, at 14 percent. It seems that what determines how many bird-watchers there are in each state is a complicated thing to understand. Lots going on.
- 7. The top participation region, at 33 percent, is ours, the South, Surprising. Then come the Midwest (27), West (21) and Northeast (19).
- 8. Would you believe that 73 percent of the bird-watchers in Wyoming are from out-of-state? Alaska is next (66) and West - Virginia is a relatively high 33 percent. 9. Three-fourths of the birders who do so away from home want to see waterfowl. Birds of prey and song birds are a close second and third.
- 10. Bird-watching created 661,000 jobs in the United States. Given that IBM has 330,000 employees, and Coca-Cola has 94,000, bird watching is bigger than many Fortune 500 companies.

If you are interested in bird-watching, why not participate with the Mountaineer Chapter of the Audubon Society? They've got all kinds of good things going on, so see them at mountaineer audubon.org.

Lewis leads Pitt ground game in win

BIG EAST

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Dion Lewis scored three touchdowns by halftime while running for 129 yards in his first college start, and Pittsburgh showed off a balanced offense while cruising to a seasonopening, 38-3 victory against Youngstown State, on Saturday.

Pitt made certain there was no repeat of this past season's 27-17 opening-day loss to Bowling Green that ranks among the biggest upsets in school history, taking a 21-3 lead at halftime. Not that the opponent was as good Youngstown State lost eight of its first 10 while going 4-8 in 2008 and hasn't scored a touchdown in its past five games against Football Bowl Subdivision opponents.

One of Pitt's unanswered questions going into the season was whether it could quickly replace running back LeSean McCoy, who left for the NFL after rushing for 2,816 yards and scoring 35 touchdowns in two seasons. Only former Heisman Trophy winner Tony Dorsett was as productive at Pitt during his freshman and sophomore seasons.

For at least one game, Lewis a freshman who was playing prep school football in New Jersey a year ago - was a more than adequate replacement. He scored on a 16-yard run on his fifth college carry, then set up his own 1-yard touchdown run early in the second quarter with gains of 28 and 25 yards on successive carries against a Penguins defense overmatched by Pitt's size and speed.

Later in the quarter, Lewis scored on a 3-yard swing pass from Stull. Stull, who slumped badly during the second half of 2008, after getting a concussion against Rutgers, was booed on his first incompletion and had only 44 yards passing at halftime but finished 11-for-16 for 123 yards and an interception.

Minnesota 23, Syracuse 20

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Eric Ellestad kicked a 35-yard field goal in overtime to give Minnesota a comeback win against Greg Paulus and Syracuse.

Paulus was 19-for-31 for 167 vards and one touchdown, but the former Duke point guard threw his only interception in the extra period to give the Gophers the big break they needed.

Adam Weber was 19-for-42 for 248 yards and Decker had nine catches for 183 yards for Minnesota.

Paulus had not played football since he was honored as 2004 national player of the year, at Christian Brothers Academy, in suburban Syracuse.

Hawkeyes' Hunter makes up for his terrible mistake

Associated Press

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Jeremiha Hunter wanted to pick up the ball, because he thought it was all that separated No. 22 Iowa from an improbable win. His teammates screamed at him to leave Northern Iowa kicker Billy Hallgren's blocked field-goal attempt alone, and that's what he did. Oops.

The Panthers scooped up the ball and, after a long chat by the officials, got a second chance to stun the Hawkeyes.

This time, Hunter was ready. He made up for his earlier mistake by blocking Hallgren's second fieldgoal try in the closing seconds, allowing Iowa to escape with a 17-16 victory Saturday.

"I was praying the whole time, like, 'This is why I'm out here,' Hunter said. "I was just focused on getting that block the second time.'

The Panthers lined up for the potential winning field goal with seven seconds left, but Broderick Binns blocked Hallgren's 40-yard attempt on first down. Believing the game was over, Hunter and several Hawkeyes allowed UNI to recover the ball with a second left.

After officials reviewed the play to make sure there was time on the clock, the Panthers tried again on second down, and Hunter got his hand on the attempt to preserve the win.

Instead of burying his head in his hands after what appeared to be a gut-wrenching mistake, Hunter helped his teammates focus on the next field goal try. He noticed that Hallgren was kicking line drives — including a screaming 39-yarder in the first quarter — so Hunter told the Hawkeyes to be ready for another low one. "I just told everybody, 'Squeeze that middle, press that middle and get your hands up,' " Hunter said. 'He was kicking them low all game." The Panthers, one of the top programs in the Football Championship Subdivision, returned 14 starters from a team that reached the national semifinals a year ago. The experience showed as Northern Iowa put the ultimate scare into its in-state rival.

"We talked about Appalachian State during the week. I'm not sure everybody hears that all the time," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said about Michigan's famous home loss to the Mountaineers, in 2007. "It's going to be a learning experience for us in a lot of different ways.

Hallgren's 39-yard field goal with 4:26 left brought Northern Iowa to 17-16.

Pat Grace, who threw for 270 yards, then methodically marched the Panthers from their own 8 yard line with 2:14 left — going 6-for-7 passing on the final drive — to set up Hallgren's potential game-winners.

(4) USC 56, San Jose State 3

LOS ANGELES — Matt Barkley

passed for 233 yards after a slow start to his Southern California debut, and the Trojans' fleet of tailbacks ran for six touchdowns against San Jose State.

Barkley, the first nonredshirt freshman to start a season opener at USC, shook off a rocky first quarter to go 15-for-19 with no interceptions.

He was at his best handing off to his fellow Trojans, who pounded the Spartans with six consecutive TD drives after trailing 3-0 early in the second quarter.

USC's formidable offensive line cleared the way for 343 yards rushing, along with two scores apiece by Stafon Johnson and Joe McKnight.

(6) Ohio State 31, Navy 27

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Brian Rolle intercepted a potential two-point conversion in the closing minutes and returned it for two points the other way, helping Ohio State hold off pesky Navy.

A crowd of 105,092 — the largest ever to see the Buckeyes open a season — sat in stunned silence after the Midshipmen scored twice in just over four minutes to cut a 29-14 deficit to two points with 2:23 left in

(9) Oklahoma State 24 (13) Georgia 10

STILLWATER, Okla. — Zac Robinson threw two touchdown passes to star receiver Dez Bryant and also scored on a quarterback sneak as Oklahoma State proved itself deserving of its highest preseason ranking ever.

The Cowboys capitalized on a fourth-quarter fumble by new Georgia starting quarterback Joe Cox to seal the season-opening win on a 12-yard touchdown pass from Robinson to Bryant.

The two also hooked up on an impressive 46-yard score in the first half that got Oklahoma State's offense going after a sloppy start.

Robinson finished with 135 yards on 11-for-22 passing, and Bryant made the most of his three catches for 77 yards.

(9) Penn State 31, Akron 7

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Daryll Clark threw for 353 yards and three touchdowns, and Penn State celebrated coach Joe Paterno's return to the sideline with a win against Akron.

It was a happy return for Paterno in his first game on the sideline since hip replacement surgery in November.

(15) Georgia Tech 37 Jacksonville State 17

ATLANTA — Jonathan Dwyer ran for two touchdowns, and Georgia Tech had 335 yards rushing in a victory against Jacksonville.

(23) Notre Dame 35, Nevada 0

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Jimmy Clausen threw for four touchdowns, including passes of 70 and 88 yards to Michael Floyd, leading Notre Dame past Nevada.

Clausen started the game by completing 10 of 11 passes for 184 yards and three touchdowns, highlighted by the 70-yard pass to Floyd. He later bettered that with the 88yard score.

The junior quarterback finished 15-for-18 for 315 yards.

Wire, Web reports

PITTSBURGH Mundy, a rookie safety out of WVU, has made the roster for the Pittsbrugh Steelers.

Isaac Redman, a nondrafted rookie who was the surprise star of the Steelers' training camp, was among 21 players cut Saturday. Mundy, 6-foot-1 and 215 pounds, survived the final cutdown to the 53-man roster limit for Thursday's season-opening game, against Tennessee.

Mundy was originally drafted by the Steelers as the second of two sixth-round picks in 2008. He was released following training camp but was signed to the practice squad Nov. 11.

The Steelers re-signed Mundy on Feb. 12.

Mundy spent his first four years of college at the University of Michigan before transferring to WVU as a postgraduate following his redshirt junior year. He teamed with Eric Wicks to form one of the top safety combinations in the Big East.

Mundy played high school football in Pittsburgh, at nearby Woodland Hills High, and holds the career receiving record (54 catches) there.

Tight end Sean McHugh's season ended when he was placed on the injured reserve list because of a knee injury. He becomes the second player from this past season's Super Bowl-winning team to go on injured reserve, joining right guard Darnell Stapleton, who had knee surgery early in training camp.

Also released were quarterback Mike Reilly, running backs Carey Davis and Justin Vincent, wide receivers Dallas Baker, Tyler Grisham and Brandon Williams, tight end Dezmond Sherrod, offensive linemen Jason Capizzi, Jeremy Parquet and A.Q. Shipley, defensive linemen Sonny Harris, Steve McClendon and Scott Paxson, linebackers Bruce Davis, Tom Korte, Andy Schantz and Donovan Woods, defensive backs Roy Lewis and Anthony Madison, and kicker Piotr Czech.

GREENVILLE, N.C. — Brandon Jackson and Dominique Lindsay each had a first-half touchdown run to help East Carolina build a big lead and then hold off a late rally from Appalachian State to win, 29-24, on Saturday.

WVU plays host to East Carolina at 3:30 p.m. Saturday.

Jackson, a transfer from Kentucky, scored on a 39-yard run on his first carry for a 7-0 lead less than two minutes into the game. Lindsay later scored on a 21-yard run to give the Pirates a 24-0 lead.

But the Mountaineers suddenly came alive behind reserve quarterback Travaris Cadet, who directed three second-half scoring drives.

On three separate occasions following WVU's 33-20 win against Liberty, J.T. Thomas shared how he views his team's next game, against East Carolina. The redshirt junior WVU linebacker wasn't shy about the importance.

"Next week will determine what kind of season we'll have here,' Thomas repeatedly said about his team's game Saturday.

Even after a solid individual performance, Thomas knows there's plenty of work yet to be done before the Pirates come to Morgantown.

Still, on this day, Thomas proved to be one of WVU's biggest playmakers. A season ago, Thomas led the team with 10 tackles for loss. Saturday, he led the team with seven tackles, including 2 1/2 for loss.

As the weak-side linebacker in WVU's stack defense, Thomas plays with help to either side, and he's called upon to "play more aggressively than the rest of the line-

"I have two years under my belt now, so it allows me to be a better player now," Thomas said. "The experience helps you to play better. You can kind of expect what's

"I was trying to make a good tackle. I don't feel like I was [hitting his head], but the [video] tape will tell,' Thomas said. On another play, he jarred the ball out of Mike Brown's hands on a pass attempt.

"J.T. made some plays and he's an explosive kid," WVU defensive coordinator Jeff Casteel said. "Reed [Williams] is Reed, and he's going to make some plays. I thought [strongside linebacker] Pat Lazear did some good things for us, too. Really, [the linebackers] are doing a good job of playing together or communicating, and that was one of the things that we struggled with this time last year — communication. That was a little bit better today."

That's why the adjustments Casteel savs his unit must make aren't at the glaring level they were after the opening game of 2008.

But all offseason long, WVU head facets of the game. In a lot of ways, that mind-set stems from WVU's 24-3 loss at East Carolina in the second game of the 2008 season.

That's why Thomas feels a sense of urgency as the Mountaineers quickly move past Liberty and prepare for ECU, which beat Appalachian State, 29-24, on Saturday.

"We were tested down there in East Carolina," Thomas said. "We were punched in the mouth, and we didn't punch back. East Carolina is a good team, and they're tough guys. They're where West Virginia was once upon a time — a team on the rise, a team that always has something to prove. They're going to come in with a chip on their shoulder, and we're going to have one too."

Thomas is emphatic that he doesn't view the ECU game from a revenge standpoint. His goal is to win every game, and he thought the defense — which gave up 210 passing yards, 157 going to Brown played "OK."

"I say that with emphasis because I know how much better we can be," Thomas said.

In just a week, he's looking for more consistency out of his team, a thing it lacked in its trip to East

"It wasn't so much embarrassing, just disappointing," Thomas said of his team's visit to Greenville, N.C., a year ago. "I remember that week of practice, and I felt like we had a great week of practice. Everybody was focused and into the game. No one was slacking in the film room or in practice, we just came out and had a really bad outing."

until August, finished with a team-best eight catches for 95 yards. Sanders added a couple key blocks that helped spring Devine for his 112 rushing yards and touchdown. Devine eclipsed the 100-yard mark for the ninth time in his career and became the 15th Mountaineer to surpass 2,000 career rushing yards. He has 2,028. "We are two of a kind, and we know what to expect out of each other." Devine said. "We expect big things. We're like leaders, we're not underclassmen.

We expect to carry our team." WVU coach Bill Stewart said Devine made some good and bad reads, and added that he'd had several private conversations with Sanders in recent weeks.

Devine said he was pleased with the play of his offensive line and happy to see Sanders have a good first game.

"He's a lot more mature," Devine said of Sanders. "He grew up from his mistakes. We all make mistakes and learn off our mistakes. He grew off the mistake. He is more focused than he's ever been.

"I am always going to back my boys up," Devine added about the offensive line. "Some mistakes I made, and they had blocks there and I just bounced out. They did a great job today. We are going to get better as the year goes on. We just need to learn off our mistakes.'

Surprise! Smith starts

The only player not listed as a starter but was Saturday was safety Eain Smith, who played in place of Robert Sands.

"Because we thought he was the best player," WVU defensive coordinator Jeff Casteel explained.

The fact he started isn't a big deal, though. Sands played plenty of snaps, recording four tackles and his first career interception. Smith finished with five tackles.

"We're always going to try and play as many guys as we can anyway," Casteel said. "We'd really like to play a core of four or five safeties if we could, five or six linebackers and five or six defensive linemen.'

Two offensive linemen, Josh Jenkins and Joe Madsen, were the only first-time starters for Safety Sidney Glover, who started 10 games a season ago, sat out the string and shoulder issues.

Four true freshmen play

WVU offensive coordinator Jeff Mullen hoped to play freshman quarterback Geno Smith, but he was forced to keep Jarrett Brown in the entire game. Four other newcomers played, including three on defense.

Slot receiver Tavon Austin, who also returned kicks, was the only one on offense, while cornerback Pat Miller, safety Terence Garvin and linebacker Branko Busick all played.

Stats and more stats

How did WVU fare offensively? Although the Mountaineers kicked four field goals, they totaled 438 offensive yards more than they had in nine games a season ago. The Mountaineers didn't surpass 400 yards of offense until the fourth game of 2008, against Marshall.

■ WVU's season started much like a year ago in the kickoff game. Liberty averaged 23 yards on seven returns. In the first half, Liberty had returns of 45, 40 and 39 yards. Josh Lider kicked one ball out of bounds, giving the Flames the ball at the 40-yard line. Stewart made three substitutions in the second half, which he said helped correct the situation. ■ Sanders came up 5 yards short of being the first Mountaineer to eclipse 100 yards receiving since Darius Reynaud did so against Marshall, on Sept. 8, 2007. ■ Third downs weren't a problem for WVU, which went 6-for-12. On WVU's first touchdown drive, Noel Devine converted on a third-and-2, while big back Ryan Clarke scored on a 2-yard touchdown run on the team's first play on the goal line.

■ WVU is 94-29-4 in season openers, including 92-18-6 at home. They've won six straight

■ Jarrett Brown, who started the game 8-for-8 passing, is 3-0 as a starting quarterback. WVU is 14-2 when he throws at least one pass.

■ Scott Kozlowski had the longest wait between games. His third-quarter punt was his first since WVU's 2006 game at Louisville.

coach Bill Stewart drove home his team's need to get tougher in all > three or four guys after him and he threw off his back foot.

"But he did a nice job finding seconds and thirds. So many times today he found his second and third reads, and that was really good."

Four plays later, on the same drive, Brown again showed his unique skill set. At 6-foot-4, 223 pounds, he's built like a fullback and is not afraid to play like one when he needs to.

On third-and-13, from the 22, Brown correctly identified that the Liberty defense had deviated from the cover-2 scheme it had played through most of the game. Instead, the Flames had shifted into coverzero — a man-to-man scheme, with the defensive backs each locked on to one receiver.

As he often does, Mullen had armed Brown with two options going into that play — a pass or a run.

"I knew I was going to score before the play started," Brown said. "The [Liberty] guys rolled up to cover zero and took away my second option, so that was my only option, to take it myself.'

He pump faked, then found a hole between two defensive linemen and took it, lowering his shoulder and diving headfirst into the end zone for a touchdown.

Brown kept up the stellar performance throughout the game and commanded a second touchdown drive in the fourth quarter.

Mullen said his quarterback played a complete game.

"He showed me some serious leadership skills," Mullen said. "We scored on every drive in the first half, so it was kind of easy to be a leader. And then we come back in the second half and Liberty grabs a little momentum, we had a couple of three-and-outs and J.B. does a nice job coming back and leading us with a touchdown drive there in the end to put us ahead. He showed that leadership and he's never had to do that before.

"Clearly, he's always been a player, but to do that for four quarters, that was very impressive.'

Brown passes leadership test

QB impresses his teammates and coaches

BY STEFANIE LOH

Let the Jarrett Brown era begin. After four years on the bench, it seemed fitting that the Mountaineers' fifth-year senior and first-time starter got to open his final season by leading his team to a 33-20 win against on Saturday afternoon. Brown executed the Mountaineers' game plan with precision. He was perfect on his first eight pass attempts, made good decisions, connected well with his receivers and protected the football — which earned him big points in offensive

But there's a lot more to be happy about.

From the coaches to the players, everyone, it seemed, agreed that the most impressive thing about Brown's performance was not his 243 passing yards or his 22-yard rushing touchdown.

Against Liberty, Brown proved he had what it took to lead the team. "We've never seen Jarrett in this role before, so it's all new to us,' linebacker J.T. Thomas said. "We always knew we had a leader sitting on the sideline when Pat [White] was here. Now Jarrett's gotten a chance to go out there and lead us to

Yet even with a game under his belt, the comparison is inevitable: How does Brown measure up to his predecessor, White, who left WVU as a legend after breaking every quarterback rushing record in the book?

The answer: He shouldn't have to. Saturday, Brown proved he should be judged on his own merits because his skill set, while similar but against Liberty, he also showed he's quicker than most people give him credit for, and turned a possible loss of yards into a gain by scrambling to avoid the rush several times.

Brown "had an extremely productive day," Liberty head coach Danny Rocco said. "He was in a league of his own back there. We couldn't get him on the ground."

With the score 10-10 in the second quarter, Brown orchestrated a drive that perfectly exhibited his strengths. On third-and-10 from the Liberty 40-yard line, Brown dropped to pass, looking for a receiver.

As Liberty's defenders closed in and the pocket began to collapse around him, Brown darted right, running for his life while continuing to look upfield.

He caught sight of Bradley Starks, lurking around the 19-yard line. Off his back foot and on the run, the quarterback cocked his powerful right arm and flung the ball in a tight spiral.

Starks pulled in the ball for a 21yard gain and a first down. Nice play, but one that eventually McAfee had handled field goals,

It wasn't exactly a vote of confidence in Bitancurt, who redshirted a year ago and was hampered by an injury through most of the spring.

"I honestly don't know how to feel about that," Bitancurt said. "But you can't look at things negatively, you've always got to be positive as a football player and at this level. I was just seeing it as a better opportunity for me.

"The more competition I have, the better it's going to make me. I can safely say I have been getting better as I've gotten competition.'

Bitancurt won the place-kicking job in camp, but said his success Saturday did a lot to boost his confidence this season.

"I wanted to show the team I was ready because I didn't have that spot before," Bitancurt said. "I wanted to contribute to the team.'

Kickoffs still a problem

The Mountaineers were near the bottom of the national rankings in kickoff return defense a year ago, and early indications are they might have similar struggles this season.

Even though senior transfer Josh Lider averaged 55.2 yards per kickoff, the Flames' returners ran right through the WVU kickoff team early in the game.

Liberty's Mike Brown had returns of 45 and 39 yards. He blew past the Mountaineers on his second return and would have gone much farther if Lider hadn't made a solid open-field tackle to fell him at the 42-yard line.

Lider missed a tackle on an earlier kickoff but atoned when he took Brown down.

"It's something I shouldn't have to do, but it's part of my job. I'm the safety and I shouldn't be letting people go by me."

This time in 2008, Lider was playing Division II football for Western Washington University. He transferred to WVU, after Western Washington cut the football program, and has spent the offseason getting used to the game practice a couple of times, but Lider says he's finally learning.

"I was watching the returner and never paid attention to the blocker. Nice, right?" Lider said, grinning. "He didn't mean to do anything, just caught me off balance and kinda stiff-armed me and I was on my back, which I'm glad for because I don't want to make those mistakes in the game, I'd much rather make them in practice.

"I've been trying to judge the game speed. It's a lot faster game in Division I."

WVU head coach Bill Stewart said that after the first couple of long kick returns, he made three personnel changes to the kickoff team, and thereafter, things improved. Liberty did not have a return for more than 25 yards after the first quarter.

kickoffs and punts for 21/2 seasons, and WVU had trouble finding his replacement in spring practice. So Stewart brought Lider in from Bellingham, Wash., to compete with Bitancurt.

What's politics got to do with it?

Obama's talk to schoolchildren teaches importance of education

Some think he might even tell the boys to pull up their pants.

But President Obama's message to schoolchildren probably won't even get that political.

The president is scheduled to deliver a televised address to the nation's schoolchildren at noon Tuesday. We expect the speech to amount to your basic public service announcement.

Aides say the speech focuses entirely on personal responsibility, education, studying hard and encouraging kids to stay in school. Nothing political is discussed. The White House will release the speech online Monday so parents can read it.

So what's all the fuss about? Our president telling kids to stay in school?

Some conservative critics have reacted to plans for this speech, given the current climate in Washington, with outrageous accusations about Obama's motives.

So what's all the fuss about? The president telling kids to stay in school?

Given the context of the national health-care debate we almost understand this furor.

Almost. But when you are worried about the president speaking to your children that borders on paranoia.

There's nothing wrong with the president speaking with schoolkids. And though the backlash may be about the health care debate, that's no cause to question the content of Obama's character.

We don't believe this president would abuse this privilege any more than a Republican president or any member of Congress or any elected official would, for that matter, who speaks to our children.

He's not there to promote the need for more troops in Afghanistan or a public option in any health care plan that emerges from Congress. We do get the impression from some naysayers, who march every step of the way to a partisan drummer, that their differences here are political, not principled.

This type of reaction borders on demagoguery, where issues are manipulated with emotion and prejudice rather than civil discussion and reason.

A new school year is under way, but as all children need to learn, just because you're noisy doesn't mean you're influential.

We urge teachers, principals and school superintendents to encourage children to watch the president's speech. We need the president of the United States of America to talk to kids about the importance of education and to help inspire them.

Everyone, regardless of their politics, should view our nation's dropout rates and test scores as something that threatens our long-term economic interests.

Knowing what we do about how some class time is ill spent in our public schools, this is a historic lesson we could all learn something from.

America deserves better

Let's reset tone of great debate on health care

BY RICHARD GEPHARDT and TOMMY THOMPSON

Far too often in our nation's policymaking process, we allow ourselves to get caught up in the divisive aspects of issues rather than focusing on how we can work together to achieve a historic, bipartisan result. Nowhere has this been more evident than in the debate over health care reform set to enter a critical phase when lawmakers return to Washington next week.

Regardless of the divisive tone, Congress and the administration cannot afford to get sidetracked. More than one out of seven Americans do not have health insurance. In the absence of meaningful near-term reform, the Urban Institute estimates that an additional 20 million Americans could be without health insurance by 2019. Every day that goes by without action creates more uncertainty, fear and risk.

Skyrocketing health care costs, a key driver of the current debate, make families more vulnerable and place an unprecedented burden on many of our nation's businesses. Premiums alone for employer-sponsored health insurance in the United States have been rising four times faster, on average, than workers' earnings since 2000.

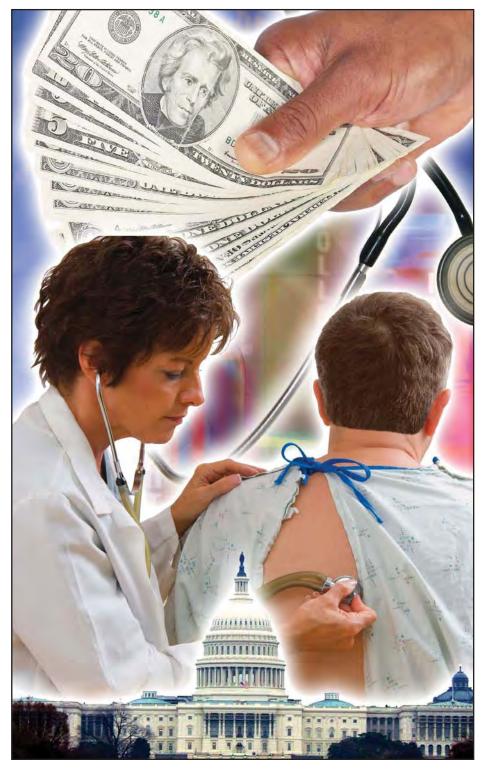

After weeks of spirited debate, it is time to officially reset the tone and come up with a bipartisan reform package that brings down costs, increases access and affordability, promotes American ingenuity and innovation and, most importantly, empowers individuals to prevent chronic disease that accounts for 75 percent of our nation's health expenditures and make better health choices.

When President Obama takes to the podium in front of a joint session of Congress next week, he should recommend three equally important steps.

First, a bipartisan White House summit focused on measurable, action-oriented ideas. Providing high-quality, affordable health care to every American is inherently a nonpartisan issue. So is the need to increase insurance coverage, prevent chronic disease and promote innovation. By bringing together Democrats and Republicans, along with labor unions, business leaders and other stakeholders, the president would be sending a strong message that his administration is committed to reaching a meaningful solution this year.

As members of America's Agenda a bipartisan organization of businesses, labor unions and government leaders we recently conducted listening sessions around the country where we heard loud and clear that middle class Americans, with and without insurance, are bearing the burden of rising health care costs. With many Americans still struggling to put food on the table and a national unemployment rate approaching 10 percent, we cannot let partisan differences stand in the way of constructive conversation and dialogue.

Second, shine a spotlight on the common-ground policies that have taken a backseat to the divisive elements of the debate. Remarkably, for all the talk about the need to address skyrocketing health care costs, we have done little to help Americans understand how existing reform proposals will help prevent chronic disease, a proven cost driver and perhaps the most fundamental concern for an increasingly elderly population. Investing in health innovation

- from effective use of health information technology to funding breakthrough research and initiatives that will help cure our most pressing medical challenges — should also be a centerpiece of the public dialogue around cost containment.

A recent survey commissioned by America's Agenda found a statistic on which Republicans and Democrats broadly agree. Seventy-five percent of voters support reform that will give their primary care or family doctor the support of a coordinated team of allied professionals like nurse practitioners, nutritionists and preventive care specialists. These health professionals would provide continuing care between doctor visits, increase the physician's productivity, decrease medical errors and reduce health costs over the long run.

Third, explain in clear and simple terms how health care reform will create jobs and drive new investment in our nation's economy. In an expanded system, we will need more doctors, nurses, technicians and researchers. With chronic disease prevention as a cornerstone, we will create new opportunities in other fields, such as sustainable agriculture and nutrition.

Never let truth be a casualty

AFGHANISTAN IS ABOUT as removed as one could imagine from being at the center of a First Amendment controversy.

Nonetheless, there was a dustup recently over the press's ability to report freely on U.S. military operations there, and the dust has barely settled.

A few weeks ago, Stars and Stripes — a newspaper historically published about and for the military — reported that a Washington, D.C., public relations firm, the Rendon Group, was evaluating the work of journalists who had asked to accompany U.S. troops in Afghanistan. The evaluations, the newspaper said, were being done with an eye toward rating applicants for so-called "embedded" positions on a positive-negative scale — and screening out those likely to produce stories critical of the war effort.

Despite denials of any attempt to muzzle reporting, criticism of the program grew until the Pentagon decided Aug. 31 to cancel it. Officials said the process was intended only to give on-the-ground commanders background information on the journalists they would see in the field, including the kinds of questions they might ask.

But Stars and Stripes said the program went further: Along with ratings such as "neutral to negative" about reporters' work, there was advice on how their reporting might be influenced.

To be sure, no one was talking about brainwashing or outright censorship on dispatches sent home. An earlier Stars and Stripes story quoted an Army spokesman as saying, "If a reporter has been focused on nothing but negative topics, you're not going to send him into a unit that's not your best. We're not trying to control what they report, but we are trying to put our best foot forward."

Still, the point of a free press is to be able to report freely — without consideration of what a commander or a general or the U.S. government in general wants the press to see and report. The First Amendment exists to guarantee that a variety of views will be available to the public.

Reporting from the battlefield historically has often been censored and controlled. Author Phillip Knightley, in the original and updated versions of his book "The First Casualty," wrote about war correspondents as "heroes and mythmakers." Knightley traces the start of war reporting to the 1854 assignment of a London Times reporter to report on the Crimean War — and he documents examples of military censorship as well as occasions when the news media became, in effect, an ally of the armed forces.

The notion of having reporters accompany troops into the field is controversial in itself: Many worry that even without any attempt to influence coverage, reports will be skewed — either by the limited "soda-straw" view correspondents necessarily will have, or the impact on objectivity resulting from camaraderie of reporters and soldiers sharing life-and-death experiences.

Fighting an unpopular war while maintaining public support for troops, funding and policy may well be the difficult task of today's military — but that task cannot include shaping the news and remain in keeping with the meaning of the First Amendment.

At the same time, the task of journalists free from government control is to present facts. That would seem best done by letting as wide of a variety of journalists as possible report what they learn from the widest possible set of experiences.

These ought to include embedded assignments as well as seeing the military's "best foot forward."

To paraphrase Knightley, for a free press and a free society, truth ought to be "The First Necessity."

Time for governed to remind lawmakers whose government it really is

BY JEREMIAH G. DYS

The story is told of a law professor assigning his constitutional law students the reading of *The Federal*ist Papers. The students reacted as all students do to homework, with groans and other protestations.

One bold student told the professor that the seminal work of our democratic republic was much too difficult to read for a humble firstyear law student. The sagely professor replied, "I understand. This book was not written for someone of your educational level; this book was written for the common, average, upstate New York farmer of 1787.

It seems that whatever is the modern equivalent of that New York farmer is rising again.

In town hall meetings across America, citizens are voicing their opposition to the carefully crafted political spin their politicians seem to be throwing at them

The same is true in West Virginia. Regardless of the constant pooh-poohing by the ACLU or Fairness West Virginia that the redefinition of marriage could never come to West Virginia, the people are seeing through these feeble attempts to thwart the democratic process.

Intrinsically, the people of West Virginia remember that courtrooms in Connecticut and West Virginia's Constitution belongs to them — not the judges who are supposed to interpret it or the politicians they elected to safeguard the rights outlined

They know there is no legitimate reason not to let voters settle under which definition of marriage they will consent to be governed and are growing weary of being told to sit down and let the professionals handle things.

They know the recent experience of several states has closed the debate as to whether or not there's an effort to redefine marriage. They saw what happened in Iowa.

They heard how legislators entirely ignored their constituents and redefined marriage in New Hampshire, Vermont, Maine and Washington, D.C.

West Virginians are smart enough to know that when the ACLU says in one place that West Virginia's laws on marriage are strong and in another that those same laws are unconstitutional, that it is just a matter of when, not if, the ACLU will try to intimidate a judge into redefining marriage.

It's not too hard for West Virginians to understand that Fairness West Virginia is coordinating its fight against your right to vote on the definition of marriage – or as they call it, "bigotry" with the Human Rights Council and the Equality Federation.

And people from Jefferson to Monongalia to Kanawha counties know that their politicians are being given campaign contributions by such groups with the understanding that those politicians will, in turn, prevent any exercise in democracy that goes beyond their re-election.

The fact of the matter is that every legislator has a duty to protect your right to vote on the definition of marriage.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Smear of McCarthy still stains nation's fabric

In 1957, one of the nation's most noteworthy patriots died. Buried without fanfare. His record shows that he had been elected the youngest district judge in Wisconsin history. Sen. Joseph McCarthy, R-Wis., died at the age of 49. He was driven to alcohol by the very same people that he represented — his political colleagues, and censured by the U.S. Senate for doing his job. His final days were spent defending his life from hepatitis.

How could it have been possible for a crusader such as McCarthy to be impaled to the cross by those who swore allegiance to the flag, yet were among the most libelous of sinners? The story is illuminating, and discloses what may lie ahead for guardians of the American "spirit and liberty," who today find themselves trapped by opposing ideological forces similar to those of the "McCarthy years."

I remember well how vehemently, and unmercilessly liberal advocates struck at McCarthy's accusations that there were communists in the ranks of government employees. And so there were. You could smell them everywhere. They came from within and without. The conviction of the Rosenbergs was sensational. Both husband and wife were guilty of passing confidential secrets to the enemy. As a consequence of the Russian "ally factor," there were untold numbers of "elite comrades" allowed to infiltrate much of the government and intermingle vis-avis with their "equals.

Records indicate that in his speech of Feb. 9, 1950, McCarthy made public a list of 57 communists working for the [U.S.] State Department If someone tells you that there were no communists in McCarthy's line of fire, he did not live as an adult in post-World-War II. If someone tells you that he knew about it but didn't see any danger, he was thinking just as the communist agents wanted him to.

To be revealed as a communist in McCarthy's day spelled doom for the accused. It was an association dreaded by all, particularly those enjoying the exclusive political and social limelight of Washington. Very accurately, assuming that the word communist would carry the same vile connotation as it did in the 1950s, today's political activists have fitted themselves into a more seductive framework, and refer to themselves — only when they have to — as socialists. But it is still a subculture of communism.

Incidentally, the VINONA Project files, declassified in 1995, provided indisputable evidence that nearly all of those McCarthy accused were traitors. Dead for 50 years, McCarthy's body has been tarred, feathered, crucified, cremated and his ashes shot into space by a leftist media who cannot handle the truth.

estimates that since the recession began in December 2007, employment in the health care sector has grown by 513,000 jobs. By recognizing the potential of better health care as a growth engine, we will be enabling much-needed activity across multiple sectors of our nation's economy.

Rarely do lawmakers have an unprecedented opportunity to unite behind an issue that affects every American, regardless of gender, age, income or party affiliation. As the president and members of Congress come together on Capitol Hill next week, it is time to set aside the partisan rhetoric and reach a historic agreement that brings down cost, provides a boost to our nation's economy, increases coverage and protects overall quality of care.

Old-time snooping led to Dugard and her two daughters

PHIL'S COMPOUND wouldn't have remained a secret in the neighborhood of my youth.

An assortment of haphazard sheds, tents and tarps, shielded from prying eyes by a tall fence? No better invitation to investigate could have been extended to the kids of our block.

We'd have been all over it, scaling the fence, peering through any crack we could find or create.

More important, I'm sure we would have yapped about it enough that someone's mom or dad would have marched over and eventually led to the discovery of the real horror: a kidnapped girl held there as the sex slave of a convicted offender.

No smarmy sex addict inviting such scrutiny would have escaped our curiosity. It was our neighborhood. We felt entitled to swarm its every nook and cranny — yes, even if that meant trespassing.

So what led to the capture of convicted kidnapper-rapist Phillip Garrido and the liberation of his captives, Jaycee Lee Dugard and her two children?

Old-fashioned snooping. Curiosity about another person's life. An acted-on sense that something was amiss. Two women, both employees of the University of California-Berkeley police department, reportedly noted the robotic behavior of the two girls now known to have been fathered by Garrido. They focused on the possibility that something was wrong, even at the risk of being wrong themselves. Bravo.

This isn't a rant about how things were better back in the day.

The world is far more interconnected than ever before.

The Internet has not only made it easier and faster to communicate with greater numbers of people than ever before, it has also made it easier to collect and share information on others — to snoop.

Note it was a background check, no doubt done on a networked database, that alerted the Berkeley officers to the fact that Garrido was a convicted sex offender, thus setting off even more alarm bells and the follow-ups with police that led to Dugard revealing her real identity.

But the story also points out the limits of the "systems" put in place to keep us safe, including offender databases and the parole system.

SANCHEZ

Obviously, the parole officers assigned to Garrido through the years failed greatly and repeatedly.

Tragically missing for Dugard were people who noted her situation and also had the inclination and wherewithal to do something about it.

Obviously, the parole officers assigned to Garrido through the years failed greatly and repeatedly. As did the officer who was assigned to follow up on a tip more than two years ago that Garrido was keeping kids his backyard.

But countless others crossed paths with the Garridos through the years, too. Some did feel something was wrong. But somehow their instincts never resulted in saving Dugard or her

It's also worth noting that, now that the case is in the news, people are using the Internet to indulge their more prurient interests. What do they want to see?

The faces of the youngest victims, that's what.

The request for photos of the two girls, aged 11 and 15, became the top search as measured by Google Trends. Sick.

Every elementary-school child in the nation is taught to scream and fight off a possible abductor. Dugard followed those instructions as an 11year-old.

She yelled as she was snatched that June day on her way to the bus stop.

But after she stopped crying out, once she had fallen prey to the wishes of her attacker, who was aware enough to note to the subtler clues? Clearly, not enough people heard her and not nearly soon enough.

Congress should refine excessive speculation in oil futures markets

BY JAN VINEYARD Rampant oil speculation continues to burden families and small businesses for the second year in a row. With oil supplies at a 20-year high, demand at a 10-year low and the value of the dollar relatively unchanged since December 2008, oil prices continue to move up, which threatens to derail America's economic recovery and undermine the government's economic stimulus efforts. If lawmakers allow excessive speculation to go unchecked, America's economy will continue to remain sluggish and gasoline prices will remain high. The West Virginia Oil Marketers & Grocers Association (OMEGA), as a member of the Petroleum Marketers Association of America (PMAA), believe now is the time for Congress to pass futures-market-reform legislation which will restore integrity and efficiency to the marketplace.

GUEST COMMENTARY

Excessive speculation directly led to last year's oil price bubble when hedge funds, pension funds, endowment and exchange traded funds helped to drive prices to $147 a barrel. The resulting record high prices costs consumers dearly and amplified the worst economic crisis since the Great Depression. This year's price run-up occurred even as the International Energy Agency projects 2009 will see a drop in global oil demand of more than 2.5 million barrels per day — the largest yearover-year drop since 1981.

Speculators are pouring billions of dollars into commodities trades on behalf of institutional investors who buy large amounts of oil and then sell it to each other again and again, with no intention of ever taking delivery of the commodity. As a result of weak regulations and loopholes, contracts for oil may trade more than 20 times before the oil is ever used. Unlike companies that actually buy and sell the commodity being traded, such as petroleum marketers, farmers and airlines, institutional investors buy a large number of oil contracts and either hold them for long periods of time or resell them many times over, artificially driving up prices for consumers and businesses.

The federal regulatory agency in charge of ensuring that traders play by the rules — the Commodity Futures Trading Commission — is unable to actually see what is really happening with these contracts because so much of the market is "dark" due to federal statutory and regulatory loopholes. Today, as many as 90 percent of commodity trades occur outside of the traditional marketplace, which has caused a severe market imbalance and disconnect from supply and demand fundamentals. The now infamous trading firm, Enron, lobbied lawmakers in 2000 to exempt its trading desks from federal oversight. This allowed several hedge funds — including one huge fund, Amaranth — to manipulate the natural gas futures market in which the fund held nearly 70 percent of outstanding futures contracts.

Some estimates put these unregulated trades in the trillions of dollars and indicate that unregulated trades now far outnumber those of end-users that depend on the futures markets to manage risk.

The thing to understand is that money moves prices. The amount of money that hedge funds and index funds have invested in commodities can inflate oil prices. When large purchases of Apple stock are bought, the stock goes up; when large volumes are sold, the stock goes down. Who does it hurt? Those investors trading Apple stock.

However, when hedge funds and index funds invest in large volumes of oil, gasoline and heating oil, they artificially inflate prices and hurt petroleum marketers, airlines and, most importantly, consumers. When a hedge fund takes a heavily weighted, long position in oil futures markets, this moves the price of gas and within hours is reflected at the rack and then at the pump. Increased oil prices are bad for petroleum marketers, gasoline station owners, airlines, farmers and consumers.

OMEGA is working with the PMAA to pursue legislation which would bring full transparency to energy commodity markets and place aggregate position limits on highly leveraged speculators in order to bring some stability to these volatile commodity markets.

The legislation will still allow speculation to continue but will be transparent and subject to the rule of law. Right now, these futures markets are broken and this needs to be fixed. Enough is enough tell Congress it's time to pass futures market reform legislation.

Mutual fund fees to undergo Supreme Court scrutiny

OfMutualInterest MARK JEWELL AP Business Writer

For most investors, the first Monday in October will be just another trading day. But after a turbulent year in the stock market, investors may want to pay more attention to the new session of the Supreme Court.

On the docket is the case of Jones v. Harris Associates. If you question why your mutual funds charge so much to manage your investments, you'll want to follow the proceedings. The case, brought by shareholders against a mutual fund's adviser, could lead to lower fees for many of the 45 percent of households owning mutual funds. Potentially, it could also rebalance a pecking order where individuals working to build a retirement nest egg can pay twice as much as big institutional clients.

The fund industry, which has largely succeeded in beating back fee challenges, warns a victory for individual investors could unleash lawsuits targeting many of the nearly 8,000 funds holding more than $10 trillion. Much of the cost from that litigation would could ultimately be passed onto investors. The industry says investors have been served well by a fee-setting standard in place since 1982.

Fee setting standards The Supreme Court will hear arguments Nov. 2 over a key test investors must meet to successfully challenge fund fees. They've got to show expenses were so out of whack that they couldn't conceivably have been the product of honest negotiations between the fund's adviser and its board of directors.

That requirement is part of the so-called Gartenberg standard, which had been considered largely unassailable until the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals weighed in last year. That court ruled against a fee challenge, but also suggested the wrong standard has been applied all

The court concluded investors must show not only that fees were excessive, but a fund's adviser somehow misled the fund's board in winning its approval for their

But even that court was split in its decision. One of the panel's judges dissented, suggesting boards are failing to adequately scrutinize compensation in the fund industry and Wall Street broadly - an argument that industry critics hope the Supreme Court will take up. The details

The five-year-old case was brought against Harris Associates, the adviser to the Oakmark family of mutual funds. Harris Associates was paid a fee of 1 percent of the first $2 billion in assets it managed. The fee declined to as low as 0.75 percent once assets topped $5 billion, since larger funds can operate more efficiently.

Judges have noted these fees weren't out of line with those charged at comparable funds. And Oakmark funds continued to attract new money, suggesting investors weren't running to rival funds over cost concerns. The lawsuit argues that the relationships between fund boards and advisers are rife with conflict, and says market comparisons aren't good yardsticks to determine whether a fund is overcharging.

Fee imbalances

The complaint also takes aim at the fact that the Oakmark funds' individual investors were charged twice as much as other Harris clients like pension funds. Such a pecking order, the lawsuit claims, violates a fund's "fiduciary" obligation to shareholders. The industry argues the fee imbalances are justified clients than large ones. For starters, the bigger fish don't need toll-free hotlines or vast numbers of prospectus mailings, and they often agree to tighter restrictions when it comes to pulling their money out of a fund. William Birdthistle, an assistant professor at the Chicago-Kent School of Law who filed a brief signed by 25 other professors in support of the challenge against Harris Associates, said a fund's fiduciary duty to its shareholders should dictate that "you treat similar clients alike.

But he said the industry has refused repeated challenges to disclose data justifying the higher fees it charges individual investors.

Even if the industry wins before the Supreme Court a ruling is expected sometime before next summer Birdthistle believes political sentiment has shifted in favor of small-time investors. He says that could open the door for Congress to pursue a legislative remedy putting small investors on more equal footing with big clients.

"Investors have been losing these cases for nearly 30 years," Birdthistle says, "and that could definitely attract the attention of lawmakers who might say we need to revisit this, since they're already revisiting so much of America's financial regulations now."

The blue chips struggled this past week, with three out of four Dow components losing ground. Walt Disney (DIS) was one of the biggest percentage losers, after it said it would buy Marvel Entertainment for $4 billion. Some analysts questioned the value of Marvel's lesser-known brands, and the deal will likely hurt profit in the short term. Among the few gainers were Coca-Cola (KO) and conglomerate United Technologies (UTX).

Pathetic profits

his downturn has unleashed a lot of unprecedented events. Now that earnings season is closing, add one more to the list: Corporate operating profits fell for the eighth straight time on a year-over-year basis. It's the first time that has happened since Standard & Poor's began tracking operating earnings for the S&P 500 two decades ago.

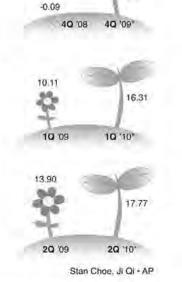

"It's similar to the general market and the economy," S&P senior index analyst Howard Silverblatt said of the eight-straight string. "We've had crashes, bubbles, unemployment and liquidity issues before. But we haven't had them all together at the same time; this is one for the historians.

S&P's operating profit figures don't include unusual income or costs, such as severance packages or merger-and-acquisition costs. Such figures are crucial for the market, as investors value stocks based on how much profit they will generate.

Analysts don't expect profit growth to bud until the fourth quarter. Some of that is due to a healthier economy. It also has to do with an easier hurdle to jump: the S&P 500 lost money in the fourth quarter of 2008. Has that ever happened before?

"Going back to the '30s, we never found a negative," Silverblatt said. "Perhaps back to the Civil War, there may be one.

Health care

Caution is returning to Wall Street, and that's drawing more attention to health care stocks. Many investors consider the industry a defensive play.

That's helped health care to be the best-performing industry over the past month. Some of the big-gest recent gains have come from medical equipment companies.

Electro-Optical Sciences Inc. (MELA), for example, surged to an all-time high in recent weeks on hopes government regulators will approve its cancer screening

Health care providers have also been strong, such as Assisted Living Concepts Inc. (ALC). It recently reported stronger occupancy trends at its assisted living

Little worry

Small businesses are still feeling hesitant. An index tracking their optimism has dropped two straight months, and the National Federation of Independent Business will release its latest results for August on Tuesday.

The figures are important because small businesses employ more than half the nation's non-government workers. In July's survey results, more small businesses said they were planning to cut jobs over the next three months than hire new workers. They are also cutting total pay to their workers.

The survey looks at small businesses from retail stores to manufacturers to construction crews. Economists say these mom-and-pop shops are feeling the brunt of tight credit conditions. Big businesses are more likely to have bigger cash holdings to help them through the downturn. To be sure, small business optimism is still well

Raising money-savvy kids

Y our kids are back to school. They'll learn about a heap of stuff this year, but most schools won't cover money management skills. That topic is a parent's job, says Susan Beacham, chief executive of Money Savvy Generation. which aims to get kids learning about money.

InsiderQ&A How much do really so much

parents need to teach kids about money? Parents are a child's financial model. It's not we say as parents, but rather what we do, that they remember and model years Beacham later. We cannot leave it to the schools - it's not

When are kids old enough to start thinking about money? Most people think children are far too young at age four and five. But that is the easiest group to start with - at that age, they are still listening to us. Just remember that money is abstract and kids don't understand abstract. They need to have a concrete reminder in front of them. Teach them choices, alternatives and consequences. I've used four cups labeled save, spend, donate and invest. They will see the accumulation of coin (in the different cat-

What if they chose to spend it

Spending money is all our children see us do. We have to get them excited about saving. If they put a dime in, match their dime. If they put a dollar in donate, ask what they will donate to and say you will help

What do kids think about money right now, given the recession and bear market?

Our kids right now are hearing all about shortfalls. Explain what's going on to your child in an age-conscious way. If you have less money coming in, if mom or dad is out of work, say 'this means we will spend less on groceries. But you will not go to bed hungry.' Reassure them but be clear

When should kids start on an allowance?

Between ages 9 to 12. Make a contract in writing (and list the amount of) money they will use to cover (specific) expenses in their life that you have covered in the past. Allowance is not extra money. For example, you've been paying for lunch at school. Add up what that cost is, and hand it over to them, and say, you are in charge of this. You can use this to buy lunch at school or save it and make lunch at home. How often should kids get their allowance?

Start small, once a week. Go to one month. By the time they are teens, give them allowance once a quarter. Senior year of high school before college, give them one year of allowance for expenses.

How much did you give your kids when they were ready? For both of my daughters, it was $80. My hand shook the first time I gave it to them. It covered lunch, toiletries and clothing. But now my children understand they have to live within their means.

Should parents talk about their bills with their kids?

At this age (teens), it is appropriate to open your financial life. Think about when your child is readythat means your child understands that what is explained at home stays at home. Show them the bills: utilities, mortgage, the check I make to church, to savings, the amount of money that's automatically invested.

What if the parent isn't good at handling his or her own finances? There's no reason why their child has to suffer the same hardships. As a parent, we all want our children to have a better life. Part of teaching them to be better than we are is to acknowledge that we are not so good with money. Accept what you don't know and get the info you need. Give your child a chance.

DEVELOPED RETURNS

In the world of investing, emerging-market stocks have recently resembled sports cars: risky, capable of big bursts and often expensive. Since global markets bottomed in early March, these developing economies zoomed ahead of the United States and other more staid, established markets. Things have changed. In August, developed economies whipped past emerging markets. China in particular dragged down the upstarts, officially entering a bear market.

Emerging markets are still on top for the year, but developed markets have been the better bet recently.

TURNING UP THE VOLUME Investors were active this past Tuesday. Too bad it was on a day the S&P 500 index dropped 2 percent. That's a bearish signal for many stock strategists, showing investors are more interested in selling than buying. The SPY, an exchange-traded fund that tracks the S&P 500, changed hands for the most time Tuesday since April 23, Bespoke Investment Group points

BROKEN STREAK

The first of the month isn't just payday for many workers, it also seems to be for the stock market as well. If you invested in the S&P 500 only on the first trading day of the month, you'd be up nearly 24 percent going back to the decade's beginning, according to S&P senior index analyst Howard Silverblatt. The index is down 32 percent over that time frame. Tuesday's decline on Sept. 1, though, broke a five-month streak.

OneYearAgo

Sept. 9, 2008 - NEW YORK (AP) - Overseas consumers spent more at McDonald's Corp. in August, and the nation's No. 1 hamburger chain surprised investors by posting a big rise in -store sales worldwide.

M cDonald's stock became a re-cession darling as consumers subbed fast food for sit-down meals at restaurants. Its stock rose 5.6 percent last year, even as the beliwether Dow Jones industrial average turned in its worst perfor mance since 1931.

But now, as many countries seem past the worst of the economic crisis, sales growth at home is slipping despite new products, such as the May launch of espres-so-based McCafe drinks and hefty Angus burgers for $4 in July. A stronger dollar, meanwhile, is hurting income from abroad. Shares are down 11 percent in 2009, even as the broader Dow Jones index has gained 6 percent. Standard & Poor's Equity Research analyst Mark Basham calls McDonald's a "defensive play" amidst the uncertainty over the strength of the worldwide rebound and strained consumer spending. He sees the stock rising back up to $70 from its range in the mid-$50s. McDonald's will still be able to increase yearly profit between 9 to 12 percent for the next 3 to 5 years, discounting the impact of foreign currency exchanges, said Jefferies & Co. analyst David Tarantino. He thinks there's room for more stores in developing four out of every five computers. The problem for Intel, and the rest of the tech industry, has been that people are buying fewer computers. When they do buy, they often opt for low-end machines, which pressures prices.

Some bright spots, though, are emerging. Chip sales globally have improved since February, inventory levels are easing and Intel recently boosted its sales forecast. Some analysts also forecast stronger demand coming from the growing middle classes in developing economies. That has helped Intel's stock to jump 56.5 percent since March 9, better than the overall

We try to pick companies that can withstand these variables: We look at whether the company is undergoing some kind of change, whether it's new management or one division turning around.

Supermarkets honored for reducing pollution

The U.S. EPA announced its 2009 GreenChill partner awards, which include Food Lion, Giant Eagle, Whole Foods, Hill Phoenix and Supervalu, parent company of Acme, Farm Fresh, Shop 'n Save and Shoppers Food & Pharmacy.

The GreenChill Advanced Refrigeration Partnership is an EPA cooperative alliance with the supermarket industry, working with supermarkets to reduce their emissions of ozone-depleting and greenhouse gas refrigerants.

Giant Eagle, with stores across West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Maryland, received the Environmental Achievement Award for best refrigerant emission rate of 7.8 percent, significantly less than the estimated industry average of 25 percent. Giant Eagle also earned awards for Best Corporate Emissions Rate, Superior Goal Achievement, and Stretch Goal Achievement.

As the winner of the Best Emissions Rate Award two years in a row, Giant Eagle is setting the pace in the supermarket industry for refrigerant-leak-rate reductions. With a corporatewide refrigerant leak rate below 8 percent, Giant Eagle continues to set a stellar example for the industry.

Others honored were:

■ Food Lion, which owns stores mostly along the Eastern Corridor, received a Distinguished Partner

Award for contributions to environmental advances in the supermarket industry.

■ Whole Foods, a nationwide chain of supermarkets and a GreenChill founding partner, earned the award for most improved emissions rate.

■ Supervalu, another nationwide food retailer, was recognized for achieving its emissions target in 2008-'09.

■ Refrigeration manufacturer Hill Phoenix also earned a Distinguished Partner Award for its advanced refrigeration technology, including compact chillers and secondary loop systems.

EPA estimates that if every supermarket in the nation joined GreenChill and reduced its emissions to the current GreenChill average, every year the nation could save the equivalent of 22 million metric tons of carbon dioxide, 240 tons of potentially depleting ozone emissions, and save $108 million in refrigerant expenses.

GreenChill's founding food retail partners created baseline measurements of refrigerant emissions in 2007, and set goals to reduce those emissions in 2008. These partners reduced their emissions rate from 13 percent to 11.9 percent in 2008, showing further improvements over the estimated industry average of 25 percent.

GreenChill has a total of 46 partners, including 37 food retail partners with more than 6,500 stores in 47 states.

5 weeks on the brink: Reliving meltdown of '08

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The nation was focused on a tropical storm spinning off the Carolinas and a hurricane headed for Florida. People were gaming out how a political novice named Sarah Palin might upend the presidential campaign.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed at 11,220 on Sept. 5, the Friday after Labor Day last year. There was an economic slowdown under way — no one doubted that. Whether it amounted to a bona fide recession was semantics, a question for economists.

But on Sunday morning, the federal government took an extraordinary step: It seized control of mortgage giants Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, committing up to $200 billion of taxpayer money.

The companies, which combined either hold or guarantee half the mortgage debt in America, were posting billions of dollars in losses each quarter as an increasing number of homeowners stopped paying back their loans. Investors doubted the companies had the financial strength to survive the housing crash.

President George W. Bush, with less than five months to go in his presidency, said taking over Fannie and Freddie would be "critical to returning the economy to stronger sustained growth."

It turned out to be the beginning of something much more dire

STRESCUE PINAL STRESC

A newspaper headline is taped to a booth on the New York Stock Exchange floor. On Oct. 3, 2008, the Emergency Economic Stabilization act of 2008 was passed and signed into law.

— far beyond a correction, far beyond even a garden-variety recession, far beyond anything most people had lived through.

What it turned out to be was the beginning of five weeks that shook the American financial system to its foundations. The stock market convulsed. Wall Street itself was redrawn. The word "depression" was suddenly on everyone's lips.

One year later, the economy is only now beginning to show signs—tentative at that—of pulling out of the Great Recession, the longest economic contraction since World War II. The Dow, while still more than 30 percent off its peak, is no longer the source of a daily national ulcer.

But for five weeks in September and October last year, venerable Wall Street investment houses staggered, or disintegrated outright. The government concocted unprecedented rescue plans with 12-digit price tags almost impossible to comprehend. It was a time when no place for money seemed safe.

In a single week, the Dow had lost almost 20 percent of its value, a staggering 1,874-point plunge. The average stood at 8,451, its lowest level in more than five years. It was the worst week in the history of the stock market.

On the floor of the New York Stock Exchange, anxiety ran so high that one trader compared it to a football game — when the Dow would peek into positive territory, lusty cheers would go up.

The following Monday, Oct. 13, Secretary Henry Paulson summoned the CEOs of the nation's biggest banks to an extraordinary meeting at the Treasury. He told them that instead of buying their toxic assets, he had decided it was best to inject $125 billion into their institutions to signal to the world that the government would not let any of them fail. The strings attached included limits on executive pay and dividends, and after much grumbling all of the CEOs signed on before leaving.

The program was later extended to hundreds of other banks around the country, but the issue of toxic assets on bank balance sheets remains to this day.

The nation settled in for an economic winter whose length no one could predict. Traders were drowning their sorrows in bars near the exchange. And at a nearby coffee shop, Sandeep Bhanote was reflecting on the week with a Wall Street friend.

"I have a client who lived through the Depression and wars and everything," said Bhanote, a software engineer. "And he said, 'You know, we survived, and you will, too.'"

In hindsight, it sounds like common sense. But only in hindsight.

Neighborhood act gives vouchers for donations to area nonprofit

Submitted to The Dominion Post

The Neighborhood Investment Program Act (NIP) was established by the West Virginia Legislature in 1996 to increase charitable giving to local nonprofit organizations.

The program allows 501(c) 3 designated charitable organizations to apply for tax credit vouchers, which the organizations distribute to businesses and individuals who contribute.

By donating to approved NIP organizations, contributors can support their communities and earn credits to reduce certain West Virginia taxes.

The credits are awarded to eligible nonprofit organizations through a grant process.

In Touch and Concerned, a facility providing services to seniors and individuals with disabilities, has been awarded NIP credits toward expansion of services.

In Touch and Concerned is in desperate need of a new ADA accessible vehicle to transport clients on a daily basis.

Contributions can be in the form of cash, stock, real property, personal property and in-kind services.

A minimum donation is $500. There are three primary limitations of the use of the tax credits:

- The amount of credit allowable must be taken within a fiveyear period, beginning with the tax year in which the donation is made.
- A donor may receive no more than $100,000 annually in NIP tax
- A donor cannot use NIP tax credit to reduce total tax liability on any one tax by more than 50 percent annually.

Contributors are eligible to receive up to 50 percent of the contributed amount (500/250, 1000/500) in the form of state tax credits.

In-kind services are calculated at a different rate and must include a minimum cash donation.

Donors may use the credits to reduce liability for the following West Virginia taxes: Corporate Net Income Tax, Business Franchise Tax and Personal Income Tax.

Wash. health co-op part of reform debate

OLYMPIA, Wash. — Group Health Cooperative was created in Washington state more than six decades ago, started up by members of local granges, unions and cooperatives who were inspired by a physician who had established America's first cooperative hospital in Elk City, Oklahoma.

Now, the Seattle-based co-op that serves nearly 600,000 people in Washington state and Idaho is being mentioned as a potential model in the national health care reform debate.

Group Health officials, while not taking an official stand in the debate, welcome the national discussion centered on their model of care.

"It's patient-focused. What the founders of Group Health wanted was prepaid care that was affordable and patient-centered," said Pam MacEwan, who is responsible for communications and public policy for the cooperative.

The cooperative is a consumergoverned, nonprofit health care system that coordinates care and coverage, which means not only is it the insurance company, but also the health care provider.

Group Health runs its own medical centers, and employs its own doctors, but contracts out hospital care and some specialized care. Health-Partners of Bloomington, Minn., is the other major nonprofit health cooperative in the nation.

So unlike a private physician, who may be covered by private insurers like Aetna or United Health, doctors at Group Health are only seeing patients who are covered under the Group Health plan.

Group Health said that the focus on preventative care, combined with the fact that doctors are salaried — instead of paid based on the number of tests they order or office visits they have - helps make them more cost efficient.

"There's no incentive to encourage doctors to do tests," said Dr. Barbara Detering, a family medicine doctor at Group Health's Capitol Hill campus in Seattle. Instead, the focus is on keeping patients "as healthy as possible so we're avoiding high cost situations."

The company hasn't escaped financial challenges. It closed a hospital in Redmond last year, and to deal with rising health costs, Group Health raised its premium rates by 13 percent this year, after a 9.7 percent rate increase last year. Private insurers in the state also spiked their rates Regence raised its rates nearly 17 percent this year, and Premera's increased by about 6 percent.

"We're subject to the market just like everyone else is," MacEwan said.

The Senate Finance Committee has been negotiating for months to come up with a health care bill that could garner bipartisan support, and the idea of nonprofit co-ops, being pushed by moderate Democratic Sen. Kent Conrad of North Dakota, is one that has been mentioned.

Under Conrad's proposal, co-ops could be formed statewide or in geographic regions. They would be the insurer that would contract directly with health care providers, and like Group Health, would be self-governed by an elected board. Startup money could come from the federal government through grants or loans.

While some Democrats, like Conrad, see the co-op as the compromise on a government-run plan that can get support from moderate Republicans, unions and others have said the government option is the only way to bring real competition to the private insurance industry.

West Coast fishermen prepare for 'catch share'

HARBOR, Ore. — The West Coast groundfish fleet has struggled to stay afloat during major cutbacks to reverse long-standing problems with overfishing and to protect the seafloor from damage caused by bottom trawling gear.

They are now embarking, after years of work and negotiation, on the latest system in fisheries management, known as "catch share." Fishermen are given their own individual shares of the total catch, personal responsibility for not catching overfished species, and a promise of better prices for the fish they do haul up.

"In the short term it might hurt people. In the long term I think it's the way to go," said Todd Whaley, 46, part-owner and skipper of the Miss Sarah, a 102-foot trawler that he rigs for groundfish, Pacific whiting, and crab, depending on the market.

NOAA Fisheries Service, the federal agency that oversees commercial fishing, is pressing regional fishery councils that set har-

BRIEFS

Todd Whaley, part owner and captain of the groundfish trawler Miss Sarah, leaves the dock in the Port of Brookings-Harbor, Ore. Whaley and other fishermen in the West Coast groundfish fishery will be coming under a new management system known as "catch share" which NOAA Fisheries Service is encouraging as a way of ending overfishing.

vest limits around the country to adopt catch share programs.

The agency is under a congressional mandate to end all overfishing in U.S. waters by 2011, the year that the West Coast groundfish accord goes into effect. It still has 41 fisheries to bring in line out of 244 that have been assessed.

'The scientific evidence is pretty clear that commercial fisheries that are managed with catch shares on balance perform better than traditionally managed fisheries," Jane Lubchenco, head of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, told The Associated Press on a recent visit to Newport.

'So we are encouraging every [regional fishery management] council to simply look at this tool and say, 'Is it appropriate for these fisheries, or is it not.'

Chief among candidates for switching to catch share is the New England groundfish fishery, which has been struggling for 15 years to rebuild cod and haddock stocks.

The stakes are high. According to NOAA, commercial fishing contributes $28 billion a year to the economy. Meanwhile, the nation's appetite for fish outstrips domestic supply. Sixty percent of the seafood consumed comes from imports.

Annie Leibovitz

NEW YORK — Annie Leibovitz's artsy, provocative portraits of celebrities regularly grace the covers of Vanity Fair and Vogue, images that have made her as famous as her subjects and earned her millions.

Now Leibovitz risks losing the copyright to the images — and her entire life's work — if she doesn't pay back a $24 million loan by Tuesday. Art Capital Group, a New York company that issues short-term loans against fine and decorative arts and real estate, sued her in late July for breach of contract.

"We have clear contractual rights and will protect them in any scenario," said ACG spokesman Montieth Illingworth on Friday. "Our preference is for this to be resolved."

Last year, Leibovitz put up her homes and the copyright to every picture she has ever taken — or will take — as collateral to secure the loan to pay off her mounting debt: unpaid bills, mortgage payments and tax liens, ACG said.

Recession hits nest eggs; U.S. promotes saving

WASHINGTON — The recession has eaten into people's nest eggs so the government is promoting ways to make it easier to save for retirement.

One initiative that President Barack Obama outlined in his weekly radio and Internet address Saturday will allow people to have their federal tax refunds sent as savings bonds. Others are meant to require workers to take action to stay out of an employer-run savings program rather than having to take action to join it.

"We know that automatic enrollment has made a big difference in participation rates by making it simpler for workers to save," Obama said.

The new federal steps, which do not require congressional action, include:

■ Making it easier for small companies to set up 401(k) retirement savings plans in which all workers are automatically enrolled unless they ask to be omitted. Employers can set default amounts of each worker's pay - perhaps 3 percent — to automatically be deposited into the accounts without being taxed. Workers can raise or lower the contribution levels, and they choose how to invest the money. They will pay taxes on the money only when they withdraw it as retirees, when their tax rates are likely to be lower than when they are working full-time. A similar process would apply to savings plans called SIMPLE-IRAs.

■ Allowing such plans to automatically increase the amount that workers save over time unless the workers object.

■ Allowing people to check a box on their federal tax returns asking that any refund be sent as a savings bond. More than 100 million U.S. households receive refund checks each year, and many are promptly cashed and spent.

■ Allowing workers, when leaving a job, to direct unused vacation pay to a retirement savings account rather than taking it in cash.

"This recession has not only led to the loss of jobs, but also the loss of savings," Obama said, citing declines in home values as well as sources of retirement income.

"If you work hard and meet your responsibilities, this country is going to honor our collective responsibility to you: to ensure that you can save and secure your retirement. That is why we are announcing several commonsense changes that will help families put away money for the future," Obama said.

AIG selling asset management unit for $500 million

NEW YORK — American International Group Inc. said Saturday it reached a deal to sell a portion of its asset management business to a Hong Kong-based investment firm for $500 million.

The sale to Bridge Partners LP, which is owned by Pacific Century Group, includes about $300 million in cash at closing, additional future consideration that includes a performance note and a continuing share of carried interest.

The sale is just the latest for the troubled insurance giant. AIG is trying to sell assets to repay billions of dollars in federal loans. The loan package, which helped the company avoid failing, was worth up to

The latest units being sold operate in 32 countries and manage about $88.7 billion of investments by institutional and retail clients, AIG said in a release. AIG will retain its in-house investment arm that oversees about $480 billion of assets under management.

Win J. Neuger will continue as CEO of the units being sold and the existing management team will remain in place, the company said. The transaction is subject to receipt of regulatory approvals.

Germany: Politics won't rule GM's sale of Opel

LONDON — General Motors Corp. isn't under any major political influence to pick a buyer for its European car business, Adam Opel GmbH, German Finance Minister Peer Steinbrueck said Saturday.

Steinbrueck said he told U.S. Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner once again that the German government favors a bid by Canadian car parts maker Magna International Inc. and Russia's stateowned Sberbank over Belgian investor RHJ International.

The U.S. won't get involved in GM's decision, which could come at a board meeting on Tuesday, he said.

G-20 to maintain economic stimulus measures to prevent another recession

LONDON — Top finance officials from rich and developing countries agreed Saturday to curb hefty bankers' bonuses, but the proposed crackdown on excessive payouts so far falls short of European demands after the U.S. and Britain shied away from imposing a cap.

The Group of 20 finance ministers also pledged to maintain stimulus measures such as extra government spending and low interest rates to boost the global economy, warning that the fledging recovery that provided the backdrop to their meeting here is "The financial system is showing signs of repair," said U.S. Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner. "Growth is now underway. However, we still face significant challenges ahead."

The G-20 joint statement issued at the end of their London meeting said that fiscal and monetary policy will stay "expansionary" for as long as needed to reduce the chances of a doubledip recession.

The International Monetary Fund has said that the global economy is beginning a sluggish recovery from its worst recession since World War II, raising its estimate for global economic growth in 2010 to 2.5 percent, from an April projection of 1.9 percent.

But the IMF also downgraded its forecast for this year, saying it would shrink by 1.4 percent, instead of 1.3 percent.

The group also pushed ahead with plans to reform the financial system, including tougher action against tax havens and giving developing countries a greater say in global governance.

French Finance Minister Christine Lagarde said this ensured that "things will not go back to business as usual ... that there are no dark areas anymore to hide.'

But while the gathering — a preparatory session for the G-20 leaders' summit in Pittsburgh later this month — reached agreement on the need for ongoing growth-boosting measures and some regulatory reform, it compromised on the hot topic of bankers' bonuses.

Cobalt International files for IPO

NEW YORK — Oil exploration company Cobalt International Energy Inc. said it plans to raise up to $1.15 billion with an initial public offering on the New York Stock Exchange.

The filing was made Friday with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission. Cobalt plans to apply to list its common stock under a "CIE" ticker.

Money raised from the IPO will be used for drilling and exploration through 2011, as well as for general corporate purposes, the company said in its filing. The 4year-old company said it doesn't expect to generate any revenue from production before 2012.

Cobalt, based in Houston, explores reservoirs in the deepwater basins in the Gulf of Mexico and West Africa. Investors in the company include Goldman Sachs. The Carlyle Group and First Reserve Corp. CEO Joseph Bryant is a former president and CEO of Unocal Corp. He also worked at BP and Amoco.

U.S. general: Villagers injured at bomb site

KUNDUZ, Afghanistan — The top NATO commander in Afghanistan said Saturday that local villagers were among those wounded at the site of an airstrike on hijacked fuel tankers. declaring his resolve to limit civilian casualties that threaten to undermine the war against the Taliban.

U.S. Gen. Stanley McChrystal inspected the spot where a U.S. fighter jet blasted the hijacked tankers early Friday, killing as many as 70 people. The pre-dawn strike occurred despite McChrystal's new orders restricting the use of airpower if civilian lives are at risk.

McChrystal also visited a hospital Saturday where the wounded were taken, stooping low to talk with a 10-year-old boy with severe burns, his arms and legs swathed in gauze.

Local officials have said scores of people died in the fiery blast, but it was unclear how many were militants and how many were villagers who rushed to the scene to siphon fuel from the stolen trucks. A NATO team began an official investigation Saturday amid a clamor from European leaders for answers, with some calling the airstrike a "tragedy" and "a big mistake" that must be investigated.

"From what I have seen today and going to the hospital, it's clear to me that there were some civilians that were harmed at the site," McChrystal told reporters in Kunduz. He did not say if any civilians were killed.

McChrystal waded through kneehigh water to view the blackened

U.S. Gen. Stanley McChrystal (center), commander of U.S. and NATO forces in Afghanistan, German colonel Georg Klein (left), commander of the German base in Kunduz, and U.S. Rear Admiral Gregory J. Smith (right), NATO's director of communications in Kabul, are surrounded by soldiers as they visit the site where villagers reportedly died when American jets bombed fuel tankers hijacked by the Taliban, outside Kunduz, Afghanistan.

NATO tankers, which exploded when a U.S. F-15E Strike Eagle jet dropped two 500-pound bombs on them a few miles outside the main town in northern Kunduz province.

Reporters traveling with him saw about a dozen small yellow fuel cans had survived the blasts. Several were still full of fuel.

Before traveling to the site of the bombing, McChrystal met Afghan leaders in the provincial capital. He expressed sympathy for any civilian losses and said the fight against the Taliban should not come at the expense of civilian lives.

"I am here today to ensure that we are operating in a way that is truly protecting the Afghan people from all threats," McChrystal said.

Dems may resist Afghan troop increase

Associated Press

WASHINGTON Senate Democrats are signaling that any push by the White House for troops Afghanistan probably will run into resistance.

Sen. Carl Levin, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said the U.S. must focus more on building Afghan security forces.

That view was endorsed by Sen. Jack Reed, who is also on the committee and spent two days in Afghanistan this past week with Levin, D-Mich.

Congress returns to work in the week ahead, just as President Barack Obama receives a new military review Afghanistan strategy.

Officials expect it will be followed up by a request for at least a modest increase in U.S. troops battling insurgents in the 8year-old war.

Chinese leaders fire top Urumqi official

URUMQI, China — Chinese leaders bowed to public demands and sacked the head of a western city wracked by communal violence and a bizarre string of needle attacks, hoping to calm uneasy mobs and end protests that percolated for a third day Saturday.

The removal of Urumqi's Communist Party Secretary Li Zhi came amid reports of police again dispersing crowds outside Urumqi's government offices using tear gas, and more unconfirmed reports of needle attacks, including one on an 11-year-old boy in a downtown square.

The city's chief prosecutor announced further details about four people arrested over the attacks, but offered little to back up the government's claims that they were an organized campaign to spread terror. Protesters marched by the thousands Thursday and Friday demanding the resignation of Li and his boss, Xinjiang party secretary Wang Lequan, for failing to provide adequate public safety in the city. Also sacked was the police chief of Xinjiang, China's westernmost region that abuts Central Asia and whose capital is Urumqi.

An Urumqi government spokeswoman and the official Xinhua News Agency gave no reasons in announcing the changes. But July's riot was the worst communal violence in more than a decade in Xinjiang where Uighur separatists have waged a sporadically violent campaign for a homeland. The renewed protests this week underscored the difficulties authorities were having in reasserting control.

The firing may also help quash calls to dismiss Wang — a member of the country's ruling Politburo and an ally of President Hu Jintao.

Iraqi Arabs protest plan for Kurdish patrols

BAGHDAD — Hundreds of Sunni Arabs opposed to the presence of Kurdish troops in disputed areas of northern Iraq demonstrated Saturday against a U.S. proposal to deploy a mixed force of American, Kurdish and Iraqi soldiers in the area.

More than 300 people in the Sunnidominated town of Hawija, once an insurgent stronghold, gathered in a stadium to protest the inclusion of Kurdish troops in these patrols.

The demonstrators and critics elsewhere in Iraq also denounce the plan as a violation of a security pact under which the U.S. pulled its troops back from populated areas in June.

The split between Iraq's majority Arabs and the Kurdish minority, which controls a semiautonomous region in the north, is one of the most significant long-term threats to the country's stability, U.S. and Iraqi officials say. Sunni Arabs fear the Kurds are looking to add Arab lands to their semiautonomous region.

The top U.S. military commander in the country believes al-Qaida in Iraq is taking advantage of tensions between the Iraqi army and the Kurdish militia, the peshmerga, to carry out attacks on villages not guarded by either side. To try to fill the gap, Gen. Ray Odierno last month proposed the idea of a mixed force that would include U.S. troops serving in an oversight role to help Kurdish and Iraqi soldiers work together to secure areas along that fault line.

The issue has come to the fore with a series of deadly bombings targeting villages outside Mosul, where al-Qaida in Iraq and other Sunni insurgents remain active despite numerous U.S.-Iraqi military operations.

Afghan presidential challenger wants results held

KABUL—The leading challenger in Afghanistan's presidential vote urged electoral officials Saturday to stop announcing preliminary results because of "highly suspicious numbers" in tallies released so far.

Results from the Aug. 20 election have been dribbling out alongside a torrent of complaints of ballot box stuffing and voter intimidation. International and Afghan observers have been critical of the vote but have held back judgment until counting and fraud investigations have finished.

Partial results from 60 percent of polling stations show President Hamid Karzai ahead but still shy of the more than 50 percent needed to avoid a runoff.

Former Foreign Minister Abdullah Abdullah said that the tallies released so far show suspicious figures, with a number of stations posting nearly identical numbers for Karzai and none for any other candidate. Abdullah said those numbers were "highly suspicious" and indicate that the electoral commission is not holding back votes from areas where complaints have been filed.

The electoral commission has said it is only announcing "clean votes," not reporting those that suggest ballot-box stuffing or other fraud.

Abdullah has previously alleged fraud on the part of the Karzai administration and said that electoral workers, appointed by Karzai, are partisan to the president. He said the latest tallies are proof that the system is rigged.

"It is state-engineered fraud. It is not violations here and there,"

Abdullah said. "I request the electoral commission not to announce the provisional results anymore because it's fraudulent."

In eastern Paktika province, six polling centers showed hundreds of votes for Karzai, with none for any other candidate, Abdullah noted. Karzai has strong support in the province, where the majority of people belong to his Pashtun ethnic group, but Abdullah said it was highly unlikely that not a single person cast a ballot for one of the more than 30 other candidates.

Boat sinks in Macedonian lake, 15 reported dead

OHRID, Macedonia - An overloaded sightseeing boat carrying dozens of Bulgarian tourists sank Saturday in a lake on Macedonia's western border, and at least 15 people drowned, officials said.

The vessel, called the Ilinden, sank rapidly in just 20 feet of water in Lake Ohrid, police spokesman Ivo Kotevski said.

Police divers were searching for three missing passengers, Interior Minister Gordana Jankulovska said. Rescuers pulled 55 survivors from the water, including five who were hospitalized in the town of Ohrid.

At least 15 bodies have been recovered from the lake — the deepest in the Balkans, located along the mountainous border between Macedonia and Albania.

Mom opposes Dutch girl's plan to sail the globe

AMSTERDAM — The mother of a 13-year-old who hopes to become the youngest sailor to circle the globe solo broke her silence Saturday, saying the voyage was too dangerous and her daughter was "not yet grown up" enough.

Babs Muller was quoted in the Volkskrant daily as saying she has kept quiet until now because her daughter, Laura Dekker, had threatened not to see her again if she stood in the way of the trip.

Laura's parents are divorced, and she lives with her father, Dick Dekker, who supports her ambition to set sail this year for a trip that would take two years.

A court last week ordered Laura placed in the custody of child care authorities for two months, and appointed a child psychologist to report on her capacity to cope with the risks of the voyage and possible harm of lengthy isolation during such formative years.

Report: 24 killed in South Sudan tribal violence

KHARTOUM, Sudan — An attack on a southern Sudan village has left 24 people dead, including a tribal chief, his three wives and several children, while dozens were wounded, a newspaper reported Saturday.

The incident was the latest in a rising wave of tribal violence in South Sudan that has killed more than 2,000 people, including many women and children, and displaced another 250,000, according to the U.N.

About 50 armed and masked men in military uniform on Friday stormed the southern village of Pigwrithiang belonging to the Dinka tribe, according to the daily Ajras al Huria, or Freedom Bells in Arabic. The village lies near the town of Malakal, about 400 miles south of the capital, Khartoum.

Columnist never too old to dress up

I LOVE DRESSING UP. And I don't mean getting dolled up in my best and hitting the town.

Sure that's fun every once in a while, as it's always nice to to remind myself what I look like with make-up on. But when I say I love dressing up, I refer instead the act of putting on something ridiculous, preferably involving a wig, fake teeth or an eyeliner mustache.

Reading that over, I guess it's more accurate to say I love playing dress up. Which probably sounds strange at 35, but hey, I never claimed to be normal.

This obsession with incognito began at an early age, when visits to my friend Jenna's house invariably culminated in my donning, from her toy box, a faux grass skirt and pink Lai, layered overtop my favorite silky teal nightgown. It was in fact my favorite outfit of all time, and had that Hawaiinesque stuff not belonged to someone else, I'm pretty sure you would have seen me wearing it in my school photos. And perhaps on my wedding day.

At home, I always gravitated toward one of my two tutus (choice of white or pink), pairing them with either my mother's woven-leather slip-ons with the high wooden heel, or the hot pink pointy-toed pumps with the rhinestone toe embellishment that my grandmother had given me. Sarah Jessica Parker and that opening "Sex and the City" shot? So Katie Marie Long circa '79

Fast forward to college and you'll see my roommate and I having contests to see who could look more '80s, given only 5 minutes and the contents of the other's closet. Or going to Kroger wearing boxers, wife beaters, riding boots and baseball caps, just to see what people would do. It was a common cure for our boredom, and however weird it may sound to the average human, a fairly regular occurrence at our house.

Since then — thanks to every-day life, dress codes and a temporary unfortunate lack of oddballs in my social set — my strange preoccupation with all things costume has had to take a back seat, this particular freak flag of mine flying, sadly, only at Halloween.

That is, until recently. When the stars aligned to bring me back together with several dress-up playin' fools like myself, once again. There are nights of wearing a cape to the bar. Afternoons spent scouring the Internet for the ideal Viking helmet or Flava-Flav-style clock. Just to have, you know, in case.

On our recent beach trip, my friend Angie and I actually brought suitcases filled with accoutrement: Hair pieces, hats and masks were tried on, traded, photographed and changed. Eyeliners, brow pencils and, yes, Crayola markers became instruments of facial hair — mustaches, goatess and Fu Manchus in taupe, black, green and pink. Goggles were donned with sombreros, boas paired with a big, bushy fake beard. Tiaras worn with yarn dreadlocks. And I think every person there had a cotton-candycolored bob cut for at least one evening. All this after the kids went to bed, mind you.

Even as you read this, I'll be recovering from an awesome night spent as a fairy, surrounded by vampires, werewolves and shape shifters, at my dear friend Tyler's supernatural-themed surprise birthday party.

Further proof that while my wonderful friends and I may keep getting older, we never actually grow up.

grow up. Thank God.

TECHNOLOGY AND YOU: A THREE-PART SERIES SOCIAL INTERACTIONS AND DAILY LIFE

Technology impacts socialization

Relationships, friendships affected by new inventions

BY KATIE McDOWELL
The Dominion Post

It seems these days one rarely sees anyone without some sort of electronic device attached to him somewhere — an iPod, a BlackBerry, a cell phone, a laptop. People everywhere, every day, are downloading, uploading, texting, Twittering and Facebooking. We're sharing information quickly and constantly. But what does that mean when it comes to our communication skills? Is technology eroding our personal relationships, or simply changing the way we see them?

simply changing the way we see them?

Two area experts say it's definitely the Rachael Post, principal of Lunar Sky Media and an adjunct professor for WVU's integrated marketing communications master's program, said there are many components involved when analyzing how we communicate today.

First, one must take into consideration the speed at which technology — and our relationship to it — changes. She points to Moore's Law, which dictates that technology (memory, data transfer, processing, etc.) doubles every 18 months. Add to that the Law of Accelerating Returns, which states that growth — both technological and social — is speeding up exponentially in today's society. Then add to that the micronization of technology — also known as the fact that everything is getting smaller and smaller — and you've got quite a bit to consider.

"As technology gets smaller, people are taking it with them everywhere," Post said. "That changes the way we interact."

Post is quick to say it's not a matter of "good" or "bad," it's just an evolution. But studying that evolution, she said, is tricky — for the very reasons mentioned above.

"As an academic, it's difficult to publish a case study because the technology moves so much faster than you can study it and write about it," she said. "It's changing so rapidly that studying its effects is still a work in progress."

To illustrate how quickly the technology moves and changes, Post pointed to Twitter and its ubiquitous use on news programs, in marketing strategy, in celebrity culture and indeed in everyday communication.

"And nine months ago, no one had ever really heard of it," she said.

WVU Associate Professor and Director of the Center for Literary Computing Sandy Baldwin said he sees today's technology boom as a move from one-to-one communication (the telephone, for instance) and one-to-many communication (such as the radio) to many-to-many communication — Twitter, Facebook, etc.

"It's not even a matter of more and more as it is new kinds of technology," he said. "Which creates different kinds of communication."

This, he said, is important to note, because it's not a matter of a degradation of interpersonal communication, merely a change in how it happens.

"People said the same thing because of the telephone. 'Oh, people aren't communicating face to face because of the phone.' But it's wrong to think we'll stop communicating," he said, "because that's basically what humans do. What these are are different ways of communicating.'

Post agreed. When asked about the charge that technology is causing a breakdown in interpersonal communication — people choosing to use e-mail or texts rather than a face-to-face conversation, in part to "shield" themselves from interaction -Post was practical.

"Sure, people may feel freer [saying some things via text or e-mail than in person]," she said. "But that's always been the case with certain media. There was a time when people would put it in a letter instead, then a time when they'd say it on the phone. There was probably a time when they'd put it on the ankle of a pigeon. There are always different levels of comfort with different types of communication."

So, what about that group of teens or 20-somethings sitting at a restaurant, texting, rather than talking?

"The thing is, they might be texting each other in the group and not talking, but the interesting thing is they're still sharing information," she said. "They might be texting, 'Hey, look at this video on YouTube,' or 'Look at this link.' They're bringing in information to their group in a way it didn't happen before.

Because of technology and this type of social media, how we get and share information is different. The question is more how do you sort through that information, how do vou use it?'

Another interesting aspect to social media — but one that again defies a black-and-white, good-or-bad classification — are the social outlets offered by sites such as Facebook. One can reconnect with old friends and reunite with family members. Then again, there are also increasing numbers of stories of marriages being broken up when old flames rekindle.

But all this speaks to how the sites are used, not the sites themselves, Post and Baldwin said. Again, it's a matter of knowing what to do and how to sort through the vast amount of information now available instantly.

"Watching television is a passive activity," Post said. "I never watched much television growing up, so when I first started watching TV I wanted to interact with it. I would vell at the screen. say things to the newscasters. And my roommates in college would tell me to be quiet. But now we get to talk back — if someone writes something in a blog, or posts a video, I can leave my comments. Some videos spawn other videos, people can respond to what they like and what they don't like and use it to create something new. We become the responders, the creators and the producers of the information. It changes the way in which we are a community."

That same type of role — as user and maker - carries over to all types of technology and social media,

Lunar Sky Media and an adjunct professor for WVU's integrated marketing communications master's program, said people through the ages have found alternate ways to express

they weren't comfortable

about in person.

From writing

Rachael Post,

a letter to principal of texting,

she and Baldwin maintain.

"The way in which we 'see' ourselves is changing as media changes," Post said. "We are no longer passive receivers of information. Not only are we using social media as a tool for communication, but we are changing the media itself. In this new wave of social media, we are becoming more and more the creators of the medium. With the addition of software applications that allow us to shape how we use the technology, we are not only users of the tools, but creators of the tools. The popularity of Twitter and its growth can be directly attributed to the people who use it. Without member tweets, it is nothing. A social media site lives or dies by its users. Remember Friendster?"

Baldwin agreed, saying the rapid changes made in technology and the "creative misuse" of it — he points to texting on a cell phone, obviously not the phone's original purpose — help define this new era of interaction.

"It's not a shutting down of communication at all," he said. "It simply shows the plasticity of it. The flexibility and the freedom."

Vintage Room raises the bar downtown

LATELY, I'VE DROPPED into The Vintage Room in downtown Morgantown on multiple occasions.

It's a little more upscale than most places you would walk into downtown, often isn't as crowded or noisy, and offers a variety of drinks, food and the bartenders and servers have been attentive and welcoming. All in all, it makes for a pleasant and unique option in the nightlife routine.

The Vintage Room is located at 467 Chestnut St., below the deck of Bent Willey's. It has its own outdoor seating area and bar for those warm summer evenings that are quickly slipping away from us now. This is a nice place to hang out with friends for a while before the sun sets, and the street outside is filled with bar goers. Inside the martini bar, it has a refined yet modest decor. Comfortable seats as you enter face two flat-screen televisions. There are seats around a few tables and seats lined up in front of the bar. There is also another bar room, which is equally inviting, a few steps away.

The bar offers a wide selection of bottled beers with quite a few imports and specialty beers to choose from, but none on tap. What the place does have on tap is wine. You'll notice quickly after entering The Vintage Room that it can serve you a fine glass of vino, as you can see into stocked wine rooms behind the bar and side tables. The establishment not only offers a great selection of wine to its patrons, but champagne, cigars, martinis and food as well.

You'll be able to choose from a large number of martini concoctions with names/flavors such as "Wedding Cake," "Banana Split,"
"360 Lights Out," "Worthers," "Tiramisu," "X-Rated" — I'm not going to go on. Martini-heads will have to check it out for themselves.

The Vintage Room is home to some good food as well. There are appetizers such as gazpacho or paprika shrimp. You can order a salad, or move on to the nice selection of entrees; Seared Maple Leaf Duck Breast, Chilean Sea Bass, Gnocchi Carbonara — any of that sound good? I thought it

If you're hitting The Vintage Room with me though, I'm going to suggest we get a wood-fired, brick oven pizza. And if you go for that, I'll even let you pick what kind. You've got some great choices, such as "The Caribbean" (white pizza with jalapeno peppers, fresh pineapple and fresh mozzarella), "Vodka Sauce Pizza" (classic Vodka sauce topped with grilled chicken, Proscuitto Ham, green peas and fresh mozzarella), and chicken parmesan (pretty self explanatory). If that doesn't do it for you, don't worry, there are a more. Dining hours are until 10 p.m. Sunday-Wednesday, and you can get entrees until 11 p.m. and gourmet pizza until 1 a.m. Thursday-Saturday.

The Vintage Room opens at 5 p.m. each day and closes at 11 p.m. Sunday-Wednesday and 2 a.m. Thursday-Saturday. Also some items of special interest before you go:

■ Dress nicely — As cool as it is to wear your John Belushi "Animal House" T-shirt every day, give it a night off, because The Vintage Room would like you to wear a collared shirt, nothing vulgar, and no hats or sportswear. (Hmm. Seems to be directed at us guys.)

■ Wednesday is "Working Women's Wednesday" with WVAQ broadcasting from there from 5-8 p.m. There's also $5 pizza and cocktail specials for ladies.

■ Thursday is two-for-one select martinis. The bar's choice,

■ Friday is happy hour from 5-9 p.m. with The Jenny Wilson Trio providing musical stylings. Dress to impress and enjoy!

'Idol' finalist signs record deal

BY MONICA HERRERA

Billboard.com

It took him a bit longer than his fellow contestants, but "American Idol" finalist Danny Gokey has landed a record deal. The 29-year-old Wisconsin native — who finished third on the show behind Kris Allen and Adam Lambert — has inked a recording contract with 19 Recordings and RCA Nashville, his label announced recently. Gokey's debut album is slated for release next year, and his first single is expected to premiere later this fall.

The deal signals a somewhat unexpected move towards country for the singer, who expressed a stronger affinity for sweeping, adult contemporary and R&B-leaning ballads during his "Idol" tenure.

"I didn't realize the 'Idol' experience would give me a musical direction, but it did," said Gokey in a statement. "There were country songs that I performed on the show, and it was the message and the feeling in those kinds of songs that helped me realize that country is where I belong.'

Gokey performed well-received versions of Carrie Underwood's "Jesus Takes the Wheel" and Rascal Flatts' "What Hurts the Most" on "American Idol," and the singer became an early favorite thanks to his raspy vocals, extensive eyewear collection, and compelling backstory. His wife, Sophia, died of heart failure four weeks before his Kansas City audition.

While Allen, Lambert and fourthplace finisher Allison Iraheta locked in record deals in June, Gokey's signing took longer to finalize. He reportedly began meeting with Sony Music Nashville the following month, sparking rumors that he might take on the country genre.

Gokey's deal means that for the first time, all four top contestants on one season of "American Idol" have signed with 19 Recordings.

Swank promotes pet adoption, seeks to dispel myths

BY ALICIA RANCILIO Associated Press

NEW YORK — Hilary Swank is putting her animal appreciation to work as an ambassador for a pet adoption campaign.

The two-time Academy Award-winning actress said Wednesday that the Iams Home 4 the Holidays Pet Adoption Campaign has "struck a chord with my heart."

Her mission is to help 1.5 million pets in shelters find homes between Oct. 1 and Jan. 4.

Swank says older animals have just as much love as younger ones and have "already gone through a lot of the training that can be challenging for people.'

Swank also notes that it's possible to adopt a purebred from a shelter if people have their heart set on a particular breed.

True fans will enjoy new Heap album

SPARKLING. WISPY. Ethereal. Ambient.

Those were the words I wrote down when I first began to listening to Imogen Heap's new album "Ellipse."

But as with every Heap song I hear, the adjectives are always the same, because there are really no words to describe this talented artist. And, although none of these songs, except for one or two, can touch the success of her last album "Speak for Yourself," her new album is a compelling compilation for true Heap fans.

Those who only knew her from "Hide and Seek" (which was used in a pivotal moment of "The OC") or her remake of "Holding Out for a Hero" (when she was known as Frou Frou and featured at the end of "Shrek 2"), may not fully understand, nor want to, Heap's electronic music. Often known as the queen of the digital age, it's not for everyone, but her new album will be a success amongst those loyal to the artist and her weird but bril-

Heap uses beeps, digital beats and synthesizers mixed with real instruments to create her songs. And while it may seem odd at first, she manages to meld them into emotional masternices

On "Ellipse," a few songs stand out right away, most obviously "First Train Home," which is about as close to a pop song as you can get from Heap. Its inventive intro and mid-tempo beat opens the album, and it seems familiar in a way, like it could have been on 2005's "Speak for Yourself."

Heap's lyrics are smart, moving, and in some moments, her humor comes through in them. The upbeat
"Swoon's" bridge even seems to include a last-minute lyric change when she sings, "This is where I was going to sing your name, Over and over again, But I chickened out and I thought a minute, Cause I thought you probably wouldn't like it."

From the Irish feel of "Canvas" to the piano solo of "The Fire," Heap's album is filled with relaxing pieces that wrap around you like a warm blanket.

And although there's not much energy at the start of the album, about midway through, Heap hits her stride and brings forward the real showpieces.

One of those is "Tidal." In fact, I daresay it's the best song on the album, period. It starts out simply enough, a touch of flute here, a synthetic drumbeat there. And then sometimes there's a really strange sound, which resembles the noise made as Mario passes through one of those green tunnels in "Super Mario Bros." But it works.

The quiet, driving beat escalates through the song, then reverts to quiet again, only to slowly build up again. The last 25 seconds are intense and perfect, everything cumulating into the climax of the song and then suddenly stops.

About just being with someone in the moment, the lyrics of "Tidal" are superb. Heap sings "While we're here, let's see what happens, What we got, got, got to lose (what we got to lose), While we're tidal and flexed on a full moon. It'd be a sure, sure shame to not to."

It would also be a sure, sure shame for true Heap fans to miss "Ellipse."

Having a 'Tea for Shelley'

September parties help raise money for foundation his September, the Shelley A. Marshall Foundation is encouraging tea aficionados and friends of the foundation to host a "Tea for Shelley" and invite close friends and new friends to join them over a cup of tea and a plate of scones, tea sandwiches and treats.

If hosts/hostesses suggest a donation of $20 per person and host a tea party for five, they can raise $100 for the foundation as everyone enjoys a wonderful afternoon.

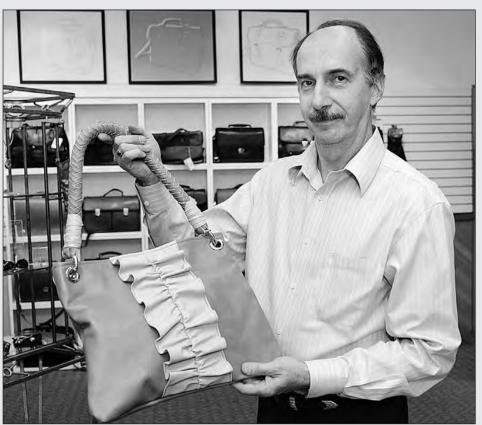

For Shelley Marshall, tea parties were a time for friends to gather away from the workday world for a few stolen moments of elegance and quiet conversation, a time when people could reconnect with friends, or make new friends, over a cup of tea and a plate of indulgent treats.

Through a "Tea for Shelley," friends will share those stolen moments, and at the same time raise funds that will help the foundation support its library programs for children, creative writing contests for high school students and tea parties for senior citizens.

If you are interested in hosting a "Tea for Shelley," please contact Phyllis Marshall, the foundation's Morgantown-area director, at (304) 599-9309 or (304) 290-9309, and she will provide you with an information packet that contains tea recommendations and brewing instructions; great recipes (including Shelley's Cucumber Sandwich recipe); a collection of tips for tea parties that have been gathered through the years; and a "Tea for Shelley" sign to hang on your door.

The foundation will also provide brochures that explain The Shelley A. Marshall Foundation and its programs, so you will be able to see what your donations will fund.

As a treat, each $20 donation will

Donn Marshall, who established The Shelley A. Marshall Foundation to honor his wife, who was lost in the Pentagon on 9/11, is excited about a "Tea for Shelley."

"I've often told the story of how, several months after Sept. 11, I was cleaning out our car and found one of Shelley's notepads," he said. "On the notepad, she had written: 'We have only a finite number of days on this earth — make them extraordinary and fill them with passion.' Those who participate in a 'Tea for Shelley' will be experiencing an extraordinary afternoon. Join us as we change the world, one person at a time."

The Shelley A. Marshall Foundation has been changing the world since Sept. 15, 2001, the day after authorities confirmed that Shelley had perished in the terrorist attack on the Pentagon.

Since that day, the foundation has sponsored almost 400 children's story hours at public libraries and schools, reaching more than 40,000 children and parents; endowed creative writing contests at three colleges and seven high schools, sparking the creativity of almost 800 young people; hosted 50-plus intergenerational tea parties at five nursing homes, touching more than 2,900 seniors and high school students; and sponsored five summer art workshop series, which have brought 50 promising high school artists together with prominent professional artists.

Diet and lack of exercise may fuel dog's bouts of the 'willies'

Q: I love Mabel, my 7-monthold Boxer puppy, but not when she goes berserk tearing through the house. She does this after exercising out in the yard. Her bouts of the 'willies' — which is what we call these crazy outbursts — also strike after she eats. How do we stop this behavior? — J.C., San Diego, Calif.

A: This problem is more common than you think. There may be several contributing factors to 'the willies,' says dog behavior consultant Liz Palika, author of "Puppy Love," (Wiley Publishing, Hoboken, N.J., 2009; $24.99). "For starters, is Mabel eating a cheapie food filled with too many grains?" Palika asks. "Carbohydrates are important, but look for sweet potato or other sources, aside from grains. Sometimes it's a matter of choosing a premium dog food, but still read the label first."

Palika says that merely allowing Mabel out in the yard doesn't necessarily mean she's getting much exercise. To insure she does exercise, interact with her; play a game of fetch. While a good old-fashioned walk offers only moderate exercise, it's wonderfully enriching to smell the 4-1-1 of every canine in the neighborhood.

While you're definitely not responsible for giving Mabel 'the willies,' the response by family members may have unknowingly trained her to go berserk even more often. Be careful to avoid rewarding your dog with what she perceives as a game of chase (either the kids racing after her in fun, or you following her, hollering in frustration). Palika sug-

Be a healthy Mountaineer

THE WVU FOOTBALL season is under way! In an effort to ensure fans have what it takes to cheer the Mountaineers on to a winning season, Bill Reger-Nash, Ed.D., of the WVU Department of Community Medicine, offers the following health tips:

Tackle your weight

If you're overweight, you have a greater risk for high blood pressure, diabetes, stroke and some forms of cancer. Your health care provider can help assess your risk factors and offer guidance to losing weight. Even modest weight loss can mean big health benefits.

Burn fat — not couches

Regardless of age, weight or athletic ability, exercise is good for you. At least 30 minutes of daily physical activity — such as walking, biking or swimming — can help you live longer and healthier. Exercise can relieve stress, anxiety and depression, and elevate mood. It can reduce the risk of heart disease, stroke, diabetes, high blood pressure, osteoporosis and several forms of cancer.

Build muscle strength

It's important to build muscle mass with strength training. Weight training helps burn calories, changes body composition, and strengthens bones and connective tissue. Consider adding pushups, sit-ups and squats to your exercise routine.

Keep it colorful

Variety is the spice of life, so ensure that your diet includes plenty of fruits and vegetables — at least five servings per day — as well as other healthy choices. Consider adding the following to your diet: cruciferous vegetables, like broccoli and cabbage; tomatoes; beans; garlic; salmon; blueberries; sweet potatoes; and spinach. Green tea and red wine may also offer some benefits.

Mountaineer Maniacs beware

While some stress can enhance performance, too much takes a mental and physical toll. Learn to manage stress levels to prevent anxiety, depression and other conditions. If you are feeling "stressed," talk with someone. Get whatever's bothering you off your chest. If you can't seem to shake the anxiety, seek professional help.

Kick the habit

Smoking is the primary cause of lung cancer, and lung cancer is the leading cause of all cancer deaths in the U.S. for men and women. If you're having trouble "kicking the habit," talk with your doctor. New prescription drugs can make quitting easier.

Practice sun sense Use sunscreen! Long

Use sunscreen! Long-term sun exposure can cause premature changes in the skin, including wrinkles. It can also increase the risk of cataracts and certain other eye problems, and suppress the immune system. The biggest risk associated with sun exposure is skin cancer.

Take a time out

Sleep deprivation can take a toll on your physical and emotional health. The results of not getting enough sleep can include decreased performance and alertness, memory and cognitive impairment, and poor quality of life. While stresses of daily life can impact sleep, some people may have undiagnosed sleep disorders. Talk with your doctor.

STEPHANIE BOCK is director of community relations for WVU Hospitals. This is one in a series of columns provided by WVU Hospitals and Mon Health Systems.

Like it or not, understanding of God comes from religion

In this column, I once told the story of a girl named Jennifer, who was being raised in an interfaith home. She asked The God Squad: "My daddy is Jewish and my mommy is Catholic and they did not raise me up to be anything. Do you know how I could get raised up to be something?"

In response, a reader wrote: "Dear Rabbi Gellman: Can't we use the one common denominator, God, to answer Jennifer's question? Why can't she be taught to only know a loving God, without the attachment of a religion? Why can't we separate religion from God? God and religion are not one. Religion is our downfall. God is above all that human stuff." — G., via god squadquestion@aol.com

A: Your question is important and commonly asked by spiritual seekers who want to find God but not through organized religion. They often call themselves "spiritual but not religious."

Let's begin by thinking about spirituality and strictly "spiritual" people. Does their position make sense? Yes and

no. I have no professional need to defend organized religion, even though I've given my life to organized Judaism (which is actually a contradiction in

I like spiritual seekers because they're independent and motivated to ask the big questions about the meaning of God and life and morality and salvation. The fact that they're trying to find their way to God along a path less traveled is terrific. They may teach me something, and they may ask me to teach them.

My belief, and the belief of Judaism, is that all righteous people will go to heaven (we call it The World to Come). Therefore, those who want to do good things in our broken world with their lives, I'm all for them, whether they follow their own way to God, are atheists, agnostics or some flavor in between. Just keep doing good things and God will be happy.

However, there are a few points I'd like to make for those who think they can throw out the bath water and not throw out the baby. Our understanding of God comes from organized religions. I prefer to call them the great wisdom traditions of the world. The oldest religions, and here I'm talking mainly about Judaism, Christianity and Islam, teach us about a God who created the world and created all people in God's image so we might learn that human life is sacred and the creation must be protected and nurtured.

Our moral codes were first written in the sacred texts of organized religions, and those moral codes, like not murdering and not stealing, have been reaffirmed by philosophers using reason alone. To accept these teachings without acknowledging their source is like pretending an apple didn't come from an apple tree. The tree carried the fruit into the world, just as organized religion carried the universal moral truths into the world. Out of fairness, let's hear it for the tree before we go munching on its fruit and pretending it came from the air

The other great gift of organized religion is the gift of sacred community. Life is not meant to be lived alone or even in the small confines of family. We need community, and religion gives us community where we can help others in need; pray together when we are week and gain strength from those who are strong; educate our children in the moral law and the traditions of our ancestors; and nurture the spirit of generosity and forgiveness, charity and benevolence that can so often elude us when we try to make life's journey alone.

Find the nearest soup kitchen or shelter in your community and my bet is it's run by some organized religious group. My favorite local example is the Interfaith Nutrition Network, run by my saintly friends Jean Kelly and Rob Kamerer. Without the help of organized churches, synagogues and mosques, their work to feed the hungry and clothe the naked would be impossible.

In the end, does the good done by organized religion overcome the perversions and distortions of organized religion that are also real? That question, dear friends, is above my pay grade. Just keep asking the big questions and doing good things.

Q: I respect everyone with different beliefs from mine and try not to discuss religion or politics with friends. However, I did talk about religion recently with a friend I see occasionally. To my surprise, she said she didn't believe in God or the Bible, knowing that I'm a Christian. She added that in this day and age, intelligent people think the Bible is just a collection of stories written by people without the knowledge we have today. I ended the conversation but felt hurt that she would say this. How would you have handled this situation?

A: Have her read my answer to the question No. 1. If that doesn't work, this person is not your frien, since she doesn't respect your beliefs — a basic duty of friendship. Let her go. I will be your friend. That way, your total number of friends will stay the same.

WVU's Lifetime Activities Program introduces new classes for all ages

Healthy Kids Club also available for private parties

The Lifetime Activities Program at the West Virginia University College of Physical Activity and Sport Sciences is offering a variety of fall classes for children and parents, along with new classes for adults. Fall classes run through Dec. 5. Parents are encouraged to register their children before the first day of class for each session. A registration form is available at lifetime-activities.org.

Classes involve land- or water-based activities for infants, babies, toddlers, preschool and school-age children, and are designed to promote active learning and healthy living.

"These activities will provide socialization opportunities and playful learning in a safe, developmentally appropriate environment," said Michelle Jeffrey, program coordinator. "This is a great opportunity for children of all ages to have fun this fall while learning healthy life skills. We encourage parents to sign their children up today due to class-size limitations."

Children can participate in various motor stimulation classes or splash-and-play pool activities available through the Lifetime Activities Program.

Family Splash

Family Splash offers an opportunity for parents and their children ages six months to 5 years to enjoy water-based exercise. This 45-minute class allows children and at least one adult partner to enjoy water play while increasing body movement and muscle coordination with the goal of beginning a lifelong habit of healthy activity. Children experience unstructured pool playtime to interact with others while gaining social skills.

WVU Lifetime Activities Program is offering several different swimming classes.

Schools, parents and groups can book a WVU Healthy Kids Club Celebration to celebrate birthdays, milestones, accomplishments or life in general. Group of up to 25 children spend two hours in the gym or pool at E. Moore Hall and enjoy age-appropriate games, songs and activities. Invitations, play leaders, lifeguards, trained teachers, a group photo and party favors are included.

"This class provides a great way for parents to spend time with children while socializing with other adults in the class," Jeffrey said.

Classes meet from 11-11:45 a.m. Saturdays, Sept. 12-Dec. 5, in Elizabeth Moore Hall pool on the downtown campus.

This fall, the Morgantown High School band will travel to New York City to march in the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade. The MHS Band has performed in the parade one other time — in 1963. That year, parade organizers were faced with an important decision, whether to cancel the event that was set to happen less than a week after President John F. Kennedy was assassinated or let it go on as planned. In the end, the parade did commence, and the MHS Band was able to participate.

His 1609 Voyage

Henry's Hudson

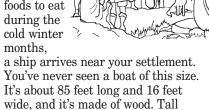

Can you imagine yourself as a young Native American boy or girl? You live on the East Coast of the United States in the early 1600s. Your family is part of a tribe called the Mohicans.

For food, your family catches fish and birds. You grow vegetables and hunt for nuts and fruits. Sometimes you trade items with other tribes.

Members of your tribe walk or use canoes on the rivers and ocean to move around.

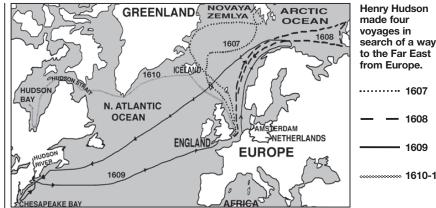

Strange sight

One day in early fall, as your family is storing foods to eat during the cold winter months, them. About 20 grown men come ashore. They look different from your family and friends. They don't have any women or children with them.

Looking for a route

The men on the ship were led by Henry Hudson, an English explorer. His ship the Half Moon had left Amsterdam, in the Netherlands, in April 1609 and arrived at the mouth of the Hudson River in early September. This voyage was the third of four trips Hudson made, in 1607, 1608, 1609 and 1610-11.

Earlier failures

In 1607, Hudson was looking for a way to get from Europe to Asia without sailing around the southern coast of Africa. People in Europe liked items brought from India and China, especially spices to help preserve food.

At first, Hudson thought he could sail right over the North Pole to get to the Far East. But the ice and freezing temperatures made him turn back. In 1608, he tried a route along the northern coast of Russia. When ice blocked this route, he turned toward North America. But his crew forced him to turn back toward England.

An offer from

Henry Hudson

Hudson lost his job with his English employer, The Muscovy Company. But soon, the Dutch East India Company offered to send him exploring again. They made him promise to sail around the north side of Novaya Zemlya a group of islands north of Russia, and if he could not find a passage, to return to Amsterdam immediately.

Other plans

Hudson wanted to explore North America. In 1608, another explorer, John Smith, had told Hudson he believed there was a Northwest Passage — a way to sail from the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific. Hudson was eager to find such a route.

Heading to North America was smaller than the English ship he had sailed before. He asked for a better ship, but his request was turned down.

Changing course

Hudson and his crew started north in April 1609. But the Dutch sailors on board didn't like to work in cold weather.

When the weather turned bad, Hudson decided to head west, toward North America. He promised his crew warmer weather and easier sailing, and they agreed.

Exploring America

The Half Moon reached the coast near modern Virginia in August 1609. On Sept. 2, Hudson spotted a large island. It was Manhattan Island, where part of New York City is today. Hudson noted a river flowing into the bay and thought it might be the passage he was looking for. The Native Americans in the area called the river Muhheakunnuk. which means "great waters constantly in motion." Today, we call it the Hudson River.

But after traveling about 150 miles up the river, Hudson had to turn around. The river became too shallow for the ship.

Hudson wanted to stay through the winter and set out again in the spring. The crew wanted to go back to Europe.

In November, the Half Moon sailed into the English port of Dartmouth.

Changing America

In the early 1600s, Dutch people had just become independent, or free, from Spain. They were trading and doing business with people from other countries. By doing so, the Netherlands was becoming a more powerful country. Dutch people lived in both cities and rural, or country, areas.

After Hudson's vovage

When the Half Moon returned to England, Hudson was arrested for sailing under the Dutch flag. The British didn't want the Dutch to gain any property in North America.

However, King James finally dropped the charges against Hudson. His ship and its contents were returned to Amsterdam in 1610, and he started planning another voyage on an English ship.

Changes for natives

European explorers brought many changes to the native people of North America, both good and bad.

Mohicans and other tribes were introduced to different animals, including cows, that provided new sources of food and hides.

The Europeans brought guns and gunpowder, giving Native Americans more ways to defend themselves.

Europeans also brought diseases that Native Americans had not seen before and had no natural defenses against.

No-sleepovers rule applies to Grandma, too

Q: I have been divorced for almost 20 years. My grandson is 8 and my granddaughter is 4. I have been in a relationship for a year and my grandchildren are used to seeing us together. I think my granddaughter is jealous of my boyfriend even though he has been good to her. She has hit him, said mean things to him when I'm not looking and even though we have had little talks about her behavior, she continues. I sometimes have the kids stay overnight at my house, and they usually sleep with me. How do I handle him sleeping with me when they are here?

A: We'll tell you the same thing we tell parents who have new love interests and want to know how to handle sleeping together in front of the kids don't do it unless you are confident the relationship has a future. Just because the kids are used to seeing you together, doesn't mean he will be a permanent fixture. And, since you imply he has a place of his own, we suggest he sleep there when the grandkids are around. If you marry or move in together, then there is a sense of permanency and that's when we would suggest you announce your intent to be together to your family including the grandkids.

Wallet-friendly ideas for the frugal gamer

GET MORE video game reviews and news in The Dominion Post on Mondays.

When I'm standing there in front of those locked-up display cases, longing to call the store's nerd warden over to release all the new video games into my custody, I can usually resist. Money and necessity bring me out of my fantasy and back into reality with a ratio of about 15/1.

Adding a mortgage and a recession to the equation, it becomes closer to 30/1.

But do we gamers really need to have the latest titles? I bet there are some of you out there who ride behind new console releases, playing the best of the best on slightly inferior hardware for hundreds — and maybe even thousands — of dollars cheaper than trying to stay caught up in an ever-expanding universe of content.

Regardless of sensible reasoning, real or perceived economic pressure has made some of the decisions for gamers anyway. A recent Associated Press story reported that the industry is in a sales slump, and both Sony and Microsoft plan to drop console

So, gamers, don't blame yourselves for failing to keep up with products in an extremely competitive and greedy industry. It's time to take a frugal approach to video gaming, one that demands you get every single dollar out of those fuming, overheated boxes underneath your television sets.

Here are some tips to keep you out of the dungeon of boredom and one step ahead of the collection agency ninjas:

Take a trip through video game history

Pull down the attic string or dig into the back of the closet to find that old console. If it still works, you might get misty-eyed thumbing your way through the classics.

This tip could prove useless for younger gamers who might not have a stockade of dust-collecting machines and cartridges, so I'd advise the youngsters to go online and play some of the coin-operated classics.

Gamers can find Web sites with free content, and you don't even have to download anything these games perform right inside the browser. While it may take a while to get used to keyboard controls, this option is worth the learning curve. The simplicity of titles like "Frogger" and "Pacman" still have value as casual games, as you don't need much prior knowledge or hand-eye coordination to get the frog to the lily pad.

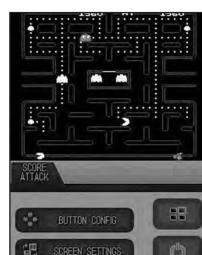

Utilize backward compatibility

You wouldn't be reading this column if you had played and completed every game released for your console's most-recent ancestor; you'd still be playing them. So, head to your local used game store and browse what's out there. Big box stores also have some copies of greatest hits titles out of the locked cases for fast moving sales.

I've even got some Nintendo GameCube titles still sitting on my shelf, waiting to be played. I never owned one, and although critics argue that it was Nintendo's worst system, it did host some decent games, completely new to me as a Wii owner. Playstation 3 owners have even more options to choose from, as their console reaches back to the days of 64-bit game play with the PS1.

Console-based downloads

While using this option can quickly add up, the maximum price for single game downloads doesn't come close the $50 price tag for a store-bought game. In addition to a collection of old favorites, small-time game developers have taken some initiative to get creative with the smaller, simpler tem-

One good way to save some cash, pull classics, such as "Pacman" (above) and "Frogger" out of retirement.

HIGH SCORE 0000000

Although it was also released as a computer game, "World of Goo," is a fantastic example of an addictive, cheap puzzle game download that can generate as much fun as any blockbuster

Trade, trade, trade

Remember all those $50 purchases that let you down? Now's the time to purge your collection of horrible movie-licensed games, multiple versions of "EA Sports" titles and boring RPGs for something new, exciting and hopefully worthwhile.

I recently got rid of "Wii Fit," with the Wii Balance Board and "Wii Music," — two pieces of software with a novelty expiration of about a month. I also shed "Boom Blox," with plans to purchase the sequel, and "de Blob," a fun, but monotonous platformer. My trade put me about $10 less than the cost of new copies of "Wii Sports Resort," and "Ghostbusters: The Video Game," so I paid up the difference. These titles might prove to be a flop too, but ghoul catching should prove a bit more entertaining than jamming out to "Yankee Doodle."

Revisit those unfinished games In the quest to keep up with the latest releases, most of us put our once new games aside to obsess about the new new titles. Guess what? That hurt little disc has feelings and plenty of play left in it. There are two approaches I use here: ■ Start anew. Sometimes, I just delete that old save file and give myself a fresh start. Since I've already been through the game to a point, it will serve as a needed refresher. The job might be a little tedious, but not nearly as frustrating as trying to drop in on a super-hard level when you've forgotten how to jump or walk around.

■ Get anal retentive. Sometimes, gamers can make it to an end screen without completing 100 percent of the content. Take an obsessive approach and try to unlock every single extra feature, no matter how lame. This works better depending upon the incentive, but the mission could prove extremely fulfilling.

Borrow it from a friend

While we all want the millionseller blockbusters, gamers do have different tastes. A group of gaming buddies could have wildly different libraries to sample from, so take a peak when you visit a friend. This option works much better than renting, as it's free. Your friends also don't charge late fees, in case you need a few more days to save the princess.

These tips might help when at home, but the glass case will still be a formidable challenge. If you're like me, you feel obligated to travel through the aisles whenever you're in a store.

Let's start running past the the glass, bumping into other unfortunate souls and breaking spending spells while saving ourselves.

Real estate transactions require lots of communication

Q: My husband and I are purchasing a house. We had it inspected and our Realtor did not get a copy of the report.

I am a little confused as to why not and how we missed the deadline in the contract — I know my Realtor left me a message one day and stated we needed to talk about the home inspection, but I couldn't get back to him that day. Now he is saying that I am at fault here.

Can you help us shed some light on this matter?

A: I don't believe anyone should point fingers of fault in the middle of a real estate transaction.

I think that there are quite a few things I can shed some light on for you, though.

First and foremost, you, as the buyer, are purchasing the home inspection and therefore it belongs to you. Most all inspectors will only send you a copy of the report and findings unless you have requested that your Realtor make the appointment for you, or give direct permission and/or request for the report to also be cc'd to your Realtor.

You would have had to supply your Realtor's e-mail address upon making your appointment if this was the case. It is hard for Realtors to do their job without seeing the home inspection report and as I have mention the past, you need to feel comfortable enough with your Realtor to share everything with him or her.

The contract gave a date to have any request for repairs as well as the summary page of the report given to the seller's Realtor, and therefore the sellers. Your Realtor would have filled in this date and is usually about two weeks from signing of the contract, and generally no more than three weeks to a month. A four week period is not customary unless it is a 60-day closing. Most sellers' agents will not accept a term this long on a contingency.

As for your Realtor calling you, it is important to return calls as soon as you receive them to guarantee that you do not miss important dates or deadlines. I can assure you that your Realtor is not calling to bother you, but needs information that he can only gather from you.

On the other hand, technology, as grand as it is, can be flawed. Don't leave a message and assume that it was received when working on a deadline.

I'm sorry that your deadline was missed. You can always have your Realtor go to the sellers' Realtor and request an extension, but the ball is now in their court as to whether or not they will allow more time due to the confusion.

home purchase.

Potential homebuyers can shop around for a Realtor and mortgage loan officer, but once professional relationships are established and a loan is preapproved, the process starts to get confusing.

"The biggest thing is being informed and educating yourself in the process," said Traci Aberegg, a Realtor with KLM Properties.

Information indeed counts, as every state has different rules and regulations concerning the buying and selling of real estate. In West Virginia, each county has different laws concerning homebuying programs.

This two-part guide, compiled from The Dominion Post's interviews with real estate professionals, will break down the homebuying process and provide the basic knowledge any potential homebuyer will need to begin and end the endeavor.

Making an offer

Aberegg said once the buyer finds a property he/she hopes to purchase, they must present a the property — a figure determined by a comparison of selling prices of similar homes in the area with the help of the buyer's Realtor.

The offer is generally lower than the seller's asking price and negotiations between the seller and buyer usually take place before an offer is accepted. Buyers also put down earnest money to show an offer of good faith and make it official. At this point, all parties sign a sales contract, complete with several contingencies that must be met.

Now, the buyer can officially apply for the mortgage loan.

Applying for a loan

Despite loan pre-approval, Darlene Dunn, a mortgage loan officer at BB&T, said the buyer must fill out a loan application with the lending institution.

Different lenders will have different requirements, but at BB&T, the buyer will need to provide addresses for the previous two years, proof of employment for the previous two years, pay stubs for the previous month and proof that the buyer has the funds for the down payment, for example, bank account records or stock certificates).

More help for potential homeowners

The Fairmont/Morgantown Housing Authority offers a free homebuyer education class. For more information about the class, contact Donna Lane at (304) 363-0860 ext. 127 or dlane@fmhousing.com. Potential buyers can also learn about mortgage loan programs through the West Virginia Housing Development Fund's Web site: wvhdf.com.

In the case of a gifted down payment, the buyer must provide a copy of a statement or letter of gift.

Several programs exist which allow eligible buyers to pay a down payment of less than 20 percent of the total home price — the typical amount of a downpayment. In some cases, buyers can get 100 percent financing on the

This is where the expertise of a professional is vital. Dunn said her job is to work out the details so that her clients get the appropriate loan for how much they want to spend monthly. She also pointed out that "how much [the client] qualifies for is different then how much [the client] may want to pay."

Inspecting the property

According to Dunn, lenders do not require a structural inspection, but it is strongly recommended that the buyer order one. She said it's roughly a $300-$400 investment that will let the buyer know if the home he/she wants to purchase is structurally sound.

Again, Dunn said professionals prove to be helpful in this aspect. The buyer will generally share inspection reports with his/her Realtor, and if any minor problems come up during the inspection, the buyer's Realtor can help renegotiate the terms of the sale.

Aberegg said buyers might also want other inspections performed, including a radon a septic system inspection depending on the property's location. All inspections are out-of-pocket expenses, meaning that they are not included in the loan amount.

If there are major problems discovered during the inspection, Aberegg said the buyer has the right to withdraw from the contract.

Dunn added that the loan approval is for a monetary amount, not a specific property. This means that if the buyer chooses to search for a different home, the loan approval will stay intact.

After any repairs are made, Aberegg recommended a second inspection to ensure that the property is in agreed-upon condition.

Appraising the property

After the home passes inspection, the lender will order an appraisal to assess the value of the property.

Dunn said the appraisal is necessary for the lender to determine the appropriate value of the home and ensure that the mortgage loan is for the correct amount. Lenders require appraisals, and the service usually costs about $400 and is included in the closing costs.

Make an electric water heater last with efficient improvements

REAL ESTATE

Dear Jim: My electric water heater is 18 years old, but still works and makes enough hot water. I want to reduce my water heating costs. What can I do to make my water heating more efficient other than installing a new one?

— Sandi T.

Dear Sandi: New water heaters are more energy efficient than old ones, but there is no need to replace an old one which is not leaking.

The electric water heater in my own house is 22 years old and still going strong. I have made some improvements to it so it is more efficient than when it was new. Electric water heaters are simple devices.

There generally are two electric resistance heating elements, top and bottom, in the water tank. The bottom one is used the most to keep the tank water hot. When the tank starts to run out of hot water, for example after many long showers, the top element comes on instead to supply hot water faster.

JAMES T.

From the standpoint of using electricity to heat the water, all electric water heaters, even the old ones, have nearly 100-percent heating efficiency.

The differences in the overall efficiency and your water heating costs are determined by how much heat is lost from the water tank (called standby losses).

With old water heater tanks, the lower heating element has to come on often just to make up the heat lost through the poor insula-and the outer skin.

The efficiency of most older water heaters can be increased by adding tank insulation. You can easily test your water heater tank to see if it needs more insulation. Put your hand on the water heater tank near the top and then on the top. It will probably be warm which indicates it is losing heat.

You can purchase water heater insulating jackets at most home center stores. These wrap around the tank and cover the top.

I used old fiberglass batt wall insulation to wrap my water heater. I put the paper vapor barrier to the outside and covered this with construction foil to also block radiant heat loss.

Your water heater probably does not have heat trap fittings in the inlet and outlet pipes as new water heaters do.

Hot water naturally circulates up into the pipes above the water heater. There, it loses heat and drops back down. Put tubular foam insulation over the pipes immediately above the tank or have heat trap fittings installed. Install a water heater timer to switch it off, typically during the daytime when away working, and back on in the evening. The water will stay warm enough for most tasks. Set the thermostats under the heating element covers so the water is about 120 degrees at the kitchen faucet.

Check with your utility company about incentive programs if you allow them to install a timer which they can control during peak usage periods. Every several months, drain a gallon of water from the valve at the bottom of the tank to flush out sediment.

Collectors will pay more for celluloid toys with bizarre attributes

FOR MORE information on antiques, collectibles and free price information, visit kovels.com.

TWENTIETH-CENTURY IRON TOYS and tin toys have been collected for generations, and many books and articles have been written about the toys and their makers. But celluloid toys, which date from the late 1800s into the 1950s (when plastic became popular), were made in many European countries, Japan and the United States. Although celluloid is flammable and dents, cracks and splits easily, it was used to make dolls and other toys because it was inexpensive but could be decorated with bright colors and molded into complicated shapes. One of the most popular celluloid toys in the United States was the "Boopie," also called a "carnival doll." She had a potbelly, large, round eyes and wavy hair, and looked a little like a Kewpie and a little like Betty Boop. These dolls, made in Japan, originally sold for a few cents apiece. They often were given as prizes at amusement parks, carnivals and fairs. Today, a single doll can sell for $10 to $50. Collectors prefer rare, odd-looking dolls dolls that look like cartoon characters, exotic animals or Santa

Q: Could you tell me when the practice of using metal staples to repair china was discontinued?

A: Most repairers today use modern glues and cements, but — believe it or not — there still are repairers who use metal rivets (they're not really staples) to repair ceramics. A hole is drilled in each broken part, and a rivet is inserted and then cemented in place to hold the parts together. The practice was in general use in China by the 17th century, but most riveted pieces collectors come across today were repaired in Europe or the United States during the Victorian era. Making rivet repairs takes a lot of skill. While most collectors consider the repairs unsightly and unnecessary, some collect riveted pieces as oddities.

"Mr. Bighead" is a Japanese celluloid toy made before World War II. He is said to represent an American, while the insect on his head represents Japan. His eyes and mouth move. The mint in-the-box toy sold at Keith Spurgeon's Mosby & Co. Auctions in Frederick, Md., for $3,191.

Q: I have a chifforobe made by the Joseph Peters Furniture Co. of St. Louis. What can you tell me about this company?

A: Joseph Peters, an immigrant from Prussia, founded his furniture company in St. Louis in 1855. At first he specialized in making bureaus and cabinets, but the business thrived, and by 1908 the company was operating 50 factories and employed more than 7,000 people. It remained in business at least into the 1930s.

Q: Does anyone remember the game "Peter Coddles Goes to Town"? It consisted of a printed story with open spaces for new words or phrases to finish a sentence. A player would read the story, and players would add words or phrases to the story from their individual cards. The random sentence combinations were hilarious, and it was a great reading experience for younger kids.

A: Peter Coddle is based on a "literary puzzle" game in the book "Jessie; Or, Trying to Be Somebody," published by Gould & Lincoln in 1858. In the story, Peter was supposed to be an 18-year-old, but he usually is pictured on game boxes as an older country bumpkin visiting a big city. Several different Peter Coddle games were made in the late 1800s until at least the 1930s. One of the most popular is "Peter Coddle's Trip to New York," which was made in various versions by, among others, Parker Brothers in 1888, McLoughlin Brothers and J.H. Singer in the 1890s and Milton Bradley in 1925.

Most are "fill-in-the-blank" card games like yours, but there also is a board-game version. The title may spell Peter's last name "Coddle" or "Coddles." Some makers used several different boxes with completely different pictures of Peter. Occasionally these games show up on the Internet or in a group of games at an auction. Value depends on age, condition and box cover. Most games sell for less than $100. Newer versions sell for $25-$50.

Bedbugs bring exterminators together for summit

BY MARK RAHNER The Seattle Times (MCT)

From Conan O'Brien on Monday's "Tonight Show": "Former President Clinton recently had to clear out of his office for a few days because it's infested with bedbugs. Experts are calling it the 500th reason President Clinton shouldn't be allowed to have a bed in his office." Like the joke, the bedbugs suck. But they suck your blood. And their resurgence prompted experts and exterminators to hold a "Bed Bug Summit" at the Westin Seattle last week. Representatives from hotels, hospitals, pest-control companies and the like attended. Hosted by the National Pest Management Association, it's one of several gatherings sparked by one the Environmental Protection Agency held in April to address the issue, which is preventing a growing number of people from sleeping tight

"We call them the new flea," said Daniel Valenti, Terminix International's Seattle branch manager. "Thev're tenacious creatures. They can survive six months without feeding and they're extremely difficult to get rid of."

While nobody seems able to quantify the problem, Valenti said, "Two or three years ago, I'd be lucky to get one bedbug call in a month. Now in my branch alone, I may get two dozen." Why bedbugs in 2009?

Bedbugs had virtually disappeared by the '50s and '60s after the advent of DDT and other pesticides, as well as increased cleanliness standards, Washington State University entomology professor Rich Zack explained. But DDT and other pesticides have been banned, and "a lot of the pesticides we developed don't work any longer. The bedbugs have become resistant to them.'

Another cause: travel. Some have pointed to the dollar's lower value and the foreign tourists it has drawn. In any case, Zack said, "bedbugs are very easily transported from one area to another. Someone who has an infestation in a dorm, if they take things with them such as suitcases or shoes, there's a very good chance bedbugs will be in that suitcase or their clothing.

"There is a true resurgence going on and it is becoming a significant problem again," Zack said.

The things are essentially little vampires. Roughly the size of a tick, they hide during the day, mainly in mattresses and behind headboards. At night, they come out to feed on you.

Instead of a pair of puncture wounds on the neck, these guys typically leave little red welts on your skin and tiny droplets of dried blood on your sheets - which compounds the rudeness, as those droplets are defecation from your blood, which has passed through them as they left. The fact that a former president had a bedbug problem shows that the insects are found in all walks of life, said Dr. Dan Suomi, pest-control-operator specialist for the Washington State Department of Agriculture. "This is not a pest that is restricted to any one income class. Anyone can get them because we interact in our travels and day-to-day activities."

No need to sleep sitting up yet, though. Here's what to do if you think you've got 'em:

"Don't overreact, Soumi said. "Don't grab the first can of pesticide or set off 10 bug bombs inside your house because that's not going to work."

If you call an exterminator — or "commercial applicator" in the business of applying pesticides — make sure it's someone licensed with the Dept. of Agriculture.

As someone in the business of profiting from the problem, even Seattle Terminix commercial-branch service manager Troy Kleghorn advised against getting drained: "Get at least three bids, same as you would a car repair. Don't settle for just one person."

HOME ENERGY Q&A

Q: We were shopping for a new refrigerator recently and the literature with every one of them said they were energy efficient. Can this be true? If so, is there a way to pick the best one in terms of energy use?

A: Thanks to updates to federal energy appliance standards, all of today's major home appliances do use much less energy than did those of several years ago. If you've got a product you use often like a refrigerator, washing machine or other major home appliance that is 10 to 15 years old or more, you'll probably offset the complete purchase price of a new one by saving enough money on its energy use in the coming years.

Most of today's major home appliances must meet federal standards. You can tell exactly how they compare with other models by looking at the information on the yellow EnergyGuide labels.

Fixit: Garage can become office for little cost But taking this a step fur-

Star Tribune (Minneapolis) (MCT)

Q: My son moved home from college and wants to establish our detached, unheated, uninsulated garage as his work space. We are on a tight budget and very short on space, so the garage might be a good option. What can be done to set up the garage as a safe, comfortable work environment on a budget?

A: I'm going to assume he's looking for office space, that he won't be sharing this space with a vehicle and that this is temporary. In other words, you don't want to permanently change the garage into a "guest space."

In that case, use during the warmer months isn't too complicated. Once the garage has been cleaned out, open the door (and window if there is one) for ventilation. Use a fan. Remember that items such as lawn and garden chemicals, lawn mowers, and paint and staining materials can contaminate air. You'll want to remove or secure these items to minimize any problems.

In colder months, you'll have a heating issue. You can use a portable heater. Do not use a fuel-burning one such as a kerosene heater. Realize that it will be expensive to try to heat an uninsulated space. Consider those space heaters (infrared-style heaters) that warm objects around the heater and not the whole space.

ther — framing the walls and ceiling, adding insulation and wallboard and improving the lighting and electricity to handle computers, etc. — would make the garage a much more pleasant place to work. It would also cost more money. If you have someone in your circle of friends, family and neighbors who might be willing to help with the labor, then you'd just need to pay for the materials, and maybe feeding the help!

You'll want to run any construction plans past your local building official to make sure you stay legal. You likely will need a permit. Also, it's a good idea to look at books (check the library), go online or even ask your local building official for some pointers.

HOME IMPROVEMENT Q&A

Q: I recently purchased a gas heater. Lalso own a generator. The furnace installer told me that if I used the generator to power the heater, I could blow out a circuit panel on the heater. The guy told me that I could get something to install on the heater that would make it possible to run the heater with the generator. Is that true? Where can I find one of those things?

A: Today's heaters can be temperamental, but they also cannot be asked to do things for which they were never designed. It might have saved you a lot of time after the fact if you had asked about hooking up your generator to the heater when you were shopping for the new one. I would contact the manufacturer of the heater directly to see if it could provide the specifications, including the make and model, of the device you would need to make one work with the other.

Generators are often asked to do more than they are designed to do, and also can be misused. Is this a whole-house generator we are talking about? Then perhaps the generator is easily able to operate the heater if the power goes out. Contact the generator manufacturer as well to make absolutely certain that the heater-maker recommendations fit your machine.

Q: Six or seven years ago, we had a screened-in porch and deck built. It's well built, but not particularly well finished. The builder used 2-by-6inch boards instead of deck boards for the floor. Some of the boards are warping, knots are falling out, and one even continues to bleed sap. Is it possible to place deck boards on top of the 2-by-6's to make it more appealing? If not, what other possibilities are there?

A: Well, there's strength in 2by-6's, but deck boards would have been better, easier to maintain, and longer lasting.

Say you do put deck boards on top of the 2-by-6's to renew the look of the floor. If you have problems with what's underneath, what you put on top will probably be affected.

I'd remove the 2-by-6's and replace them with Trex or some other composite, low-maintenance product that would probably stand up to wear better and need little attention.

Man grows gigantic tobacco plants in his backyard

BY TERI MADDOX

McClatchy Newspapers (MCT)

BELLEVILLE, Ill. — Al Brierly watched his father and grandfather toil on their Kentucky tobacco farms, so he wanted nothing to do with the family business after being discharged from the Army in the early '50s.

Nearly 60 years later, the Belleville, Ill., retiree is giddy with excitement about four tobacco plants growing in his backyard.

"He sits out here [at a patio table] and drinks his coffee and admires his tobacco plant every morning," said Elaine Brierly, his wife of 52 years. "That's my competition. He doesn't sit with me in the kitchen anymore.

Elaine was referring to one plant in particular that towers above the rest. It's more than 10 feet tall with platter-size green leaves and dainty pink and white flowers shooting from the top.

"Everybody who sees it wants a seed," said Al, 83, a retired machineshop foreman with International Lighting Manufacturing Co. "It's got a beautiful bloom on it.

Tobacco cultivation originated in the tropics, but today it's grown in subtropical and temperate regions. Most tobacco in the United States is grown in North Carolina, Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia and South Carolina. Al got reacquainted with tobacco last May, when he and Elaine traveled to Kentucky to visit family. His nephew's son, Charles Sparks, gave him five small plants.

"I just wanted to see if it would grow," said Al, who gave one plant to a neighbor and put the rest in his flower garden, under the watchful eye of a Madonna statue.

daughters and five grandchildren. Family ties to tobacco date back to 1870, when Al's grandparents, Robert and Rebecca Brierly, married and began farming near Carlisle, Ky.

"When they took up housekeeping, they carried all their belongings in a wash tub, and they had a shotgun and a dog," Al said. "And when [Robert] died in the middle 1930s, he willed each of his seven children a 100-acre farm. He did very good for not having anything when he started.'

Al's parents, Arthur and Bessie Brierly, continued the family tradition. He remembers his father making cigars by rolling leaves full of shredded tobacco around wires that were pulled out to create air pas-

Arthur sold his farm in the early 1950s. His children wanted to pursue other employment.

"[Tobacco farming] is hard work, really hard work," Al said. "It's not that I'm lazy, but there are easier ways to make a living.

Al smoked a pipe until 1991, when he suffered a heart attack. Now he enjoys a cigar about once a

Al can't wait to make cigars with his own tobacco after harvesting it at the end of September. He'll hang leaves to dry under an awning, then wait for a good rain to make them damp and pliable.

"That [plant] is his pride and joy," his wife said.

Grassless in Texas: Organic gardener goes for natural, drought-tolerant look

BY MARIANA GREENE

The Dallas Morning News (MCT)

DALLAS — The very day that Barbara Young's grown daughter remonstrated her for the informal look of her mother's wildflower plot in the front yard — "Mother, your yard looks terrible. What are you thinking?" — Young won yard of the month.

Young, 69, has no qualms about giving her imagination full run and is unencumbered by thoughts of whether the neighbors or her daughter will approve of her exuberant landscape choices.

In Lakewood, a Dallas neighborhood of green lawns and foundation shrubbery, there's no missing the Young house. There's not a blade of turf grass in the front yard. An old French wirework gazebo spins its lacy flourishes like a spider web, and a French wine-bottle dryer has new life as a tiered metal fountain.

Young, who prefers to be called

Babs, has always been a gardener. But five years ago she converted to sustainable, organic practices after she completed the Dallas County Master Gardener curriculum and began volunteering at Texas Discovery Gardens, an early adapter of organic principles. She captures rainwater and bans the use of pesticides and chemical fertilizers on her property. She extols the virtues of permeable surfaces over pavement. She plants drought-tolerant native and adapted species. She can rattle off statistics like a hydrological engineer: "For every inch it rains, you get one half-gallon of water per square foot of roof.'

She connects a hose to her rain barrels to water plants, but she says she rarely has to do even that. A gravel driveway and parking pad and decomposed granite paths soak up rain and slowly release moisture to adjacent plants, she says. She also has worked large amounts of expanded shale and compost into her planting beds, allowing rain to percolate through soil layers instead of sheeting off the native heavy clay. Even during 100-degree days, she turns on her soaker hoses only twice a week to irrigate flowers.

Young is going for a relaxed, informal look on her property, with its California-style house and redtile roof. She selects native perennials, ground covers and shrubs for their drought tolerance, including beautyberry, vitex, Turk's cap, Maximilian sunflowers, Joe-Pye weed, cowpen daisies, salvias and monardas. She also has a culinary herb garden flourishing in the front yard.

The back of Young's property steeply slopes down to a creek. She has terraced it to create flower beds; a succulent garden; easy, level walkways; a bog garden; and a recirculating water feature she calls Babbling Babs' Brook. ("Because I talk so much.")

She says she has learned a lot by hanging out at Fair Park's Texas Discovery Gardens. She purchased many of her garden plants at the public garden's sales (the fall sale is Nov. 7), which focus on native and adapted species that attract butterflies, hummingbirds and beneficial insects.

It was there that she met Michael Bosco, founder of Soils Alive, a Dallas-based organic lawn and landscape fertilization provider. Young swears by the company's liquid compost extract, which is sprayed on her landscape at regular intervals. Even though she has no lawn to keep lush, neighbors have followed her example and use the service on their turf and flower beds.

"My neighbors' lawns are beautiful," Young says. The extract is a blend of beneficial bacteria, humates and trace elements. It smells like fish

"The more you are around these people, the more you learn," Young says. The master gardener classes taught her the tenets of sustainable gardening, she says, but the program does not stress organic practices. "They use chemicals, you know. But I can't imagine myself ever using chemicals. Sluggo is the only thing I use, to kill snails." (Sluggo is considered an organic product.) Young prescribes spraying peppermint oil on aphids and applying a permanent ring of horticultural cornmeal around roses to prevent blackspot and other soil-borne diseases. She also has first-hand knowledge of the cornmeal curing toenail fungus, but that's another story.

She says her property is not bothered by weeds, fungi or insect pests now that she's been practicing organic methods. Instead, she boasts of dragonflies, bees, owls, lizards and garden snakes.

McMansions are out; affordable shelter is in

BY JEAN PATTESON

The Orlando Sentinel (MCT)

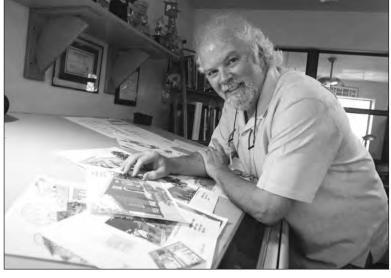

ORLANDO, Fla. — Ed Binkley has designed many costly mansions in his day, including a concept home for Tiger Woods. Now he is turning his attention to homes that are small but comfortable, affordable and green.

As the McMansion boom goes bust, "the focus is moving toward high-density, single-family houses on small lots," said Binkley, an architect who recently left BSB Design in Orlando, Fla., to launch his own company, Ed Binkley Design, in Oviedo, Fla.

The plans and sketches on the drawing board in his home office show cottages and duplexes in a variety of architectural styles. The designs in his Shelter Series range in size from 600 square feet to a little more than 900 square feet. Each features flexible spaces that can be used for cooking, eating, living and sleeping.

Four units could be fitted onto a 70-by-120-foot lot, he said.

This fall, he plans to build his first model home, in a partnership with Kimmel Lumber, in Venice, Fla. He estimates the cost will be a modest $50 per square foot, or about $24,000 for the smallest design.

Architect Ed Binkley is developing a concept house that is compact, green and affordable. He does works in his home near Oviedo, Fla.

He also is meeting with builders and developers, with an eye to erecting models in Sarasota and Sanford.

"I picture them incorporating parking for a Smart Car and Ikeatype fixtures," he said.

Binkley envisions his compact houses in a variety of settings, including on urban in-fill sites and suburban cul-de-sacs. The units also could serve as graduate-student housing on college campuses or as backyard guest houses or resort-area cabins, he said. Or as first homes for newlyweds, retirement homes for empty-nesters or relief housing for victims of natural disasters such as hurricanes.

"I've long been interested in smaller, affordable housing," said Binkley, who won a national competition for a Habitat for Humanity house he designed in Yonkers, N.Y., in 1998. "How small can a space be, and still be flexible and livable? It has a lot to do with volume and light. I've created sloped ceilings to add volume, and big windows for light."

He admits the lack of storage space might be a turnoff to some people: "But the less storage, the less stuff. We all have too much stuff.'

Created from pre-ut and numbered SIPs (Structural Insulated Panels) and precolored fibercement Hardie Siding, the houses can be assembled rapidly onsite, producing little waste. And the panelized system can easily be expanded in eight-foot increments.

The houses would be energy-efficient "because they're so tight," he said.

The 8-inch-thick roof panels would have an R-36 value, compared with the industry requirement of R-19. (The R-value is a measure of a material's heat-conductivity. The higher the value, the better the insulation.) Combine that with insulated walls and low-E windows, and you've got a "sealed system," he said.

The small size would eliminate the need for much air-conditioning duct work. Most electrical conduits would be external. And solar or point-of-service hot water could be an option. For more details, go to Binkley's Web site, edbinkleydesign.com.

For homes like these to be built, "We need more flexibility with zoning laws. Governments need to release some regulations to make building quicker and easier," said Binkley. "Then all I'd need is the nerve to just do it.'

Succulents take home top honors

McClatchy-Tribune News Service (MCT

Given the recent economic conditions, there has been a lot of talk of "bean counters." It was no different at the Hot to Trot Pot Competition in Hattiesburg, Miss. Beans were literally counted, and a kaleidoscope of colorful succulents earned the most.

The Mississippi Nursery and Landscape Association created the first Hot to Trot Pot Competition at this year's Hattiesburg Garden and Patio Show, a friendly competition showcasing Mississippi's best mixed container designers.

There were several entries, and the public was invited to be the judge. Every participant got a bean when entering the show. They were asked to place their bean in the crystal jar next to their favorite contest entry. Their first inclination was to vote for the flowers they simply liked best, but they were always drawn back to a container of succulents, and in went the beans.

This year's showing was impressive. There was an incredibly large container with a Japanese maple as the thriller plant and several pots of breathtaking tropicals. There were even some colorful combinations that would have made Monet proud. But the real stunner was a container of succulents by Thomas Keith of The Flower Bed Nursery in Lumberton, Miss.

The succulent container winner was a surprise to many of us horticulturists. We knew the succulent trend was out there but weren't sure whether the trend could win over the gardening public. We found that the answer was a resounding "yes."

Adding more lighting can change how your home looks

BY CRISTINA BOLLING

McClatchy Newspapers (MCT)

CHARLOTTE, N.C. - Looking for a fast and inexpensive way to transform a room in your home? The answer may be as easy as turning on a light. Changing the lighting in living spaces can make them seem warmer and cozier and relaxing.

"People spend the most time in their homes at night, when the lights are on," said Hans Joubert, owner of Lighting & Bulbs

We talked to lighting specialists and interior design experts around the region for ideas that can have a big impact around the house.

Because rooms have many functions, it's important to have layers of light. In a family room, for example, recessed lighting overhead can provide good general light, but won't be enough for tasks like reading. Lamps and wall sconces give off more targeted lighting.

When watching TV, avoid screen glare by turning off the overhead lighting and turning on wall sconces. Picture lights over artwork - many run on batteries and are a snap to install - are also good for spotlighting artwork and adding low-level light for a cozy feel.

When to change your business classification

Q: I started a small business a few years ago. Since then, it's grown larger than I anticipated. When should you change from a sole proprietorship to something else? — Mike

A: I would incorporate the business into a Sub-S Corp when it becomes large enough that liability and lawsuits are a concern, especially if you're in a business that is litigious in nature. I ran my company as a sole proprietorship for a few years, but once we grew to 20 or 30 team members and saw the potential for bad things to happen, we changed to a Sub-S.

Incorporating is also a good idea if you're worried about protecting your personal assets. If you're worth a few million and decide to open a business, the last thing you want is for somebody to sue you and take all your money because they fell down on your property and bumped their head. You can keep that from happening by standing behind what lawyers call "the corporate veil."

Make sure you've got liability insurance and good basic business insurance in place, too. A corporate veil is always a good idea once you've got some wealth or your company starts to generate a lot of money.

Q: We've always gone to church and given our tithe, but recently we've decided it's time to find a more grounded place to worship. During this time should we continue to give to our current church, or give to a charity instead? Does God really care where we give this money? — Amanda

A: I appreciate that you take the tithe and giving very seriously, but I doubt that God is wringing His hands and worrying about the situation. I mean, it's not like he needs the money. Giving isn't about making a deposit into God's bank account or building up brownie points, and tithing isn't a salvation issue, either. It's about changing our hearts and our minds. It's about being a little less selfish and a little more Christ-like. I think it makes God smile when we put other people's needs ahead of our own wants and desires.

There are some pretty strong indications in scripture that a tithe — which is a tenth of your income — should go to your local church. So I'm not sure that a generic charity is the answer in this situation. I've had times in my life when I changed churches, and in the periods when I didn't have a church home I'd write out the checks just like normal, but leave the "pay to the order of" portion blank. This way, the money was already accounted for in my mind and in my checkbook. Then, when I found a place I really liked, I'd complete the checks and give them to that church.

Honestly, Amanda, I think you'd be okay continuing to tithe to your current place of worship until you find a new church home. It would probably be okay, too, if you did what I did, or gave your tithe to one of the churches you visit while you're looking. God's not going to whack you on a technicality like that, and throw you in the penalty box. It's all about learning to be a giver.

Sustainu: Clothing with a cause

BY EMILY EVERETT

For The Dominion Pos

SustainU claims to make clothing apparel that's environmentally, economically and socially responsible. How so?

According to Chris Yura, founder and owner, the operation focuses on two alterations that veer away from conventional clothing production: changing the fiber and the labor used to make their clothing.

All SustainU clothing is made from domestic recycled materials, which results in a reduction in landfill waste, according to Yura. Other benefits include eliminating virgin crude oil for creating new fiber and limiting the use of chemical pollutants most alternatives use during production.

Economically, SustainU makes its impact by producing its entire product with domestic workers, something that Anne Bowling, SustainU's public relations representative, said doesn't happen often.

"Domestic production is so rare in the textile industry. Having it centered on the east coast, especially out of West Virginia, is pretty rare," said Bowling said.

Yura founded SustainU almost two years ago, with an idea to make an impact through a group that demands to be heard: college students.

"Through my experience in the fashion industry I got to see first-hand that these printing labels couldn't justify the prices people were paying for these garments. I thought there had to be a better way to socially impact people through apparel, and what better demographic to target than college students?" he said. "They're very vocal; they're about to go out into the world and make an impact."

Currently, SustainU offers collegiate and blank apparel for groups, events or organizations. WVU and Marshall are the first two colleges for which the company has acquired licensure — only fitting considering the company is based out of Morgantown.

"I wanted West Virginia to be the face of this company. I was born and raised here, and proud of West Virginia," Yura said.

SustainU only requires 130 transport miles from yarn creation to a finished article of clothing.

"Our goal is to create yarn, knit and finish out apparel in under 200 miles," Yura said. "This supports local small business and eliminates a lot of transportation emissions."

Bowling added that SustainU's synthetic fabrics aim to outlast conventional clothing.

"Two 2-liter plastic bottles can make one T-shirt," she said. "Plastic can be so damaging, so making clothing out of it instead of disposing it has a positive impact."

WVU students can look for SustainU apparel in their bookstores this fall. Fraternities, sororities, clubs and any organization in between can use SustainU's customized clothing services as well.

"It's a collegiate brand that offers the same style product as collegiate leaders. It's relevant," Yura said. "We're un-greening the green. We're making it relevant to all people, not just the eco-friendly. It is activism-based apparel but styles are relevant, up to date, cool, in style. We want to be viewed as a cool brand with purpose behind it.

Adventure West Virginia was the first organization to purchase customized T-shirts from the company. Lynnmarie Kuntz, office administrator, was pleased with the finished product.

"They wash really nice. I'm very picky and I didn't want to dry it because I was afraid it would shrink," she said. "I hung it to dry and it didn't need to be ironed or anything. The fabric is light and breathes great, too."

Upon viewing SustainU's web site, www.sustainurclothing.com, visitors are invited to make the "I Will SustainU" Pledge — or ways for each individual to begin (or continue) taking steps to make the world more sustainable. An electronic form can be filled out to explain what motivated each person to make their pledge.

"Our main focus is letting people become aware of how easily they can control and contribute to the outcome of our earth. People buy college T-shirts all the time. Traditional cotton T-shirts are terrible for the environment," Yura said. "We're focusing on making our items stylish and trendy which makes it a very easy choice that impacts the environment because you're buying a T-shirt you'd probably buy anyway. We don't want to just be seen from an activist standpoint."

Upended workers take courses for a new life course

McClatchy Newspapers (MCT)

CONCORD, N.C. — Henry Wehner likes to plan things. When he began working for Philip Morris USA in early 2006, he had a vision for the next decade.

He would advance at his goodpaying job at the cigarette factory in Concord and use some of his salary to help buy a house while stashing money away for his kids' college funds.

But that path was upended in mid-2007 when the company announced it would close the plant and consolidate operations into its Richmond, Va., facility, in part because of falling U.S. cigarette sales. About 2,460 people worked at the Concord plant at the time.

Like others who worked at Philip Morris, Wehner hopes to rebound by using the company's tuition reimbursement to take classes and change careers. The plant ended production in July, about a year earlier than initially planned.

Between June 2007 and last month, more than 400 employees took nearly 1,600 courses that were reimbursed by the company, spokeswoman Paige Magness said.

Classes include art, catering, business administration, computer technology and massage therapy. They can be taken at trade schools, community colleges, universities or other institutions.

The company does not place a limit on the number of courses people may take, Magness said, and most hourly workers will be able to access those benefits for up to three years from the time of separation from the company.

Between January and June, Philip Morris spent $495,000 covering reimbursement for classes, according to Magness.

After Philip Morris announced its closing plans, Wehner started taking heating, air-conditioning and refrigeration repair classes at Rowan-Cabarrus Community College despite not knowing anything about the work. At Philip Morris, he applied flavoring to tobacco.

He also considered going into radiology but figured he could get his degree in the HVAC field sooner, in December 2010.

Wehner is a 31-year-old single discuss the amount. Thanks to addifather who lives in Charlotte and shares custody of his three children. He said he cuts back wherever he can to save money. That means more trips to the park or other free sites, as well as eating out less and looking for coupons before he and the kids go out to eat.

His 29 weeks of severance should last until February; he declined to discuss the amount. Thanks to additional savings, he doesn't think he'll need to get a full-time job until next April. But Wehner will try to pick up some retail work around the holidays this winter. He takes four classes now. One of his instructors, Fred Loving, said Wehner has a great attitude and strong work ethic. Philip Morris workers seem to have a lot of transferable skills, and they are flocking to HVAC classes, said Loving, lead instructor of RCCC's air conditioning, heating and refrigeration department.

Other popular courses with former Philip Morris workers are small business and entrepreneurship, biotech and medical programs, said Keri Allman-Young. She's the site director of the R3 Center, an adult career development center run by RCCC. The center has seen about 200 Philip Morris workers since the plant closed.

Wehner was among the group of workers who attended an R3 session in Concord soon after production ended. He said his experiences with the plant closing have taught him that keeping a positive attitude and looking to be prepared for other work can take you a long way.

Eventually, he wants to open his own HVAC company. "I want to be my own boss for the self-gratification, and it would be something my kids could look at and be proud of, and inspire them to be successful." he said.

Pain of unemployment can start with delayed pay

BY CLIFFORD M. MARKS

McClatchy Newspapers (MCT)

MIAMI — Five months had passed since her pay began to be delayed and 90 days since her health insurance

Still, Julia Cardenas was getting ready for a job that she says hadn't paid her at all in weeks.

That Monday morning after the July Fourth holiday, she says her boss called to say not to bother coming into work. Her job was gone. And her employer, C4 Direct Solutions in Pompano Beach, Fla., had shut down.

Cardenas is one of at least a dozen former employees at the administrative outsourcing firm who say they were owed thousands of dollars in back pay or uncovered medical bills when the company folded.

They're part of a growing group of jobless who endure a more protracted form of misery in today's tough economy: lapsed health coverage, bounced paychecks and finally, no pay at all.

U.S. Department of Labor spokesman Mike D'Aquino says the department doesn't collect data on the number of cases in which employees are owed wages. But, he says, such violations seem to be on the rise.

The department recently announced it would add 250 investigators nationwide over the next two years in an effort to step up enforcement.

Federal law affords employees strong protections to recover unpaid wages, and those who have sought legal counsel say they're optimistic about receiving back pay. But it becomes more difficult if a company declares bankruptcy or has no assets.

At a Fuddruckers in Wellington, Fla., this spring, roughly 40 employees were stiffed on two weeks of pay after owners shuttered the franchise and prepared to file for bankruptcy. They told The Palm Beach Post that there was simply no money to pay — devastating news for workers like Charles Obee, a cook with a fiancee and a 2 year-old son to support. Soon after his story appeared, the owners paid $12,000 in back wages.

But beyond putting pressure on an employer, workers can file suit. The Fair Labor Standards Act allows workers to sue for back pay to recover double the minimum wage for normal and overtime hours.

Miami labor attorney Kevin Mercer says for those who earn more than the minimum wage, the difference between minimum and promised wage can be recouped through a suit in state court. But he said the difference is often paid in the federal settlement to avoid further litigation.

Plaintiffs are also allowed to sue company owners to recover unpaid wages — a practice normally not allowed in civil cases. And the statute provides for "a reasonable attorney's fee" to be paid by employers found in violation.

Mercer, who has filed Fair Labor cases for four C4 Direct employees, says he has seen requests for representation in cases like this grow as the economy has weakened.

Former C4 Direct employees say the trouble began in February, when Friday paydays became Saturdays. Next, the funds dried up, checks began bouncing, and Monday mornings became a desperate race to the bank.

"On Monday, everyone would go to the Wachovia at 7:45 so they could be the first one to cash their check,' said Gilberta Fergile. "It would maybe be five that could, and the rest would have to get their money during the week."

By June, the employees say, the checks had simply stopped coming. Several eventually quit, tired of toiling for no apparent compensation. Those who stuck around saw the Pompano Beach location close in early July.

C4 owner Ron Thibeau says his company fell prey to delinquent clients and bank fraud that drained company accounts. He says he is working to liquidate the company and has already paid some employees back, but he adds it will take weeks to meet the obligations.

Thibeau says he is working with a lawyer to file bankruptcy and hopes to have everyone paid in the next couple

'The unfortunate thing is we are a sign of the times. I'm not the only company that is going through these things," Thibeau said. "I am still ... doing everything I can to finalize all of the payrolls."

Find out why the boss wants certain details

Star Tribune (Minneapolis) (MCT)

Question: I'm trying to change my boss's expectations about how much operational data I have top-of-mind. He (the CEO) asks about very micro points in meetings; if I spent time tracking that, I wouldn't have time for the important aspects of my job. Suggestions?

Answer: Taken to an extreme, a focus on detail can cause an executive to become a data parrot. But sufficient information is needed to ensure sound decisions. The key is finding a balance.

The outer game

Your first step is a conversation with your boss. Be non-confrontational and ready to listen. Plan what you'd like to know from him. For example, you might want his feedback on why he asks for so much detail. Be ready to share your perceptions and ways that you think the communication could be more effective.

Once you understand each other better, find ways to manage meetings more constructively. For example, if he feels in the dark about oper-

Think before making online recommendations

BY NIALA BOODHOO AND BRIDGET CAREY McClatchy Newspapers (MCT

For most people, the biggest initial roadblock to writing a LinkedIn recommendation is the energy and effort it requires.

But before you sit down to write a few breezy paragraphs about a colleague or employee, think about this: Does your company have a policy against it?

The world of professional recommendations, especially for those on the job hunt, became meaningless long ago because of fear of lawsuits. Basically, most places will simply confirm only that someone worked for the company — they're not allowed to say anything more for fear of being sued.

For example, at The Miami Herald, the company has a policy that says managers aren't allowed to write any type of recommendation — virtual or not — for an employee.

While the company's policy specifically mentions social networking sites like LinkedIn, attorney Joan Canny said the safe thing is to assume that if your company has a policy about recommendations, the same principles apply when it comes to even a casual reference online.

'Don't expect your employer to be sympathetic because it's a social network," said Canny, a labor and employment lawyer with the Miami office of Morgan Lewis & Bockius. Because an electronic reference lives online, it actually lasts longer and may have greater effect than a letter or a phone call, she points out.

Of course, this only applies to a negative reference — or especially to someone who you are leery of recommending. Canny thinks you're opening yourself up to potential legal problems if you knowingly write a positive recommendation for someone you know has done something wrong.

We checked with several labor lawyers, who all had different opinions as to how seriously you should take an online recommendation. But all agreed on this: Ultimately, whatever is written reflects on you, too.

If you get a request to write a recommendation, and you don't feel comfortable writing something, don't stress out — you can always

GLK350 has a small stature, but huge appeal

BY LARRY PRINTZ

The Virginian-Pilot (MCT)

As suburbanite appetites for sport utilities shrink along with gas budgets, many have turned to small SUVs for solace, not to mention transportation.

Joining an already-crowded field is the 2010 Mercedes-Benz GLK350, a small SUV body that rides atop the mechanical components of the compact C-Class sedan. The look is equal parts C-Class and Gelandewagen, the truck originally built for the German military. You might call it strong or purposeful or even brawny, but you wouldn't call it good looking. Yet, there's little mistaking its intention.

The GLK's style, while possessing a slight hint of menace, is writ small. The vehicle is about the same length as a Toyota Corolla, and that has its pluses and minuses. The vehicle's size makes it tidy for city driving, but that means rearseat room is limited. Cargo space is fair, although some may find the rear-most quarters too small for meaningful hauling.

The GLK employs the same driveline as the C-Class: a smooth 3.5liter double-overhead-cam V6 and seven-speed automatic transmission that routes power to the rear wheels or all four, if you opt for 4Matic all-wheel drive. The V6 has ample power on tap when you need it, and the speed builds to moving-violation territory in seconds.

The GLK's solid structure handles it all, soaking up potholes, expansion joints and other irregularities with ease. The steering is quicker than you might expect for an SUV. Body lean is minimal, and the cabin is quiet. If there's a downside, it's mileage. Given the GLK's size, you might expect better fuel consumption than 16 mpg in the city and 21 mpg on the highway.

The interior matches the exterior in its bold design and solid construction. The seats are extremely firm, and the switchgear solid. While nicely executed, the GLK has the sturdy feel of high-quality sporting goods rather than the supple luxury of a Lexus.

The GLK350 starts at $33,900. Add $2,000 for the all-wheel-drive version. But that price doesn't include all the necessary luxury gear. The test vehicle's heated seats cost $740. A $3,150 Premium Package had such goodies as a garage-door opener; auto-dimming mirrors; memory position for the driver's seat, steering column and mirrors; power liftgate; panorama sunroof; and Sirius satellite radio. A $3,350 Multimedia Package includes a rearview camera. Hardon/Kardon audio system, 6gigabyte hard drive and voice control for telephone, radio and navigation.

With other options — among them a $300 iPod interface — the GLK squeaked in just under $45,000 for what's arguably a fairly loaded vehicle. Go easy on the options, and you can have one for less. Still, that isn't a lot to pay for a vehicle wearing the three-pointed star on its grille.

Be a good sport

THE FIRST OFFICIAL DAY of fall is Sept. 22 this year. I love the fall. With it comes cooler weather, a chance to go home and see old high school friends at the Buckwheat Festival, new episodes of some of my favorite television shows, the start of a new 4-H Year, and of course, the football season.

My husband and I are huge Mountaineer fans and make it a point to attend every WVU home football game. I remember when I was a WVU student and how competitive I used to be. I wanted us to win every game and did not like any of our opponents, although I was never as vocal about that as some people. After a few years, I have grown out of that competitiveness. Although I get a little sad if we lose, I think about how much fun it is to be at a game, watch the band, cheer on the team, and spend time with my family.

One of the most valuable things we can teach youth is good sportsmanship and that principle truly starts with us.

If you are a parent and your child plays football in a league or even for their high school, I am sure that it is easy to get caught up in the game; however, if you begin to rant and rave about the other team and demonstrate bad behaviors, it seems that can easily rub off on your children.

Poor sports ruin the game for everyone. Good sports make playing fun, whether you win or you lose.

There have been very few studies relating to the link between spectators (which are usually parents and family members) and child behavior.

We do know that participating in a team sport can be a very positive and healthy component of youth development.

Being part of a team can promote good character, cultivate social relationships, improve mental and physical skills, extend peer networks, and create relationships with positive and caring adults. According to Kids Health, an organization devoted to improving the health of children, good sportsmanship is centered on respect and includes respect among teammates, opponents, coaches and officials.

Parents can help their kids understand that good sportsmanship includes both small gestures and heroic efforts.

It starts with something as simple as shaking hands with opponents before a game and includes acknowledging good plays made by others and accepting bad calls gracefully.

Displaying good sportsmanship isn't always easy: It can be tough to congratulate the opposing team after losing a close or important game. The kids who learn how to do it will benefit in many ways.

Kids who bully or taunt others on the playing field aren't likely to change their behavior when in the classroom or in social situations.

In the same way, a child who practices good sportsmanship is likely to carry the respect and appreciation of other people into every other aspect of life. Coaches and parents should encourage their players to have fun, play fair and concentrate on working as a team.

Soccer was instituted in my high school during my senior

I had never played soccer before, but thought it would be something fun and active to do. I can assure you that we did not have a winning season; however, we had lots of support.

Our coaches taught us how to appreciate one another and the sport. We looked forward to each practice and especially our games.

My mom and dad were always supportive and complimented my team on how well we did every game, even though we may not have won.

Overall, it was one of my best experiences from high school.

To this day, when I run into my coaches, I think of how much fun we all had and how we never were discouraged or disappoint-

I was proud to be a member of that team and we always practiced good sportsmanship and held ourselves up to high standards of respecting one another, opposing teams, our coaches and the officials.

Remember to set a good standard for your children. Teach your children that the game is about having fun and being a team, not always about winning or losing. Shout words of encouragement during games, not directions or negative statements. Stay positive and if you have a serious issue with the way games are being coached or played, discuss your concerns privately.

Have fun and enjoy the time while you can. I will be sure to demonstrate good sportsmanship when performing my role as a spectator at the next WVU football game and will have a great time at the game, whether we win or we lose.

Keeping cows at a health weight important for reproduction

THE BODY CONDITION of brood cows during the fall offers cattle producers one of the best indicators to determine the ability of their brood cows to get through the winter and have a healthy calf next spring. Reproductive failures in beef cows can be attributed to improper nutrition and thin body condition.

If you don't check the body condition of your cows at any other time of the year, be sure to do it now. The most economical time to alter body condition is after weaning and before cold weather hits. The cow's priorities for nutrition are maintenance, lactation, growth (young females) and reproduction. Consequently, reproduction is the first to go and the last to return in cases of inadequate nutrition.

The nutrition level pre-and post-calving affects the conception rate of the subsequent breeding seasons. Cows that are thin prior to calving will have a delayed onset of estrus. Thin cows after calving will have reduced conception rates

Body condition changes are a more reliable guide than body weight changes for evaluating the day-to-day nutrition status of a beef cow. Body condition scoring also has an advantage over body weight in that scales or corrals are not needed; it can be done with a clipboard while watching them graze.

During summer, the normal grazing program can be followed if cows appear to be in adequate body condition. However, thin cows during mid-summer will likely be thin cows at weaning.

When adequate amounts of low-quality forage are available, feeding a small amount of protein supplement during the late summer can efficiently increase cow body condition. A higher plane of nutrition may be required for cows with condition scores of four or less earlier than the last third of pregnancy. It will be easier to get weight gains in early fall before cold weather occurs, helping with insulation during the cold winter months.

At weaning time, the key to cow management in winter is to insure that moderate body condition is achieved before the onset of cold weather. Studies have shown it is very difficult to put weight on a thin cow during the cold conditions. Cows can make substantial recovery in body condition during the post-weaning period if temperatures are moderate and the forage is readily available. These conditions can be accomplished by weaning calves by early to mid-October. Weaning calves later than this may not be conducive to a "year-round" grazing program.

The Body Condition Scoring (BCS) System for Beef Cattle is as follows:

BCS 1. Emaciated: Starving and weak. No palpable fat detectable over back, hip bones or ribs. Tail-head and ribs project quite prominently.

BCS 2. Poor: Poor milk production and reproduction. Chances of rebreeding slim. Cow still emaciated but tail-head and ribs less prominent. Backbone is still rather sharp to the touch but some tissue exists along the back-

BCS 3. Thin: Poor milk production and reproduction. Ribs are still individually identifiable but not quite as sharp to the touch. Obvious palpable fat along the spine and over the tail-head with some tissue over top portion of the bones.

BCS 4. Borderline: Reproduction bordering on inadequate. Individual ribs no longer visually obvious. Individual spines can be identified on palpation but fell rounded rather than sharp. Some fat cover over ribs and hip

BCS 5. Moderate: Minimum necessary for efficient rebreeding and good milk production. Cow has generally good overall appearance. Upon palpation, fat cover over ribs feels spongy and area on either side of tail-head now has palpable fat cover.

BCS 6. Optimum: Milk production and rebreeding very acceptable. Firm pressure now has to be applied to feel spinous processes. A high degree of fat is palpable over ribs and around tail-head.

BCS 7. Good: Maximum condition needed for efficient reproduction. Cow appears fleshy and obviously carries considerable fat. Very spongy fat cover over ribs and around tail-head. Some fat around vulva and crotch.

BCS 8. Fat: Very fleshy, no advantage in having cow in this condition. Backbone almost impossible to palpate. Cow has larger fat deposits over ribs, around tail-head and below vulva.

BCS 9. Extremely Fat: The fat may cause calving problems. Cow extremely wasty and patchy. Tailhead and hips buried in fatty tissue. Bone structure no longer visible and barely palpable. Animal's mobility may be impaired by fat deposits.

herd and to learn about how to properly score animals, contact your local county extension agent.

Garden tips

Lawns or bare spots reseeded with grass now will have a chance to get established before winter sets in. Water often and mulch.

You can still enjoy garden flowers indoors. Sow these annuals inside: sweet alyssum, dwarf marigold, browallia, ageratum and nasturtium. Grow them in a moderately cool (60 degrees F), sunny window.

Nutrition tip

Paula Strawder, WVU Extension Service Nutrition and Health Team, said that a great way to track your nutrition is by keeping a food diary. A food diary is a record of what and how much you eat at each meal and the calories involved. You also should record your liquid intake, especially the amount of water you drink. Keep track of the activities that affect your eating. The food diary will help you to control your calorie intake and to pinpoint the activities that may trigger your eating.

MOVIES FROM TV SHOWS

'Batman" (1966): As Gotham City's dynamic duo of crime fighters, Adam West and Burt Ward transferred to the big screen - along with several of their show's villains and the "WHAM!," "POW!" and "BAM!" displays - while the series was still running.

"The Untouchables" (1987): Kevin Costner succeeded Robert Stack, and became a star, as Eliot Ness in the saga of the treasury agent's war on mobster Al Capone (Robert De Niro).

"Sex and the City: The Movie" (2008): Much like four or five episodes strung together, the feature-film sequel stayed true to the HBO series - with Sarah Jessica Parker, Cynthia Nixon, Kristin Davis and Kim Cattrall back as the four fabulous female friends.

THE LAST TRUCK: CLOSING OF A GM PLANT

Monday at 9 p.m. on (HBO)

After General Motors announces the closing of an assembly plant in Moraine, Ohio, the workers who have been abruptly put out of work reminisce about their time on the factory line in this poignant documentary from Ohio filmmakers Steven Bognar and Julia Reichert. The film puts a human face on the steep decline of industry in the United States.

THE MENTALIST

Tuesday at 10 p.m. on 2 5 7

There are some things you take for granted in life. You go up onstage to assist a magician, the odds are good vou're going to wind up clucking like a chicken. It could be worse, as Patrick (Simon Baker) and the CBI team discover as they pursue a mastermind who hypnotizes people and tells them whom to kill. Robin Tunney, Tim Kang and Owain Yeoman also star in "Russet Pota-

THE REAL HOUSEWIVES OF ATLANTA

Thursday at 10 p.m. on (BRAVO)

Lisa debuts Closet Freak, her clothing line, while Sheree's fashion line, She By Sheree, is put on hold yet again. NeNe gets tough on Brice, her college dropout son. Kandi calls in a favor to turn "Tardy for the Party" into a song for Kim and NeNe. Kim throws a wig party in the new episode "Throwing Shade."

TOP CHEF: LAS VEGAS Wednesday at 10 p.m. on (BRAVO) In a fine dining challenge held at the restaurant of

Joel Robuchon, the contestants pair up to create the perfect French dish for some of France's most acclaimed chefs, including Robuchon, Daniel Boulud, Hubert Keller, Laurent Tourondel and Jean Joho. Padma Lakshmi hosts the new episode "Vivre Las Vegas."

"CRANK: HIGH VOLTAGE"

As if he didn't have enough trouble staying alive the first time, the hit man played by Jason Statham faces new peril in this intentionally frantic sequel. The assassin is given an artificial heart that needs regular recharging to keep operating; he encounters numerous, consistently violent hurdles along the path to reclaiming his own ticker. Amy Smart, Dwight Yoakam and Efren Ramirez also reprise their roles from the original "Crank"; Clifton Collins Jr. plays the main villain in the thriller, which also features one of the final appearances by David Carradine. ★★ (R: AS, N, P, GV) (Álso on Blu-ray)

"DANCE FLICK"

In the tradition of such spoofs as "Scary Movie" and "Date Movie," recent movie musicals get sent up by several members of the Wayans family in this parody, which is sometimes crude but also quite funny at points. Two dancers (Damon Wayans Jr., Shoshanna Bush) merge their talents in a big competition – and themes from "High School Musical," "Step Up," "Save the Last Dance," etc., get demolished in the process. David Alan Grier and Chris Elliott also appear. $\star\star\star$ (PG-13 and unrated versions: AS, P, V) (Also on Blu-ray)

"THE OFFICE: SEASON FIVE"

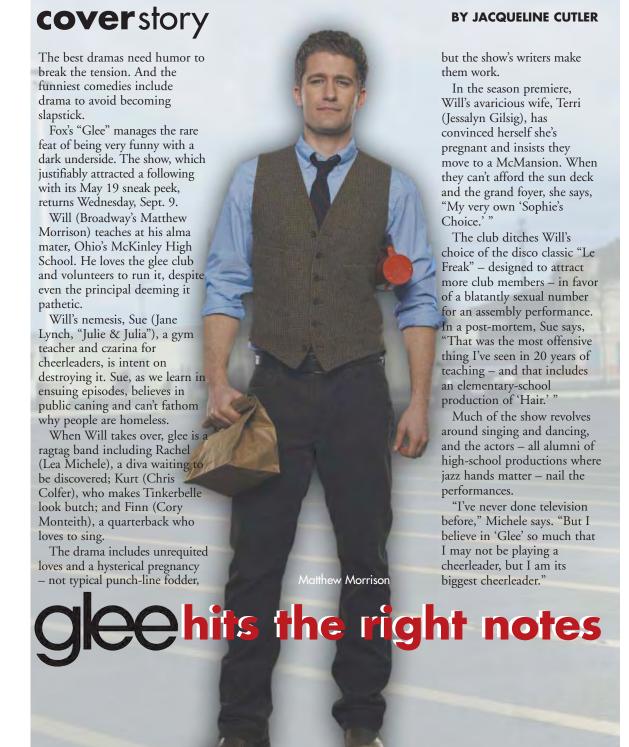

Life goes on at Dunder Mifflin in the acclaimed NBC sitcom, but one episode that originally followed last February's Super Bowl telecast features more famous faces than usual - namely, Jessica Alba, Jack Black and Cloris Leachman. In other developments, Jim's (John Krasinski) proposal to Pam (Jenna Fischer) generates unforeseen stress when she goes off to New York for professional reasons, and Michael (Steve Carell) begins a new romance, to Jan's (Melora Hardin) dismay.  (Not rated: AS, P) (Also on Blu-ray)

"THE NO. 1 LADIES" DETECTIVE AGENCY"

Alexander McCall Smith's novels about a self-styled Botswana sleuth, nicely played by singer Jill Scott, fueled this HBO series. Made on location, the showwhich included the late filmmakers Anthony Minghella and Sydney Pollack among its producers - follows private detectives Mma Ramotswe (Scott) and Mma Grace Makutsi (Anika Noni Rose, "Dreamgirls") through cases both universal and specific to the locale, as with a story about deaths linked to ivory smuggling. DVD extras: three "making-of" documentaries; "Author's Diary." ★★★ (Not rated: AS, P, V)

KERRY COLLINS

BIRTHPLACE: Lebanon, Pa. BIRTH DATE: Dec. 30, 1972 POSITION: Quarterback HEIGHT: 6 feet 5 inches

WEIGHT: 245

Nashville, Tenn., is the perfect football home for Kerry Collins.

On and off the field, the life of the Tennessee Titans quarterback – the highs of being a high-school phenom, college star, top NFL draft pick and Super Bowl starter, to the lows of struggling with alcoholism, being labeled a racist and falling from first string to the unemployment line - has all the ingredients for a chart-topping country hit. Collins, in fact, may have already penned the lyrics.

Since arriving in Tennessee as the backup to Vince Young in 2006, Collins has discovered a love for country music and a talent for writing. He's even co-written some material with a couple of big-time Nashville songwriters who believe Collins has a knack for the craft. First and foremost, though, the 36-year-old veteran of 15 NFL seasons wants to author a storybook chapter for the twilight of his career by quarterbacking the Titans to a Super Bowl championship.

The cougar of 'Melrose Place'

In the '90s, "Melrose Place" was scandalous enough. Imagine how it would be now.

Actually, you don't have to. The success of last season's "90210" update has inspired The CW to dip back into the catalog of shows first made for Fox by the late televisionproducing mogul Aaron Spelling, so "Melrose Place" reopens in a new version that debuts Tuesday, Sept. 8.

As with "90210," some familiar faces are back, though new tenants of the Los Angeles apartment complex get equal time. Laura Leighton is back as ever-scheming Sydney Andrews, now the building's landlady ... and the cougar who has her claws in notably younger resident David (Shaun Sipos), whose father happens to be the original show's Dr. Michael Mancini (played by returnee Thomas Calabro).

Among others now paying rent at Melrose Place: publicist Ella (Katie Cassidy), who has run afoul of Sydney; sous-chef Auggie (Colin Egglesfield), who also counts Sydney as an ex-friend; financially challenged medical student Lauren (Stephanie Jacobsen); and romantically involved couple Riley and Jonah (Jessica Lucas, Michael Rady).

Joining the complex is Violet (actress-singer Ashlee Simpson-Wentz), whose arrival coincides with a discovery that shakes not only her but all her new neighbors: a corpse in the Melrose Place pool, sparking a mystery that will reverberate through at least the first several episodes of the revival.

"We are huge fans of the original," says executive producer Todd Slavkin, who left The CW's "Smallville" with longtime creative partner Darren Swimmer to make the new

"When we set out to do our version of 'Melrose Place,' we wanted to pay tribute to the old show, but really create our own show with our own group of characters inspired by the experiences Darren and I have had. We grew up in Los Angeles and have known each other since sixth grade, so this city is special to us."

That said, Slavkin adds that Melrose Place is – at least in television terms – "definitely still the most scandalous address in West Hollywood. That hasn't changed."

Insurance can be found in Leighton's involvement, and the actress welcomes the chance to revisit the part of Sydney. She reports the producers offered "an approach to the show that incorporated my character in a very unique way, I had no expectation, going in, of what it was going to be. I only knew that playing Sydney the first time was such fun, there was no downside to coming back to play her again.

Calabro also was open to tackling Michael in a fresh way, though he muses, "Like Laura, I wasn't looking forward to anything specific, but I was more interested in the ideas they had to bring the show forward. I was very excited to find out that (Michael) had even more money than before, and ultimate power. If he continues to be an evildoer, that bodes well for his ability to do so."

Unfortunately, Amy Adams isn't, in the case of "Julie & Julia." She had better fortune the first time she was a Streep co-star in "Doubt," but she also didn't have to do heavy lifting. This time, Adams is as responsible as Streep for the result, which is a souffle that doesn't rise entirely.

'Idol' curiosity about a home video release

Q: Will this year's "American Idol" be on DVD? -Cynthia Hodo, San Antonio

A: If you're talking about a fullseason release, likely not, and we've heard nothing at this writing about any sort of condensed compilation of the past season or even the finale which pitted Adam Lambert against eventual winner Kris Brown – being issued on disc. As much of a ratings phenomenon as the show has been for Fox, there hasn't been much in the way of video releases of it since its earliest years.

Q: Can you please tell us when "Sons of Anarchy" will be coming back for a second season? -Debbie Cross, Fellsmere, Fla.

A: Very, very shortly. FX launches season two of the Ron Perlman-starring drama series about a motorcycle club this Tuesday, Sept. 8.

Send questions of general interest via e-mail to typipeline@tribune.com. Writers must include their names, cities and states. Personal replies cannot be sent.

'The Late Late Show With Craig Ferguson'

By Jay Bobbin

Q: Do you have a theory about your approach to the comedy on "The Late Late Show With Craig Ferguson"?

A: If it doesn't work, that's interesting. I think that about the show - that if we do (something) and it doesn't work, it goes in anyway. What's more interesting is to watch a sweaty vaudevillian try to get out of a situation like that, rather than cut it and make it pristine.

I don't have the patience for that, and I would prefer as a viewer to watch the mistakes. I am my own blooper reel as it happens.

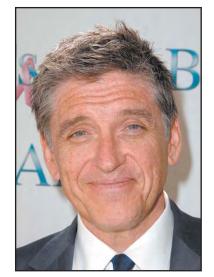

Q: What are your goals for the show as it continues?

A: I think my show is probably closer to "Peewee's Playhouse" than anything else I've seen, and that is an aspiration. That's a great show. I don't know where we are, but wherever we are, we won't be that next week. It's important to keep moving.

Q: Why did you decide to become an American citizen last year?

A: It's very important to me as an immigrant, and as someone who had to fill out a lot of forms and pass a test to be an American. There is a strangeness to leaving your past and making the new country your present.

Craig Ferguson

Unlike most dancers, Mary Murphy came to dance relatively late.

The boisterous judge on Fox's "So You Think You Can Dance" grew up in Canal Fulton, Ohio. "I was that Huckleberry Mary," she says from Las Vegas, preparing for the show's seventh season, which launches Wednesday, Sept. 9. "I made rafts and went muskrat hunting."

"I had a sports background – basketball, track and field," she says. "The 400-meter was my main race. It is a different path than most

In high school, Murphy was a majorette, played first chair bassoon and initially followed the career path of her dad, a teacher. Murphy married at 19. After graduating from Ohio University, she sought a temp job at a Washington, D.C., dance studio.

Despite a lack of training, Murphy learned ballroom easily. The studio owner asked if she wanted to attend the nationals at Manhattan's Waldorf-Astoria.

"They opened up these magnificent doors, and I stepped inside this glamorous world, and everyone was dressed up in glamorous dresses and tuxedos, and the three-tiered balcony, crystal chandeliers, dancers with fancy costumes and feathers. I am not from that background, and I didn't see myself going to New York City. I was too frightened. It was like a lightning bolt struck me through every cell in my body and my heart. I want to be the U.S. champion. I am going to go back to D.C. and chart my course."

Her father was furious; her first husband, she says, "did not allow" her to dance. When he traveled for business, she danced.

"I found my salvation in dancing," Murphy says.

She won championships, opened a studio and brought her infectious laugh to TV.

Wherever I go around the world," Murphy says, "people want to bust a move in front of me. How great is that?"

Family: Three brothers

Education: Physical education

Kudos: Won ballroom dance competitions, including U.S. Open American Nine Dance

> Her philosophy as a judge: "I have taken lessons and have taken class with people who beat you down and are negative," she says. "When I got beaten down, it just beats me down, and I don't blossom from that. I teach the way I want to be taught."

Explaining the laugh: "I was always getting in trouble for my laughter," in school, she says. "I would start laughing and get somebody in trouble, and before long we were screaming laughing."

what they dvr

Laura Leighton

"My husband (Leighton's former 'Melrose Place' co-star Doug Savant, now of 'Desperate Housewives') is in charge of the TiVo, and it's usually a baseball game that he doesn't want to miss. We'll also record his show when it's on, because we can't make the commitment to sit down on Sunday nights. We look forward to watching it together.

Barry Manilow

"I record 'Breaking Bad,' which is beyond brilliant, with that writing and directing - and there's an armful of wonderful things on A&E and HBO and Showtime that I can't get enough of."

"I don't get to watch much TV. 'Entourage,' I really like it. I watch every night before I go to sleep. It's my release for my brain. I watch 'Friends,' 'Will & Grace,' and 'Sex and the City.' And it takes my mind off life."

Austin Powers: The Spy Who Shagged Me 7 p.m. on WTBS

The ultrahip 1960s spy (Mike Myers) returns to his own place and time to pursue the sinister Dr. Evil in this often hysterical 1999 sequel. Heather Graham is a welcome addition as CIA operative Felicity Shagwell, but the real show stealer is Dr. Evil's clone, Mini-Me (Verne Troyer). Besides playing Powers and Evil, Myers also appears as a grossly overweight Scot. Seth Green, Michael York and Robert Wagner also return.

NASCAR Racing 7:30 p.m. on 4

For drivers on the Chase for the Sprint Cup bubble, tonight's Chevy Rock & Roll 400 is do or die. It's the last race before the 10-race playoffs begin, so you can be certain Mark Martin, Matt Kenseth, Clint Bowyer and Brian Vickers will be going all out to move into the top 12 in points. Of course, Jimmie Johnson needed no such help last year when he held off Tony Stewart in the closing laps for the win and the No. 3 seed in the Chase.

The Devil Wears Prada 8 p.m. on FX

You thought your boss was difficult? A recent college graduate (Anne Hathaway) gets a crash course in landing arguably the most demanding boss on Earth (Meryl Streep, who plays it to the hilt) at a fashion magazine in this enjoyable 2006 comedy, adapted from Lauren Weisberger's best-seller. The dismayed newcomer's job is made even tougher by a competitive fellow assistant (Emily Blunt). Stanley Tucci and Simon Baker also star.

The Long, Hot Summer 8 p.m. on TCM

Director Martin Ritt's 1957 adaptation of the William Faulkner novel stars real-life lovebirds Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward as a drifter and the prim schoolteacher whose world he rocks when he arrives in her Southern town. Orson Welles plays her tycoon father; Anthony Franciosa, Lee Remick and Angela Lansbury also star.

Law & Order 9 p.m. on 🗐 🛍 😢

Detectives Lupo and Bernard (Jeremy Sisto, Anthony Anderson) suspect a serial killer is behind the murders of three homeless men. but a distinctive pair of roller skates on one of the victims soon leads them to believe the crimes may have been the work of a copycat. S. Epatha Merkerson and Linus Roache also star in "Skate or Die."

Law & Order: Special Victims Unit 10 p.m. on 9 11 12

While hearing a harassment case involving a woman (guest star Sprague Grayden, "Jericho") and her ex-boyfriend, Judge Koehler (guest star Alan Dale, "Ugly Betty") asks Benson and Stabler (Mariska Hargitay, Chrisopher Meloni) to question a convicted serial killer about the location of his son's body. Richard Belzer and Stephanie March also star in "Liberties."
